

Joany USS-4

Young

O. 283j.

OC

G. L. angl. p. 215.

THE WORKS
OF THE AUTHOR
OF THE NIGHT-THOUGHTS.

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

REVISED and CORRECTED by Himself.

VOL. IV.

LONDON:

Printed for D. BROWNE, C. HITCH and L. HAWES, J. HODGES,
H. LINTOT, A. MILLAR, J. and R. TONSON,
J. RIVINGTON, C. CORBET, J. RIVINGTON and J. FLETCHER, J. JACKSON, and R. and J. DODSLEY.

MDCCLVII.

LONDON:

Printed by D. Browne, C. Hinton and L. Hawes, J. Henson,
H. Lintot, A. Millar, J. and R. Tonson,
J. Richardson, C. Corbett, J. Rivington and J. Trenchard, J. Jackson, and R. and J. Toms.

MDCCLXXII.

NIGHT the NINTH and LAST.

THE

CONSOLATION.

VOL. IV.

B

THE NIGHT AND LAST

CONJURATION.

B

Vol. IV.

NIGHT the NINTH and LAST.

THE CONSOLATION.

Containing, among other Things,

- I. A Moral Survey of the Nocturnal Heavens.
- II. A Night-ADDRESS to the DEITY.

Humbly Inscribed to His GRACE

The DUKE of NEWCASTLE,

One of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

—Fatis contraria fata rependens. VIRG.

AS when a traveller, a long day past
In painful search of what he cannot find,
At night's approach, content with the next cot,
There ruminates, a while, his labour lost ;
Then cheers his heart with what his fate affords,
And chants his sonnet to deceive the time,
Till the due season calls him to repose :
Thus I, long-travell'd in the ways of men,
And dancing, with the rest, the giddy maze,

Where disappointment smiles at hope's career ;
Warn'd by the languor of life's evening ray,
At length have hous'd me in an humble shed ;
Where, future wand'ring banish'd from my thought,
And waiting, patient, the sweet hour of rest,
I chase the moments with a serious song.

Song sooths our pains ; and age has pains to sooth.

When age, care, crime, and friends embrac'd at heart,
Torn from my bleeding breast, and death's dark shade,
Which hovers o'er me, quench th' ethereal fire ;
Canst thou, O Night ! indulge one labour more ?
One labour more indulge ! then sleep, my strain !
Till, haply, wak'd by RAPHAEL's golden lyre,
Where night, death, age, care, crime, and sorrow, cease ;
To bear a part in everlasting lays ;
Tho' far, far higher set, in aim, I trust,
Symphonious to this humble prelude here.

Has not the muse asserted pleasures pure,
Like those above ; exploding other joys ?
Weigh what was urg'd, LORENZO ! fairly weigh ;
And tell me, hast thou cause to triumph still ?
I think, thou wilt forbear a boast so bold.

But if, beneath the favour of mistake,
Thy smile's sincere ; not more sincere can be LORENZO's smile, than my compassion for him.
The sick in body call for aid ; the sick
In mind are covetous of more disease ;
And when at worst, they dream themselves quite well.
To know ourselves diseas'd, is half our cure.
When nature's blush by custom is wip'd off,
And conscience, deaden'd by repeated strokes,

Has

Has into manners naturaliz'd our crimes ;
The curse of curses is, our curse to love ;
To triumph in the blackness of our guilt
(As Indians glory in the deepest jet)
And throw aside our senses with our peace.

But, grant no guilt, no shame, no least alloy ;
Grant joy and glory quite unfully'd shone ;
Yet, still, it ill deserves LORENZO's heart.
No joy, no glory, glitters in thy sight,
But, thro' the thin partition of an hour,
I see its fables wove by destiny ;
And that in sorrow bury'd ; this, in shame ;
While howling furies ring the dolefull knell ;
And conscience, now so soft thou scarce canst hear
Her whisper, echoes her eternal peal.

Where, the prime actors of the last year's scene ;
Their port so proud, their buskin, and their plume ?
How many sleep, who kept the world awake
With lustre, and with noise ! has death proclaim'd
A truce, and hung his fated lance on high ?
'Tis brandish'd still ; nor shall the present year
Be more tenacious of her human leaf,
Or spread of feeble life a thinner fail.

But needless monuments to wake the thought ;
Life's gayest scenes speak man's mortality ;
Tho' in a style more florid, full as plain,
As mausoleums, pyramids, and tombs.
What are our noblest ornaments, but deaths
Turn'd flatterers of life, in paint, or marble,
The well-stain'd canvas, or the featur'd stone ?

Our fathers grace, or rather haunt, the scene.

Joy peoples her pavilion from the dead.

“ Protest diversions! cannot these escape ?”—

Far from it: These present us with a shroud;

And talk of death, like garlands o’er a grave.

As some bold plunderers, for bury’d wealth,

We ransack tombs for pastime; from the dust

Call up the sleeping hero; bid him tread

The scene for our amusement: how like Gods

We sit; and, wrapt in immortality,

Shed gen’rous tears on wretches born to die;

Their fate deploring, to forget our own!

What, all the pomps and triumphs of our lives,

But legacies in blossom? our lean soil,

Luxuriant grown, and rank in vanities,

From friends interr’d beneath; a rich manure!

Like other worms, we banquet on the dead;

Like other worms, shall we crawl on, nor know

Our present frailties, or approaching fate?

LORENZO! such the glories of the world!

What is the world itself? Thy world?—a grave.

Where is the dust that has not been alive?

The spade, the plough, disturb our ancestors;

From human mould we reap our daily bread.

The globe around earth’s hollow surface shakes,

And is the cieling of her sleeping sons.

O’er devastation we blind revels keep;

Whole bury’d towns support the dancer’s heel.

The moist of human frame the sun exhales;

Winds scatter thro’ the mighty void the dry;

Earth

The CONSOLATION.

7

Earth repossesses part of what she gave,
And the freed spirit mounts on wings of fire ;
Each element partakes our scatter'd spoils ;
As nature, wide, our ruins spread ; man's death
Inhabits all things, but the thought of man.

Nor man alone ; his breathing bust expires,
His tomb is mortal ; empires die : Where, now,
The Roman ? Greek ? They stalk, an empty name !
Yet few regard them in this useful light ;
Tho' half our learning is their epitaph.
When down thy vale, unlock'd by midnight thought,
That loves to wander in thy sunless realms,
O death ! I stretch my view ; what visions rise !
What triumphs ! toils imperial ! arts divine !
In wither'd laurels glide before my sight !
What lengths of far fam'd ages, billow'd high
With human agitation, roll along
In unsubstantial images of air !
The melancholy ghosts of dead renown,
Whisp'ring faint echoes of the world's applause,
With penitential aspect, as they pass,
All point at earth, and hiss at human pride,
The wisdom of the wise, and prancings of the great.

But, O LORENZO ! far the rest above,
Of ghastly nature, and enormous size,
One form assaults my sight, and chills my blood,
And shakes my frame. Of one departed world
I see the mighty shadow : oozy wreath
And dismal sea-weed crown her ; o'er her urn
Reclin'd, she weeps her desolated realms,

8 The CONSOLATION. Night 9.

And bloated sons ; and, weeping, prophecies
Another's dissolution, soon, in flames.

But, like CASSANDRA, prophecies in vain ;
 In vain, to many, not, I trust, to thee.

For, know'st thou not, or art thou loth to know,
 The great decree, the counsel of the skies ?

Deluge and conflagration, dreadful powers !

Prime ministers of vengeance ! chain'd in caves

Distinct, apart the giant furies roar ;

Apart ; or, such their horrid rage for ruin,

In mutual conflict would they rise, and wage

Eternal war, till one was quite devour'd.

But not for this, ordain'd their boundless rage :

When heav'n's inferior instruments of wrath,

War, famine, pestilence, are found too weak

To scourge a world for her enormous crimes,

These are let loose, alternate : Down they rush,

Swift and tempestuous, from th' eternal throne,

With irresistible commission arm'd,

The world, in vain corrected, to destroy,

And ease creation of the shocking scene.

Seest thou, LORENZO ! what depends on man ?

The fate of nature ; as for man, her birth.

Earth's actors change earth's transitory scenes,

And make creation groan with human guilt.

How must it groan, in a new deluge whelm'd,

But not of waters ! At the destin'd hour,

By the loud trumpet summon'd to the charge,

See, all the formidable sons of fire,

Eruptions, earthquakes, comets, lightnings, play

Their

Their various engines ; all at once disgorge
Their blazing magazines ; and take, by storm,
This poor terrestrial citadel of man.

Amazing period ! when each mountain-height
Out-burns Vesuvius ; rocks eternal pour
Their melted mafs, as rivers once they pour'd ;
Stars rush ; and final ruin fiercely drives
Her ploughshare o'er creation !—while aloft,
More than astonishment ! if more can be !
Far other firmament than e'er was seen,
Than e'er was thought by man ! far other stars !
Stars animate, that govern these of fire ;
Far other sun !—A sun, O how unlike
The Babe at Bethlem ! how unlike the Man
That groan'd on Calvary !—Yet He it is ;
That Man of sorrows ! O how chang'd ! what pomp !
In grandeur terrible, all Heav'n descends !
And Gods, ambitious, triumph in his train.
A swift archangel, with his golden wing,
As blots and clouds, that darken and disgrace
The scene divine, sweeps stars and suns aside.
And now, all dross remov'd, heav'n's own pure day,
Full on the confines of our æther, flames.
While (dreadful contrast !) far, how far beneath !
Hell, bursting, belches forth her blazing seas,
And storms sulphureous ; her voracious jaws
Expanding wide, and roaring for her prey.

LORENZO ! welcome to this scene ; the last
In nature's course ; the first in wisdom's thought.
This strikes, if aught can strike thee ; this awakes

The most supine ; this snatches man from death.
 Rouse, rouse, LORENZO, then, and follow me,
 Where truth, the most momentous man can hear,
 Loud calls my soul, and ardor wings her flight.
 I find my inspiration in my theme ;
 The grandeur of my subject is my muse.

At midnight, when mankind is wrapt in peace,
 And worldly fancy feeds on golden dreams ;
 To give more dread to man's most dreadful hour,
 At midnight, 'tis presum'd, this pomp will burst
 From tenfold darkness ; sudden, as the spark
 From smitten steel ; from nitrous grain, the blaze.
 Man, starting from his couch, shall sleep no more !
 The day is broke, which never more shall close !
 Above, around, beneath, amazement all !
 Terror and glory join'd in their extremes !
 Our G O D in grandeur, and our world on fire !
 All nature struggling in the pangs of death !
 Dost thou not hear her ? Dost thou not deplore
 Her strong convulsions, and her final groan ?
 Where are we now ? ah me ! the ground is gone,
 On which we stood, LORENZO ! while thou may'st,
 Provide more firm support, or sink for ever !
 Where ? how ? from whence ? vain hope ! it is too late !
 Where, where, for shelter shall the guilty fly,
 When consternation turns the good man pale ?

Great day ! for which all other days were made ;
 For which earth rose from chaos, man from earth ;
 And an eternity, the date of Gods,
 Descended on poor earth-created man !

Great

Great day of dread, decision, and despair!
 At thought of thee each sublunary with
 Lets go its eager grasp, and drops the world;
 And catches at each reed of hope in heaven.
 At thought of thee!—and art thou absent then?
 LORENZO! no; 'tis here; it is begun;—
 Already is begun the grand assize,
 In thee, in all: Deputed conscience scales
 The dread tribunal, and forestalls our doom;
 Forestalls; and, by forestalling, proves it sure.
 Why on himself should man void judgment pass?
 Is idle nature laughing at her sons?
 Who conscience sent, her sentence will support,
 And G O D above assert that G o d in man.

Thrice happy they! that enter now the court
 Heav'n opens in their bosoms: But, how rare,
 Ah me! that magnanimity, how rare!
 What hero, like the man who stands himself;
 Who dares to meet his naked heart alone;
 Who hears, intrepid, the full charge it brings,
 Resolv'd to silence future murmurs there?
 The coward flies; and, flying, is undone.
 (Art thou a coward? no;) The coward flies;
 Thinks, but thinks slightly; asks, but fears to know;
 Asks, "What is truth?" with PILATE; and retires;
 Dissolves the court, and mingles with the throng;
 Asylum sad! from reason, hope, and heav'n!

Shall all, but man, look out with ardent eye,
 For that great day, which was ordain'd for man?
 O day of consummation! mark supreme

(If men are wise) of human thought! nor least,
Or in the fight of angels, or their KING!
Angels, whose radiant circles, height o'er height,
Order o'er order, rising, blaze o'er blaze,
As in a theatre, furround this scene,
Intent on man, and anxious for his fate.

Angels look out for thee; for thee, their LORD,
To vindicate his glory; and for thee,
Creation universal calls aloud,
To dis-involve the moral world, and give
To nature's renovation brighter charms.

Shall man alone, whose fate, whose final fate,
Hangs on that hour, exclude it from his thought?
I think of nothing else; I see! I feel it!
All nature, like an earthquake, trembling round!
All Deities, like summer's swarms, on wing!
All basking in the full meridian blaze!
I see the JUDGE inthron'd! the flaming guard!
The volume open'd! open'd ev'ry heart!
A sun-beam pointing out each secret thought!
No patron! intercessor none! now past
The sweet, the clement, mediatorial hour!
For guilt no plea! to pain, no pause! no bound!
Inexorable, all! and all, extreme!

Nor man alone; the foe of God and man,
From his dark den, blaspheming, drags his chain,
And rears his brazen front, with thunder scarr'd;
Receives his sentence, and begins his hell.
All vengeance past, now, seems abundant grace:

Like

Like meteors in a stormy sky, how roll
His baleful eyes ! he curses whom he dreads ;
And deems it the first moment of his fall.

'Tis present to my thought !—and yet where is it ?
Angels can't tell me ; angels cannot guess
The period ; from created beings lock'd
In darkness. But the process, and the place,
Are less obscure ; for these may man inquire.
Say, thou great close of human hopes and fears !
Great key of hearts ! great finisher of fates !
Great end ! and great beginning ! say, Where art thou ?
Art thou in time, or in eternity ?
Nor in eternity, nor time, I find thee.
These, as two monarchs, on their borders meet,
(Monarchs of all elaps'd, or unarriv'd !)
As in debate, how best their pow'rs ally'd,
May swell the grandeur, or discharge the wrath,
Of H I M, whom both their monarchies obey.

Time, this fast fabric for him built (and doom'd
With him to fall) now bursting o'er his head ;
His lamp, the sun, extinguish'd ; from beneath
The frown of hideous darkness, calls his sons
From their long slumber ; from earth's heaving womb,
To second birth ! contemporary throng !
Rous'd at One call, upstarting from One bed,
Prest in One croud, appall'd with One amaze,
He turns them o'er, Eternity ! to thee.
Then (as a king depos'd disdains to live)
He falls on his own scythe ; nor falls alone ;
His greatest foe falls with him ; Time, and he
Who murder'd all time's offspring, Death, expire.

TIME

TIME was! ETERNITY now reigns alone!
 Aweful Eternity! offended queen!
 And her resentment to mankind, how just!
 With kind intent, soliciting access,
 How often has she knock'd at human hearts!
 Rich to repay their hospitality,
 How often call'd! and with the voice of GOD!
 Yet bore repulse, excluded as a cheat!
 A dream! while foulest foes found welcome there!
 A dream, a cheat, now, all things, but her smile.

For, lo! her twice ten thousand gates thrown wide,
 As thrice from Indus to the frozen pole,
 With banners, streaming as the comet's blaze,
 And clarions, louder than the deep in storms,
 Sonorous as immortal breath can blow,
 Pour forth their myriads, potentates, and powers,
 Of light, of darkness; in a middle field,
 Wide, as creation! populous, as wide!
 A neutral region! there to mark th' event
 Of that great drama, whose preceding scenes
 Detain'd them close spectators, thro' a length
 Of ages, rip'ning to this grand result;
 Ages, as yet unnumber'd, but by GOD;
 Who now, pronouncing sentence, vindicates
 The rights of virtue, and his own renown.

ETERNITY, the various sentence past,
 Assigns the sever'd throng distinct abodes,
 Sulphureous, or ambrosial: What ensues?
 The deed predominant! the deed of deeds!
 Which makes a hell of hell, a heav'n of heav'n.

The Goddeſs, with determin'd aſpect, turns
Her adamantine key's enormous ſize
Thro' deſtiny's inextricable wards,
Deep driving ev'ry bolt, on both their fates.
Then, from the cryſtal battlements of heaven,
Down, down, ſhe hurls it thro' the dark profound,
'Ten thouſand thouſand fathom; there to ruſt,
And ne'er unlock her reſolution more.
The deep reſounds, and hell, thro' all her glooms,
Returns, in groans, the melancholy roar.

O how unlike the chorus of the ſkies !
O how unlike thoſe ſhouts of joy, that ſhake
The whole ethereal ! how the concave rings !
Nor ſtrange ! when deities their voice exalt ;
And louder far, than when creation roſe,
To ſee creation's godlike aim, and end,
So well accompliſh'd ! ſo divinely clos'd !
To ſee the mighty dramatiſt's laſt act
(As meet) in glory riſing o'er the reſt.
No fanſy'd G O D, a G O D, indeed, deſcends,
To ſolve all knots ; to ſtrike the moral home ;
To throw full day on darkeſt ſcenes of time ;
To clear, commend, exalt, and crown the whole.
Hence, in one peal of loud, eternal praiſe,
The charm'd ſpectators thunder their applauſe ;
And the vaſt void beyond, applauſe reſounds.

WHAT THEN AM I ?—

Amidſt applauding worlds,
And worlds celeftial, is there found on earth,
A peeviſh, diſſonant, rebellious ſtring,

Which

Which jars in the grand chorus, and complains?
Censure on thee, LORENZO! I suspend,
 And turn it on myself; how greatly due!
 All, all is right; by GOD ordain'd or done;
 And who, but GOD, resum'd the friends He gave?
 And have I been complaining, then, so long?
Complaining of his favours; pain, and death?
 Who, without pain's advice, would e'er be good?
 Who, without death, but would be good in vain?
 Pain is to save from pain; all punishment,
 To make for peace: and death to save from death;
 And second death, to guard immortal life;
 To rouse the careless, the presumptuous awe,
 And turn the tide of souls another way;
 By the same tenderness divine ordain'd,
 That planted Eden, and high-bloom'd for man,
 A fairer Eden, endless, in the skies.

Heav'n gives us friends to bless the present scene;
 Resumes them, to prepare us for the next.
 All evils natural are moral goods;
 All Discipline, indulgence, on the whole.
None are unhappy: all have cause to smile,
 But such as to themselves that cause deny.
 Our faults are at the bottom of our pains;
 Error, in act, or judgment, is the source
 Of endless sighs: We sin, or we mistake;
 And nature tax, when false opinion stings.
 Let impious grief be banish'd, joy indulg'd;
 But chiefly then, when grief puts in her claim.
 Joy from the joyous, frequently betrays,

Oft lives in vanity, and dies in woe.

Joy, amidst ills, corroborates, exalts ;

'Tis joy, and conquest ; joy, and virtue too.

A noble fortitude in ills delights

Heav'n, earth, ourselves ; 'tis duty, glory, peace.

Affliction is the good man's shining scene ;

Prosperity conceals his brightest ray ;

As night to stars, woe lustre gives to man.

Heroes in battle, pilots in the storm,

And virtue in calamities, admire.

The crown of manhood is a winter-joy ;

An evergreen, that stands the Northern blast,

And blossoms in the rigour of our fate.

'Tis a prime part of happiness, to know

How much unhappiness must prove our lot ;

A part which few possess ! I'll pay life's tax,

Without one rebel murmur, from this hour,

Nor think it misery to be a man ;

Who thinks it is, shall never be a God.

Some ills we wish for, when we wish to live.

What spoke proud passion ?—" * Wish my being lost !"

Presumptuous ! blasphemous ! absurd ! and false !

The triumph of my soul is,—That I am ;

And therefore that I may be—what ? LORENZO !

Look inward, and look deep ; and deeper still ;

Unfathomably deep our treasure runs

In golden veins, thro' all eternity !

Ages, and ages, and succeeding still

New ages, where this phantom of an hour,

* Referring to the first night.

Which courts, each night, dull slumber, for repair,
 Shall wake, and wonder, and exult, and praise,
 And fly thro' infinite, and all unlock ;
 And (if deserv'd) by heav'n's redundant love,
 Made half-adorable itself, adore ;
 And find, in adoration, endless joy !
 Where thou, not master of a moment here,
 Frail as the flow'r, and fleeting as the gale,
 May'st boast a whole eternity, enrich'd
 With all a kind Omnipotence can pour.
 Since ADAM fell, no mortal, un-inspir'd,
 Has ever yet conceiv'd, or ever shall,
 How kind is G O D, how great (if good) is MAN.
 No man too largely from heav'n's love can hope,
 If what is hop'd he labours to secure.

Ills ?—there are none : All-gracious ! none from thee ;
 From man full many ! num'rous is the race
 Of blackest ill, and those immortal too,
 Begot by madness on fair liberty ;
 Heav'n's daughter, hell-debauch'd ! her hand alone
 Unlocks destruction to the sons of men,
 Fast barr'd by thine : high-wall'd with adamant,
 Guarded with terrors reaching to this world,
 And cover'd with the thunders of thy law ;
 Whose threats are mercies, whose injunctions, guides,
 Assisting, not restraining, reason's choice ;
 Whose sanctions, unavoidable results
 From nature's course, indulgently reveal'd ;
 If unreveal'd, more dang'rous, nor less sure.
 Thus, an indulgent father warns his sons,

“ Do

“Do this; fly that”—nor always tells the cause;
Pleas'd to reward, as duty to his will,
A conduct needful to their own repose.

Great God of wonders! (if, thy love survey'd, Aught else the name of wonderful retains)
What rocks are these, on which to build our trust?
Thy ways admit no blemish; none I find;
Or this alone—“That none is to be found.”
Not one, to soften censure's hardy crime;
Not one, to palliate peevish grief's COMPLAINT,
Who like a dæmon, murm'ring from the dust,
Dares into judgment call her Judge.—SUPREME!
For all I bless thee; most, for the severe;
* Her death—my own at hand—the fiery gulph,
That flaming bound of wrath omnipotent!
It thunders;—but it thunders to preserve;
It strengthens what it strikes; its wholesome dread
Averts the dreaded pain; its hideous groans
Join heav'n's sweet hallelujahs in thy praise,
Great Source of good alone! how kind in all!
In vengeance kind! pain, death, Gehenna, SAVE.

Thus, in thy world material, Mighty Mind!
Not that alone which solaces, and shines,
The rough and gloomy, challenges our praise.
The winter is as needful as the spring;
The thunder, as the sun; a stagnate mass
Of vapours breeds a pestilential air:
Nor more propitious the Favonian breeze
To nature's health, than purifying storms;
The dread Volcano ministers to good.

* L U C I A.

Its smother'd flames might undermine the world.

Loud Ætnas fulminate in love to man ;

Comets good omens are, when duly scann'd ;

And, in their use, eclipses learn to shine.

Man is responsible for ills receiv'd ;

Those we call wretched are a chosen band,

Compell'd to refuge in the right, for peace.

Amid my list of blessings infinite,

Stand this the foremost, "That my heart has bled."

'Tis heav'n's last effort of good-will to man ;

When pain can't bless, heav'n quits us in despair.

Who fails to grieve, when just occasion calls,

Or grieves too much, deserves not to be blest ;

Inhuman, or effeminate, his heart ;

Reason absolves the grief, which reason ends.

May heav'n ne'er trust my friend with happiness,

Till it has taught him how to bear it well,

By previous pain ; and made it safe to smile !

Such smiles are mine, and such may they remain ;

Nor hazard their extinction, from excess.

My change of heart a change of style demands ;

The CONSOLATION cancels the COMPLAINT,

And makes a convert of my guilty song.

As when o'er-labour'd, and inclin'd to breathe,

A panting traveller, some rising ground,

Some small ascent, has gain'd, he turns him round,

And measures with his eye the various vale,

The fields, woods, meads, and rivers, he has past ;

And, satiate of his journey, thinks of home,

Endear'd by distance, nor affects more toil ;

Thus

Thus I, tho' small, indeed, is that ascent
 The muse has gain'd, review the paths she trod;
 Various, extensive, beaten but by few;
 And, conscious of her prudence in repose,
 Pause; and with pleasure meditate an end,
 Tho' still remote; so fruitful is my theme.
 Thro' many a field of moral, and divine,
 The muse has stray'd; and much of sorrow seen
 In human ways; and much of false and vain;
 Which none, who travel this bad road, can miss.
 O'er friends deceas'd full heartily she wept;
 Of love divine the wonders she display'd;
 Prov'd man immortal; shew'd the source of joy;
 The grand tribunal rais'd; assign'd the bounds
 Of human grief: In few, to close the whole,
 The moral muse has shadow'd out a sketch,
 Though not in form, nor with a RAPHAEL-stroke,
 Of most our weakness needs believe, or do,
 In this our land of travel, and of hope,
 For peace on earth, or prospect of the skies.

What then remains? much! much! a mighty debt
 To be discharg'd: These thoughts, O NIGHT! are thine;

From thee they came, like lovers secret sighs,
 While others slept. So, CYNTHIA (poets feign)
 In shadows veil'd, soft-sliding from her sphere,
 Her shepherd'd chear'd; of her enamour'd less,
 Than I of thee.—And art thou still unsung,
 Beneath whose brow, and by whose aid, I sing?
 Immortal silence!—where shall I begin?

Where

Where end ? or how steal music from the spheres,
To sooth their Goddess ?

O majestic NIGHT !

Nature's great ancestor ! day's elder-born !
And fated to survive the transient sun !
By mortals, and immortals, seen with awe !
A starry crown thy raven brow adorns,
An azure zone thy waist ; clouds, in heav'n's loom
Wrought thro' varieties of shape and shade,
In ample folds of drapery divine,
Thy flowing mantle form ; and, heav'n throughout,
Voluminously pour thy pompous train.
Thy gloomy grandeurs (nature's most august,
Inspiring aspect !) claim a grateful verse ;
And, like a fable curtain starr'd with gold,
Drawn o'er my labours past, shall close the scene.

And what, O man ! so worthy to be sung ?
What more prepares us for the songs of heaven ?
Creation of archangels is the theme !
What, to be sung, so needful ? what so well
Celestial joys prepare us to sustain ?
The soul of man, HIS face design'd to see,
Who gave these wonders to be seen by man,
Has here a previous scene of objects great,
On which to dwell ; to stretch to that expanse
Of thought, to rise to that exalted height
Of admiration, to contract that awe,
And give her whole capacities that strength,
Which best may qualify for final joy.
The more our spirits are enlarg'd on earth,
The deeper draught shall they receive of heaven.

Heav'n's

Heav'n's KING ! whose face unveil'd consummates bliss ;

Redundant bliss ! which fills that mighty void,
The whole creation leaves in human hearts !
THOU, who didst touch the lip of JESSE's son,
Rapt in sweet contemplation of these fires,
And set his harp in concert with the spheres !
While of thy works material the Supreme
I dare attempt, assist my daring song.
Loose me from earth's inclosure, from the sun's
Contracted circle set my heart at large ;
Eliminate my spirit, give it range
Thro' provinces of thought yet unexplor'd ;
Teach me, by this stupendous scaffolding,
Creation's golden steps, to climb to THEE.
Teach me with art great nature to controul,
And spread a lustre o'er the shades of night.
Feel I thy kind assent ? and shall the sun
Be seen at midnight, rising in my song ?

LORENZO ! come, and warm thee : thou, whose heart,
Whole little heart, is moor'd within a nook
Of this obscure terrestrial, anchor weigh.
Another ocean calls, a nobler port ;
I am thy pilot, I thy prosp'rous gale.
Gainful thy voyage thro' yon azure main ;
Main, without tempest, pirate, rock, or shore ;
And whence thou may'st import eternal wealth ;
And leave to beggar'd minds the pearl and gold.
Thy travels dost thou boast o'er foreign realms ?
Thou stranger to the world ! thy tour begin ;
Thy tour thro' nature's universal orb.

Nature

Nature delineates her whole chart at large,
On soaring souls, that sail among the spheres;
And man how purblind, if unknown the whole!
Who circles spacious earth, then travels here,
Shall own, he never was from home before!
Come, my * PROMETHEUS, from thy pointed rock
Of false ambition if unchain'd, we'll mount;
We'll, innocently, steal celestial fire,
And kindle our devotion at the stars;
A theft, that shall not chain, but set thee free.

Above our atmosphere's intestine wars,
Rain's fountain-head, the magazine of hail;
Above the northern nests of feather'd snows,
The brew of thunders, and the flaming forge
That forms the crooked lightning; 'bove the caves
Where infant tempests wait their growing wings,
And tune their tender voices to that roar,
Which soon, perhaps, shall shake a guilty world;
Above misconstru'd omens of the sky,
Far-travell'd comet's calculated blaze;
E lance thy thought, and think of more than man.
Thy soul, till now, contracted, wither'd, shrunk,
Blighted by blasts of earth's unwholesome air,
Will blossom here; spread all her faculties
To these bright ardors; ev'ry pow'r unfold,
And rise into sublimities of thought.
Stars teach, as well as shine. At nature's birth,
Thus, their commission ran—"Be kind to man."

* Night the eighth.

Where

Where art thou, poor benighted traveller !
The Stars will light thee ; tho' the Moon should fail.
Where art thou, more benighted ! more astray !
In ways immoral ! The Stars call thee back ;
And, if obey'd their counsel, set thee right.

This prospect vast, what is it ?—Weigh'd aright,
'Tis nature's system of divinity,
And ev'ry student of the Night inspires.

'Tis elder Scripture, writ by GOD's own hand ;
Scripture authentic ! uncorrupt by man.

LORENZO ! with my Radius (the rich gift
Of thought nocturnal !) I'll point out to thee
Its various lessons ; some that may surprise
An un-adept in mysteries of NIGHT ;
Little, perhaps, expected in her school,
Nor thought to grow on planet, or on star.
Bulls, lions, scorpions, monsters here we feign ;
Ourselves more monstrous, not to see what here
Exists indeed ;—a lecture to mankind.

What read we here ?—Th' existence of a GOD ?
Yes ; and of other beings, man above ;
Natives of Æther ! Sons of higher climes !
And, what may move LORENZO's wonder more,
ETERNITY is written in the skies.

And whose eternity ?—LORENZO ! Thine ;
Mankind's eternity. Nor FAITH alone,
VIRTUE grows here ; here springs the sov'reign cure
Of almost ev'ry vice ; but chiefly Thine ;
Wrath, Pride, Ambition, and impure Desire.

LORENZO ! Thou canst wake at midnight too,

Tho' not on Morals bent: Ambition, Pleasure!
 Those tyrants I for Thee so * lately fought,
 Afford their harass'd slaves but slender rest.
 Thou, to whom midnight is immoral noon,
 And the sun's noon-tide blaze, prime dawn of day;
 Not by thy climate, but capricious crime,
 Commencing one of our Antipodes!
 In thy nocturnal rove, one moment halt,
 'Twixt stage and stage, of riot, and cabal;
 And lift thine eye, (if bold an eye to lift,
 If bold to meet the face of injur'd heav'n)
 To yonder stars: For other ends they shine,
 Than to light revellers from shame to shame,
 And, thus, be made accomplices in guilt.

Why from yon arch, that infinite of space,
 With infinite of lucid orbs replete,
 Which set the living firmament on fire,
 At the first glance, in such an overwhelm
 Of wonderful, on man's astonish'd sight,
 Rushes OMNIPOTENCE?—To curb our Pride;
 Our Reason rouse, and lead it to that Power,
 Whose love lets down these silver chains of light;
 To draw up man's Ambition to Himself,
 And bind our chaste Affections to His throne.
 Thus the three virtues, least alive on earth,
 And welcom'd on heav'n's coast with most applause,
 An Humble, Pure, and Heav'nly-minded heart,
 Are here inspir'd:—And canst thou gaze too long?

Nor stands thy Wrath depriv'd of its reproof,

* Night the eighth.

Or

Or un-upbraided by this radiant choir.
 The planets of each system represent
 Kind neighbours ; mutual amity prevails ;
 Sweet interchange of rays, receiv'd, return'd ;
 Enlight'ning, and enlighten'd ! All, at once,
 Attracting, and attracted ! Patriot like,
 None sins against the welfare of the whole ;
 But their reciprocal, unselfish aid,
 Affords an emblem of Millennial love.
 Nothing in nature, much less conscious being,
 Was e'er created solely for Itself :
 Thus man his sov'reign duty learns in this Material picture of benevolence.

And know, of all our supercilious race,
 Thou most inflammable ! Thou wasp of men !
 Man's angry heart, inspected, would be found
 As rightly set, as are the starry spheres ;
 'Tis Nature's structure, broke by stubborn Will,
 Breeds all that un-celestial discord there.
 Wilt thou not feel the bias Nature gave ?
 Canst thou descend from converse with the skies,
 And seize thy brother's throat ?—For what—a Clod,
 An inch of Earth ? The Planets cry, “ Forbear.”
 They chase our double darkness ; Nature's gloom,
 And (kinder still !) our intellectual night.

And see, Day's amiable sister sends
 Her invitation, in the softest rays
 Of mitigated lustre ; courts thy sight,
 Which suffers from her tyrant-brother's blaze.
Night grants thee the full freedom of the skies,

Nor rudely reprimands thy lifted eye;
With Gain, and Joy, she bribes thee to be wise.
Night opes the noblest scenes, and sheds an awe,
Which gives those venerable scenes full weight,
And deep reception, in th' intender'd heart;
While light peeps thro' the darknefs, like a spy;
And darknefs shews its grandeur by the light.
Nor is the Profit greater than the Joy,
If human hearts at glorious objects glow,
And admiration can inspire delight.

What speak I more, than I, This moment, feel?
With pleasing stupor first the soul is struck
(Stupor ordain'd to make her truly wise!):
Then into transport starting from her trance,
With love, and admiration, how she glows!
This gorgeous apparatus! This display!
This ostentation of creative power!
This theatre!—what eye can take it in?
By what divine enchantment was it rais'd,
For minds of the first magnitude to launch
In endless speculation, and adore?
One sun by day, by night Ten thousand shine;
And light us deep into the DEITY;
How boundless in magnificence and might!
O what a confluence of ethereal fires,
From urns un-number'd, down the steep of heaven,
Streams to a point, and centres in my sight!
Nor tarries there; I feel it at my Heart.
My heart, at once, it humbles, and exalts;
Lays it in dust, and calls it to the skies.

Who

Who sees it unexalted ? or unaw'd ?
 Who sees it, and can stop at what is seen ?
 Material offspring of OMNIPOTENCE !
 Inanimate, All-animating birth !
 Work worthy Him who made it ! Worthy praise !
 All praise ! praise more than human ! nor deny'd
 Thy praise Divine !—But tho' man, drown'd in sleep,
 With-holds his homage, not alone I wake ;
 Bright legions swarm unseen, and sing, unheard
 By mortal ear, the glorious Architect,
 In This His universal temple hung
 With lustres, with innumerable lights,
 That shed religion on the soul ; at once,
 The Temple, and the Preacher ! O how loud
 It calls devotion ! genuine growth of Night !

Devotion ! daughter of astronomy !

An undevout astronomer is mad.

True ; All things speak a GOD ; but in the small,
 Men trace out Him ; in great, He seizes man ;
 Seizes, and elevates, and raps, and fills.
 With new inquiries, 'mid associates new.

Tell me, ye stars ! ye planets ! tell me, all
 Ye starr'd, and planeted, inhabitants ! What is it ?
 What are these sons of wonder ? Say, proud arch,
 (Within whose azure palaces they dwell)
 Built with divine ambition ! in disdain

Of limit built ! built in the taste of heaven !
 Vast concave ! ample dome ! wast thou design'd
 A meet apartment for the DEITY ?—

Not so ; That thought alone thy state impairs,

Thy Lofty sinks, and shallows thy Profound,
And streightens thy Diffusive; dwarfs the whole,
And makes an universe an Orrery.

But when I drop mine eye, and look on man,
Thy right regain'd, thy grandeur is restor'd,
O Nature! wide flies off th' expanding round.
As when whole magazines, at once, are fir'd,
The smitten air is hollow'd by the blow;
The vast displosion dissipates the clouds;
Shock'd æther's billows dash the distant skies;
Thus (but far more) th' expanding round flies off,
And leaves a mighty void, a spacious womb,
Might teem with new creation; re-inflam'd
Thy luminaries triumph, and assume Divinity themselves. Nor was it strange,
Matter high-wrought to such surprising pomp,
Such godlike glory, stole the style of gods,
From ages dark, obtuse, and steep'd in Sense;
For, sure, to Sense, they truly are divine,
And half absolv'd idolatry from guilt;
Nay, turn'd it into virtue. Such it was
In those, who put forth all they had of Man
Unlost, to lift their thought, nor mounted higher;
But, weak of wing, on planets perch'd; and thought
What was their highest, must be their ador'd.

But They how weak, who could no higher mount?
And are there, then, LORENZO! Those, to whom Unseen, and Unexistent, are the Same?
And if Incomprehensible is join'd,
Who dare pronounce it madness, to believe?

Why

Why has the mighty BUILDER thrown aside
All measure in His work ; stretch'd out His line
So far, and spread amazement o'er the whole ?
Then (as He took delight in wide extremes),
Deep in the bosom of His universe,
Dropt down that reas'ning mite, that insect, Man,
To crawl, and gaze, and wonder at the scene ?——
That man might ne'er presume to plead amazement
For disbelief of wonders in Himself.
Shall GOD be less miraculous, than what
His hand has form'd ? Shall Mysteries descend
From Un-mysterious ? Things more Elevate,
Be more familiar ? Uncreated lie
More obvious than Created, to the grasp
Of human thought ? The more of Wonderful
Is heard in Him, the more we should assent.
Could we conceive Him, G O D He could not be ;
Or He not G O D, or we could not be Men.
A G O D alone can comprehend a G O D ;
Man's distance how immense ! On such a theme,
Know This, LORENZO ! (seem it ne'er so strange)
Nothing can satisfy, but what confounds ;
Nothing, but what astonishes, is true.
The scene thou seest, attests the truth I sing,
And ev'ry star sheds light upon thy creed.
These stars, this furniture, this coast of heaven,
If but reported, thou hadst ne'er believ'd ;
But thine Eye tells thee, the Romance is true.
The grand of nature is th' Almighty's oath,
In Reason's court, to silence Unbelief.

How my mind, op'ning at this scene, imbibes
The moral emanations of the skies,
While nought, perhaps, LORENZO less admires!
Has the Great Sov'reign sent ten thousand worlds
To tell us, He resides above them All,
In glory's unapproachable recess?
And dare Earth's bold inhabitants deny
The sumptuous, the magnific embassy
A moment's audience? Turn we, nor will hear
From whom they come, or what they would impart
For man's emolument; sole cause that stoops
Their grandeur to man's eye? LORENZO! rouse;
Let thought, awaken'd, take the lightning's wing,
And glance from east to west, from pole to pole.
Who sees, but is confounded, or convinc'd?
Renounces Reason, or a GOD adores?
Mankind was sent into the world to see:
Sight gives the science needful to their peace;
That obvious science asks small learning's aid.
Wouldst thou on metaphysic pinions soar?
Or wound thy patience amid logic thorns?
Or travel history's enormous round?
Nature no such hard task enjoins: She gave
A make to man directive of his thought;
A make set upright, pointing to the stars,
As who should say, "Read thy chief lesson there."
Too late to read this manuscript of heaven,
When, like a parchment-scroll, shrunk up by flames,
It folds LORENZO's lesson from his sight.

Lesson how various! Not the GOD alone,

I see

I see His Ministers ; I see, diffus'd
In radiant orders, essences sublime,
Of various offices, of various plume,
In heav'nly liveries, distinctly, clad,
Azure, green, purple, pearl, or downy gold,
Or all commix'd ; they stand, with wings outspread,
List'ning to catch the Master's least command,
And fly thro' Nature, ere the moment ends ;
Numbers innumerable !—Well conceiv'd
By Pagan, and by Christian ! O'er each sphere
Presides an angel, to direct its course,
And feed, or fan, its flames ; or to discharge
Other high trusts unknown. For who can see
Such pomp of matter, and imagine, Mind,
For which alone Inanimate was made,
More sparingly dispens'd ? That nobler son,
Far liker the great S I R E !—'Tis thus the skies
Inform us of superiors numberless,
As much, in Excellence, above mankind,
As above Earth, in Magnitude, the Spheres.
These, as a cloud of witnesses, hang o'er us ;
In a throng'd theatre are all our deeds ;
Perhaps, a thousand demigods descend
On ev'ry beam we see, to walk with men.
Aweful reflection ! Strong restraint from ill !

Yet, here, our virtue finds still stronger aid
From these ethereal glories Sense surveys.
Something, like magic, strikes from this blue vault ;
With just attention is it view'd ? We feel
A sudden succour, un-implor'd, unthought ;

34 The CONSOLATION. Night 9.

Nature herself does half the work of Man.
 Seas, rivers, mountains, forests, desarts, rocks,
 The promontory's height, the depth profound
 Of subterranean, excavated grotts,
 Black-brow'd, and vaulted high, and yawning wide
 From Nature's structure, or the scoop of Time;
 If ample of dimension, vast of size,
 Ev'n These an aggrandizing impulse give;
 Of solemn thought enthusiastic heights
 Ev'n These infuse.—But what of vast in These?
 Nothing;—or we must own the skies forgot.
 Much less in Art.—Vain Art! Thou pigmy power!
 How dost thou swell, and strut, with human pride,
 To shew thy littleness! What childish toys,
 Thy watry columns squirted to the clouds!
 Thy bason'd rivers, and imprison'd seas!
 Thy mountains moulded into forms of men!
 Thy hundred-gated Capitals! Or Those Where three days travel left us much to ride;
 Gazing on miracles by mortals wrought,
 Arches triumphal, theatres immense,
 Or nodding Gardens pendent in mid-air!
 Or Temples proud to meet their Gods half-way!
 Yet These affect us in no common kind.
 What then the force of such superior scenes?
 Enter a temple, it will strike an awe:
 What awe from This the DEITY has built?
 A Good Man seen, tho' silent, counsel gives:
 The touch'd spectator wishes to be wise:
 In a bright mirror His own hands have made,

Here

Here we see something like the face of GOD.

Seems it not then enough, to say, LORENZO!

To man abandon'd, "Hast thou seen the skies?"

And yet, so thwarted nature's kind design

By daring man, he makes her sacred awe

(That guard from ill) his shelter, his temptation

To more than common guilt, and quite inverts

Celestial art's intent. The trembling stars

See crimes gigantic, stalking thro' the gloom

With front erect, that hide their head by day,

And making night still darker by their deeds.

Slumb'ring in covert, till the shades descend,

Rapine and Murder, link'd, now prowl for prey.

The miser earths his treasure; and the thief,

Watching the mole, half-beggars him ere morn.

Now Plots, and foul Conspiracies, awake;

And, muffling up their horrors from the moon,

Havock and devastation they prepare,

And kingdoms tott'ring in the field of blood.

Now sons of riot in mid-revel rage.

What shall I do?—Suppress it? or proclaim?—

Why sleeps the thunder? Now, LORENZO! now,

His best friend's couch the rank adulterer

Ascends secure; and laughs at gods and men.

Prepost'rous madmen, void of fear or shame,

Lay their crimes bare to these chaste eyes of heaven;

Yet shrink, and shudder, at a mortal's sight.

Were moon, and stars, for villains only made?

To guide, yet screen them, with tenebrious light?

No; they were made to fashion the sublime

Of human hearts, and wiser make the Wise.

Those ends were answer'd once ; when mortals liv'd
Of stronger wing, of aquiline ascent
In theory sublime. O how unlike
Those vermin of the night, this moment sung,
Who crawl on Earth, and on her venom feed !
Those antient sages, Human stars ! They met
Their brothers of the Skies, at midnight hour ;
Their counsel ask'd ; and, what they ask'd, obey'd.
The Stagirite, and PLATO, He who drank
The poison'd bowl, and He of Tusculum,
With Him of Corduba (immortal names !)
In these unbounded, and Elysian, walks,
An area fit for Gods, and Godlike men,
They took their nightly round, thro' radiant paths
By Seraphs trod ; instructed, chiefly, thus,
To tread in Their bright footsteps here below ;
To walk in worth still brighter than the skies.
There, they contracted their contempt of Earth ;
Of hopes eternal kindled, There, the fire ;
There, as in near approach, they glow'd, and grew (Great visitants !) more intimate with G O D,
More worth to Men, more joyous to Themselves.
Thro' various Virtues, they, with ardor, ran
The Zodiac of their learn'd, illustrious lives.

In Christian hearts, O for a Pagan zeal !
A needful, but opprobrious pray'r ! As much
Our Ardor Less, as Greater is our Light.
How monstrous This in Morals ! Scarce more strange
Would this Phænomenon in nature strike,
A Sun, that froze us, or a Star, that warm'd.

What

What taught these heroes of the moral world?
 To these thou giv'st thy Praise, give Credit too.
 These doctors ne'er were pension'd to deceive thee;
 And Pagan tutors are thy taste.—They taught,
That, narrow views betray to misery:
That, wise it is to comprehend the whole:
That, Virtue rose from Nature, ponder'd well,
 The single base of Virtue built to heaven:
That, G O D, and Nature, our attention claim:
That Nature is the glass reflecting G O D,
 As, by the Sea, reflected is the Sun,
 Too glorious to be gaz'd on in his sphere:
That, Mind immortal loves immortal aims:
That, boundless Mind affects a boundless Space:
That, vast surveys, and the sublime of things,
 The soul assimilate, and make her great:
That, therefore, heav'n her glories, as a fund
 Of inspiration, thus spreads out to man.
Such are their doctrines; such the Night inspir'd.

And what more true? What truth of greater weight?
 The soul of man was made to walk the skies;
 Delightful outlet of her prison Here!
There, disincumber'd from her chains, the ties
 Of toys terrestrial, she can rove at large;
There, freely can respire, dilate, extend,
 In full proportion let loose all her powers;
 And, undeluded, grasp at something great.
 Nor, as a stranger, does she wander there;
 But, wonderful herself, thro' wonder strays;
 Contemplating their grandeur, finds her own;
 Dives deep in their œconomy divine,

Sits

Sits high in judgment on their various laws,
 And, like a master, judges not amiss.
 Hence greatly pleas'd, and justly proud, the soul
 Grows conscious of her birth celestial; breathes
 More life, more vigour, in her native air;
 And feels herself at home among the stars;
 And, feeling, emulates her country's praise.

What call we, then, the firmament, LORENZO?—
 As Earth the body, since, the Skies sustain
 The soul with food, that gives immortal life,
Call it, The noble pasture of the Mind;
 Which there expatiates, strengthens, and exults,
 And riots thro' the luxuries of thought.
Call it, The Garden of the DEITY,
 Blossom'd with stars, redundant in the growth
 Of fruit ambrosial; moral fruit to man.
Call it, The breast-plate of the true High-priest,
 Ardent with gems oracular, that give,
 In points of highest moment, right response;
 And ill neglected, if we prize our peace.

Thus, have we found a true astrology;
 Thus, have we found a new, and noble sense,
 In which alone stars govern human fates.
 O that the Stars (as some have feign'd) let fall
 Bloodshed, and havock, on embattled realms,
 And rescu'd Monarchs from so black a guilt!
 BOURBON! this wish how gen'rous in a foe!
 Wouldst thou be great, wouldst thou become a God,
 And stick thy deathless name among the stars,
 For mighty conquests on a needle's point?
 Instead of forging chains for foreigners,
Bastile thy Tutor: Grandeur all thy aim?

As yet thou know'st not what it is : How great,
How glorious, then, appears the Mind of man,
When in it all the stars, and planets, roll !

And what it seems, it is : Great objects make Great minds, enlarging as their views enlarge ;
Those still more Godlike, as These more divine.

And more divine than These, thou canst not see.
Dazled, o'erpow'r'd, with the delicious draught
Of miscellaneous splendors, how I reel
From thought to thought, inebriate, without end !
An Eden, this ! a PARADISE unlost !
I meet the DEITY in ev'ry view,
And tremble at my nakedness before him !
O that I could but reach the Tree of Life !
For Here it grows, unguarded from our taste ;
No Flaming Sword denies our entrance Here ;
Would man but gather, he might live for ever.

LORENZO ! much of Moral hast thou seen.
Of curious arts art thou more fond ? Then mark
The Mathematic glories of the skies,
In number, weight, and measure, all ordain'd.
LORENZO's boasted builders, Chance, and Fate,
Are left to finish his aërial towers ;
Wisdom, and Choice, their well known characters
Here deep impress ; and claim it for their own.
Tho' splendid all, no splendor void of use ;
Use rivals Beauty : Art contends with Power
No wanton waste, amid effuse expence ;
The great Oeconomist adjusting all
To prudent pomp, magnificently wise.
How rich the prospect ! and for ever new !

And

And newest to the man that views it most ;
For newer still in infinite succeeds.
Then, these aëreal racers, O how swift !
How the shaft loiters from the strongest string ?
Spirit alone can distance the career.
Orb above orb ascending without end !
Circle in circle, without end, inclos'd !
Wheel, within wheel ; EZEKIEL ! like to thine !
Like thine it seems a vision or a dream ;
Tho' seen, we labour to believe it true !
What involution ! what extent ! what swarms
Of worlds, that laugh at Earth ! immensely great !
Immensely distant from each other's spheres !
What then, the wond'rous Space thro' which they roll ?
At once it quite ingulphs all human thought ;
'Tis comprehension's absolute defeat.

Nor think thou see'st a wild disorder here ;
Thro' this illustrious chaos to the sight,
Arrangement neat, and chastest order, reign.
The path prescrib'd, inviolably kept,
Upbraids the lawless fallies of mankind.
Worlds, ever thwarting, never interfere ;
What knots are ty'd ! how soon are they dissolv'd,
And set the seeming marry'd planets free !
They rove for ever, without error rove ;
Confusion unconfus'd ! nor less admire
This tumult untumultuous ; all on wing !
In motion, all ! yet what profound repose !
What fervid action, yet no noise ! as aw'd
To silence, by the presence of their LORD ;

Or

Or hush'd, by His command, in love to man,
And bid let fall soft beams on human rest,
Restless themselves. On yon cœrulean plain,
In exultation to Their G O D, and Thine,
They dance, they sing eternal jubilee,
Eternal celebration of His praise.
But, since their Song arrives not at our ear,
Their Dance perplex'd exhibits to the sight
Fair Hieroglyphic of His peerless power.
Mark, how the Labyrinthian turns they take,
The circles intricate, and mystic maze,
Weave the grand cypher of Omnipotence ;
To Gods, how great ! how legible to Man !

Leaves so much wonder greater wonder still ?
Where are the pillars that support the skies ?
What more than Atlantean shoulder props
Th' incumbent load ? What magic, what strange art,
In fluid air these pond'rous orbs sustains ?
Who would not think them hung in golden chains ?—
And so they are ; in the high will of heaven,
Which fixes all ; makes adamant of air,
Or air of adamant ; makes all of nought,
Or nought of all ; if such the dread decree.

Imagine from their deep foundations torn
The most gigantic sons of earth, the broad
And tow'ring Alps, all tost into the sea ;
And, light as down, or volatile as air,
Their bulks enormous dancing on the waves,
In time, and measure, exquisite ; while all
The winds, in emulation of the spheres,

Tune

Tune their sonorous instruments aloft;
The concert swell, and animate the ball.
Would this appear amazing? What, then, worlds,
In a far thinner element sustain'd,
And acting the same part, with greater skill,
More rapid movement, and for noblest Ends?

More obvious ends to pass, are not these stars
The seats majestic, proud imperial thrones,
On which angelic delegates of heaven,
At certain periods, as the SOV'REIGN nods,
Discharge high trusts of Vengeance, or of Love;
To clothe, in outward grandeur, grand design,
And acts most solemn still more solemnize?

Ye CITIZENS of air! what ardent thanks,
What full effusion of the grateful heart,
Is due from man indulg'd in such a fight!
A fight so noble! and a fight so kind!
It drops new truths at ev'ry new survey!
Feels not LORENZO something stir within,
That sweeps away all period? As these spheres
Measure duration, they no less inspire
The Godlike hope of ages without end.
The boundless Space, thro' which these rovers take
Their restless roam, suggests the sister-thought
Of boundless Time. Thus, by kind Nature's skill,
To man un-labour'd, that important guest,
ETERNITY, finds entrance at the Sight:
And an Eternity, for man ordain'd,
Or these his destin'd midnight counsellors,
The Stars, had never whisper'd it to man.

NATURE

NATURE informs, but ne'er insults, her sons.
Could she then kindle the most ardent wish
To disappoint it?—That is blasphemy.
Thus, of thy creed a second article,
Momentous, as th' existence of a GOD,
Is found (as I conceive) where rarely sought;
And thou may'st read thy Soul immortal, Here.

Here, then, LORENZO! on these glories dwell;
Nor want the gilt, illuminated, roof,
That calls the wretched Gay to dark delights.
Assemblies?—This is one divinely bright;
Here, un-endanger'd in health, wealth, or fame,
Range thro' the fairest, and the SULTAN scorn.
He, wise as Thou, no Crescent holds so fair,
As that, which on his turbant awes a world;
And thinks the Moon is proud to copy him.
Look on her, and gain more than worlds can give,
A mind superior to the charms of Power.
Thou muffled in delusions of this life!
Can yonder Moon turn ocean in his bed,
From side to side, in constant ebb, and flow,
And purify from stench his watry realms?
And fails her moral influence? wants she power
To turn LORENZO's stubborn tide of thought
From stagnating on Earth's infected shore,
And purge from nuisance his corrupted heart?
Fails her attraction when it draws to heaven?
Nay, and to what thou valu'st more, Earth's joy?
Minds elevate, and panting for Unseen,
And defecate from Sense, alone obtain

Full

Full relish of existence un-deflower'd,
The Life of life, the Zest of worldly blifs.
All else on earth amounts—to what? To This:
“BAD to be Suffer'd; BLESSINGS to be Left:”
Earth's richest inventory boasts no more.

Of higher scenes be, then, the call obey'd.
O let me gaze!—Of gazing there's no end.
O let me think!—Thought too is wilder'd here;
In mid-way flight imagination tires;
Yet soon re-prunes her wing to soar anew,
Her point unable to forbear, or gain;
So great the pleasure, so profound the plan!
A banquet, this, where men, and angels, meet,
Eat the same Manna, mingle earth, and heaven.
How distant some of these nocturnal suns!
So distant (says the sage), 'twere not absurd
To doubt, if beams, set out at Nature's birth,
Are yet arriv'd at this so foreign world;
Tho' nothing half so rapid as their flight.
An eye of awe and wonder let me roll
And roll for ever: Who can satiate sight
In such a scene? in such an ocean wide
Of deep astonishment? where depth, height, breadth,
Are lost in their extremes; and where to count
The thick-fown glories in this field of fire,
Perhaps a Seraph's computation fails.
Now, go, Ambition! boast thy boundless might
In conquest, o'er the tenth part of a grain.

And yet LORENZO calls for miracles,
To give his tott'ring faith a solid base.

Why

Why call for less than is already thine?
 Thou art no novice in theology;
 What is a Miracle?—'Tis a reproach,
 'Tis an implicit satire, on mankind;
 And while it satisfies, it censures too.
 To common-sense, great Nature's course proclaims
 A DEITY: When mankind falls asleep,
 A Miracle is sent, as an alarm,
 To wake the world, and prove Him o'er again,
 By recent argument, but not more strong.
 Say, which imports more plenitude of power,
 Or nature's laws to fix, or to repeal?
 To make a sun, or stop his mid-career?
 To countermand his orders, and send back
 The flaming courier to the frightened East,
 Warm'd, and astonish'd, at his ev'ning ray?
 Or bid the Moon, as with her journey tir'd,
 In Ajalon's soft, flow'ry vale repose?
 Great things are these; still greater, to create.
 From ADAM's bow'r look down thro' the whole train
 Of miracles;—resistless is their power?
 They do not, can not, more amaze the mind,
 Than this, call'd un-miraculous survey,
 If duly weigh'd, if rationally seen,
 If seen with human eyes. The Brute, indeed,
 Sees nought but Spangles here; the Fool, no more.
 Say'st thou, "The course of Nature governs all?"
 The Course of Nature is the Art of GOD.
 The miracles thou call'st for, This attest;
 For say, could Nature Nature's course controul?

But,

But, miracles apart, who sees H I M not,
Nature's CONTROULER, AUTHOR, GUIDE, and END ?
Who turn his eye on Nature's midnight face,
But must inquire — “ What hand behind the scene,
“ What arm Almighty, put these wheeling globes
“ In motion, and wound up the vast machine ?
“ Who rounded in his palm these spacious orbs ?
“ Who bowl'd them flaming thro' the dark profound,
“ Num'rous as glitt'ring gems of morning-dew,
“ Or sparks from populous cities in a blaze,
“ And set the bosom of Old Night on fire ?
“ Peopled her desert, and made horror smile ? ”
Or, if the military style delights thee,
(For stars have fought their battles, leagu'd with man)
“ Who marshals this bright host ? Enrolls their names ?
“ Appoints their post, their marches, and returns,
“ Punctual, at stated periods ? who disbands
“ These vet'ran troops, their final duty done,
“ If e'er disbanded ? ” — H E, whose potent word,
Like the loud trumpet, levy'd first their powers
In Night's inglorious empire, where they slept
In beds of darkness : arm'd them with fierce flames,
Arrang'd, and disciplin'd, and cloath'd in gold ;
And call'd them out of Chaos to the field,
Where now they war with Vice and Unbelief.
O let us join this army ! joining these,
Will give us hearts intrepid, at that hour,
When brighter flames shall cut a darker night ;
When these strong demonstrations of a G O D

Shall

Shall hide their heads, or tumble from their spheres,
And one eternal curtain cover all!

Struck at that thought, as new-awak'd, I lift
A more enlighten'd eye, and read the stars
To man still more propitious; and their aid
(Tho' guiltless of idolatry) implore;
Nor longer rob them of their noblest name.

O ye Dividers of my Time! Ye bright
Accomptants of my days, and months, and years,
In your fair Kalendar distinctly mark'd!
Since that authentic, radiant register,
'Tho' man inspects it not, stands good against him;
Since You, and years, roll on, tho' man stands still;
Teach me my days to number, and apply
My trembling heart to Wisdom; now beyond
All shadow of excuse for fooling on.

Age smoothes our path to prudence; sweeps aside
The snares, keen Appetite, and passion, spread
To catch stray souls; and woe to that grey head,
Whose Folly would undo, what Age has done!
Aid, then, aid, all ye stars!—Much rather, THOU,
Great ARTIST! THOU, whose finger set aright
This exquisite Machine, with all its Wheels,
Tho' intervolv'd, exact; and pointing out
Life's rapid, and irrevocable flight,
With such an Index fair, as none can miss,
Who lifts an eye, nor sleeps till it is clos'd.
Open mine eye, dread DEITY! to read
The tacit doctrine of thy works; to see Things as they are, un-alter'd thro' the glass

Of

Of worldly wishes. Time, Eternity!
('Tis these, mis-measur'd, ruin all mankind
Set them before me; let me lay them both
In equal scale, and learn their various weight.
Let Time appear a Moment, as it is;
And let Eternity's full orb, at once,
Turn on my soul, and strike it into heaven.
When shall I see far more than charms me now?
Gaze on creation's model in Thy breast
Unveil'd, nor wonder at the transcript more?
When, this vile, foreign, dust, which smothers all
That travel Earth's deep vale, shall I shake off?
When shall my soul her incarnation quit,
And, re-adopted to thy blest embrace,
Obtain her Apotheosis in T H E E?

Dost think, LORENZO, this is wand'ring wide?
No, 'tis directly striking at the mark;
To wake thy dead Devotion * was my point;
And how I bless Night's consecrating shades,
Which to a Temple turn an Universe;
Fill us with great ideas, full of heaven,
And antidote the pestilential earth!
In ev'ry storm, that either frowns, or falls
What an asylum has the soul in pray'r!
And what a Fane is This, in which to pray!
And what a G O D must dwell in such a Fane!
O what a genius must inform the skies!
And is LORENZO's salamander-heart
Cold, and untouch'd, amid these sacred fires?
O ye nocturnal sparks! Ye glowing embers,

On heav'n's broad hearth ! who burn, or burn no more,
 Who blaze, or die, as Great J E H O V A H's breath
 Or blows you, or forbears ; assist my song ;
 Pour your whole influence ; exorcise his heart,
 So long posselt ; and bring him back to Man.

And is LORENZO a demurrer still ?
Pride in thy parts provokes thee to contest
Truths, which, contested, put thy Parts to shame.
 Nor shame they more LORENZO's Head than Heart,
 A faithless heart, how despicably small !
 Too streight, aught great, or gen'rous, to receive !
 Fill'd with an atom ! fill'd, and foul'd, with Self !
 And Self mistaken ! Self, that lasts an hour !
Instincts and Passions, of the nobler kind,
 Lie suffocated there ; or They alone,
Reason apart, would wake high hope ; and open,
 To ravish'd thought, that Intellectual sphere,
 Where, Order, Wisdom, Goodness, Providence,
 Their endless miracles of love display,
 And promise all the truly great desire.
 The mind that would be happy, must be great ;
 Great, in its wishes ; great, in its surveys.
 Extended views a narrow mind extend ;
 Push out its corrugate, expansive make,
 Which, ere-long, more than planets shall embrace.
 A man of Compass makes a man of Worth ;
Divine contemplate, and become Divine.

As man was made for glory, and for blifs,
 All littleness is in approach to woe ;
 Open thy bosom, set thy wishes wide,

And let in Manhood; let in Happiness;
 Admit the boundless theatre of thought
 From nothing, up to G O D; which makes a Man.
 Take G O D from Nature, nothing great is left;
 Man's mind is in a pit, and nothing fees;
 Man's heart is in a jakes, and loves the mire.
 Emerge from thy profound; erect thine eye;
 See thy distress! how close art thou besieg'd!
 Besieg'd by Nature, the proud sceptic's foe!
 Inclos'd by these innumerable worlds,
 Sparkling conviction on the darkest mind,
 As in a golden net of PROVIDENCE,
 How art thou caught, sure captive of belief!
 From this thy blest captivity, what art,
 What blasphemy to reason, sets thee free!
 This scene is heav'n's indulgent violence:
 Canst thou bear up against this tide of glory?
 What is earth bosom'd in these ambient orbs,
 But, faith in G O D impos'd, and press'd on man?
 Dar'st thou still litigate thy desp'rate cause,
 Spite of these num'rous, awful, witnesses,
 And doubt the deposition of the skies?
 O how laborious is thy way to ruin!
 Laborious? 'tis impracticable quite;
 To sink beyond a doubt, in this debate,
 With all his weight of wisdom and of will,
 And crime flagitious, I defy a fool.
 Some wish they did; but no man disbelieves.
 G O D is a Spirit; Spirit cannot strike
 These gross, material organs; G O D by man

As much is seen, as Man a G O D can see,
In these astonishing exploits of power.
What order, beauty, motion, distance, size!
Concertion of design, how exquisite!
How complicate, in their divine police!
Apt means! great ends! consent to gen'ral good!—
Each attribute of these material gods,
So long (and that with specious pleas) ador'd,
A sep'rate conquest gains o'er rebel thought;
And leads in triumph the whole mind of man.

LORENZO! this may seem harangue to thee;
Such all is apt to seem, that thwarts our will.
And dost thou, then, demand a simple proof
Of this great master-moral of the skies,
Unskill'd, or dis-inclin'd, to read it there?
Since 'tis the basis, and all drops without it,
Take it, in one compact, unbroken chain.
Such proof insists on an attentive ear;
'Twill not make one amid a mob of thoughts,
And, for thy notice, struggle with the world.
Retire;—the world shut out;—thy thoughts call
Imagination's airy wing repress;— [home;—
Lock up thy Senses;—let no Passion stir;—
Wake all to Reason;—let her reign alone;—
Then, in thy Soul's deep silence, and the depth
Of Nature's silence, midnight, thus inquire,
As I have done; and shall inquire no more.
In nature's chanel, thus the questions run.

“ What am I? and from Whence?—I nothing know,
“ But that I am; and, since I am, conclude

- “ Something Eternal: Had there e’er been Nought, “ Nought still had been: Eternal there must be.—
“ But what eternal?—Why not Human Race?
“ And ADAM’s ancestors without an end?—
“ That’s hard to be conceiv’d; since ev’ry link
“ Of that long-chain’d succession is so frail;
“ Can ev’ry Part depend, and not the Whole?
“ Yet grant it true; new difficulties rise;
“ I’m still quite out at sea; nor see the shore.
“ Whence Earth, and these bright Orbs?—Eternal “ Grant Matter was eternal; still these Orbs [too?—
“ Would want some other father;—much design
“ Is seen in all their Motions, all their Makes;
“ Design implies Intelligence, and Art:
“ That can’t be from Themselves—or Man; That art
“ Man scarce can comprehend, could man bestow?
“ And nothing greater, yet allow’d than Man.—
“ Who, Motion, foreign to the smallest grain,
“ Shot thro’ vast masses of enormous weight?
“ Who bid brute Matter’s restive lump assume “ Such various forms, and gave it wings to fly?
“ Has matter innate motion? then each atom,
“ Asserting its indisputable right
“ To dance, would form an universe of dust:
“ Has matter none? Then whence these glorious forms,
“ And boundless flights, from Shapeless, and Repos’d?
“ Has matter more than motion? Has it thought,
“ Judgment, and genius? Is it deeply learn’d
“ In Mathematics? Has it fram’d such laws,
“ Which but to guess, a NEWTON made immortal?—
“ If

- " If so, how each sage atom laughs at me,
 " Who think a Clod inferior to a Man !
 " If art, to form; and counsel, to conduct;
 " And that with greater far, than human skill;
 " Resides not in each block;—a GODHEAD reigns.—
 " Grant, then, invisible, eternal, M I N D;
 " That granted, all is solv'd.—But, granting that,
 " Draw I not o'er me a still darker cloud?
 " Grant I not that which I can ne'er conceive?
 " A being without origin, or end!—
 " Hail, human liberty! There is no G O D—
 " Yet, Why? On either scheme that knot subsists;
 " Subsist it must, in G O D, or Human Race;
 " If in the last, how many knots beside,
 " Indissoluble all?—Why chuse it There,
 " Where, chosen, still subsist ten thousand more?
 " Reject it, where, That chosen, all the rest
 " Dispers'd, leave Reason's whole horizon clear?
 " This is not reason's dictate; Reason says,
 " Close with the side where One grain turns the scale;
 " What vast preponderance is here! can reason
 " With louder voice exclaim—Believe a G O D?
 " And Reason heard, is the sole mark of man.
 " What things impossible must man think true,
 " On any other system! and how strange
 " To disbelieve, thro' mere credulity!"

If, in this chain, LORENZO finds no flaw,
 Let it for ever bind him to Belief.

And where the link, in which a flaw he finds?

And, if a G O D there is, that G O D how great!

How great that Pow'r, whose providential care
 Thro' these bright orbs dark centres darts a ray !
 Of Nature universal threads the whole !
 And hangs Creation, like a precious gem,
 Tho' little, on the footstool of his throne !

That little gem, how large ! A weight let fall
 From a fixt star, in ages can it reach
 This distant Earth ? Say, then, LORENZO ! where,
 Where, ends this mighty building ? Where, begin
 The suburbs of Creation ? Where, the wall
 Whose battlements look o'er into the vale
 Of non-existence ? NOTHING'S strange abode !
 Say, at what point of space JEHOVAH dropp'd
 His slacken'd Line, and laid His Balance by ;
 Weigh'd Worlds, and measur'd Infinite, no more ?
 Where, rears His terminating Pillar high
 Its extra-mundane head ? and says, to gods,
 In characters illustrious as the sun,

*I stand, the plan's proud period ; I pronounce
 The work accomplish'd ; the Creation clos'd :
 Shout, all ye gods ! nor shout ye gods alone ;
 Of all that lives, or, if devoid of life,
 That rests, or rolls, ye heights, and depths, resound !
 Resound ! resound ! ye depths, and heights, resound !*

Hard are those questions ?—Answer harder still.
 Is This the sole exploit, the single birth,
 The solitary Son of Pow'r Divine ?
 Or has the Almighty FATHER, with a breath,
 Impregnated the womb of distant Space ?
 Has He not bid, in various provinces,

Brother-

Brother-Creations the dark bowels burst
 Of Night primæval; barren, now, no more?
 And He the central sun, transpiercing all
 Those Giant-Generations, which disport,
 And dance, as Motes, in his meridian ray;
 That ray withdrawn, benighted, or absorb'd,
 In that Abyss of Horror, whence they sprung;
 While Chaos triumphs, repossess'd of all
 Rival Creation ravish'd from his throne?
 CHAOS! of Nature both the womb, and grave!

Think'st thou, my scheme, LORENZO, spreads too
 Is this extravagant?—No; this is just; [wide?
 Just, in conjecture, tho' 'twere false in fact.
 If 'tis an error, 'tis an error sprung
 From noble root, high thought of the MOST-HIGH.
 But wherefore error? Who can prove it such?—
 He that can set OMNIPOTENCE a bound.
 Can man conceive beyond what GOD can do?
 Nothing, but quite Impossible is hard.
 He summons into being, with like ease,
 A whole Creation, and a single Grain.
 Speaks he the word? a thousand worlds are born!—
 A Thousand worlds? there's space for Millions more;
 And in what space can his great Fiat fail?
 Condemn me not, cold critic! but indulge
 The warm Imagination: Why condemn?
 Why not indulge such thoughts, as swell our hearts
 With fuller admiration of That Power,
 Who gives our hearts with such high thoughts to swell?
 Why not indulge in His augmented praise?

Darts not His glory a still brighter ray,
 The less is left to Chaos, and the realms
 Of hideous Night, where Fancy strays aghast;
 And, tho' most talkative, makes no report?

Still seems my thought enormous? Think again;—
Experience 'self shall aid thy lame belief.

Glasses (that revelation to the sight!)

Have they not led us in the deep disclose

Of fine-spun Nature, exquisitely small,

And, tho' demonstrated, still ill-conceiv'd?

If, then, on the reverse, the mind would mount

In Magnitude, what mind can mount too far,

To keep the balance, and creation poise?

Defect alone can err on such a theme;

What is too great, if we the Cause survey?

Stupendous ARCHITECT! THOU, THOU art all!

My soul flies up and down in thoughts of THEE,

And finds herself but at the centre still!

I A M, thy name! Existence, all Thine own!

Creation's nothing; flatter'd much, if styl'd

"The thin, the fleeting Atmosphere of G O D."

O for the voice—of what? of whom?—What voice

Can answer to my wants, in such ascent,

As dares to deem one universe too small?

Tell me, LORENZO! (for now Fancy glows, Fir'd in the vortex of Almighty power)

Is not this home-creation, in the map

Of universal Nature, as a speck,

Like fair BRITANNIA in our little ball;

Exceeding fair, and glorious, for its size,

But,

But, elsewhere, far out-measur'd, far outshone?
In Fancy (for the fact beyond us lies)
Canst thou not figure it, an Isle, almost Too small for notice, in the Vast of being;
Sever'd by mighty seas of un-built space
From other realms; from ample Continents
Of higher life, where nobler natives dwell;
Less Northern, less remote from DEITY,
Glowing beneath the Line of the SUPREME;
Where souls in excellence make haste, put forth
Luxuriant growths; nor the late autumn wait
Of Human worth, but ripen soon to gods?

Yet why drown Fancy in such depths as these?
Return, presumptuous rover! and confess
The bounds of man; nor blame them, as too small.
Enjoy we not full scope in what is seen?
Full ample the dominions of the sun!
Full glorious to behold! How far, how wide,
The matchless monarch, from his flaming throne,
Lavish of lustre, throws his beams about him,
Farther, and faster, than a thought can fly,
And feeds his planets with eternal fires!
This Heliopolis, by greater far,
Than the proud tyrant of the Nile, was built;
And He alone, who built it, can destroy.
Beyond this City, why strays human thought?
One wonderful, enough for man to know!
One infinite, enough for man to range!
One firmament, enough for man to read!
O what voluminous instruction here!

58 The CONSOLATION. Night 9.

What page of wisdom is deny'd him? None;
 If learning his chief lesson makes him wise.
 Nor is Instruction, here, our only gain;
 There dwells a noble pathos in the skies,
 Which warms our passions, profelytes our hearts.
 How eloquently shines the glowing pole!
 With what authority it gives its charge,
 Remonstrating great truths in style sublime,
 Tho' silent, loud! heard earth around; above.
 The planets heard; and not unheard in hell;
Hell has her wonder, tho' too proud to praise:
 Is Earth, then, more infernal? Has she those,
 Who neither praise (LORENZO!) nor admire?

LORENZO's admiration, pre-engag'd,
 Ne'er ask'd the Moon one question; never held
 Least correspondence with a single star;
 Ne'er rear'd an altar to the Queen of Heaven.
 Walking in brightness; or her train ador'd.
 Their sublunary rivals have long since
 Engross'd his whole devotion; Stars malign,
 Which made their fond Astronomer run mad;
 Darken his intellect, corrupt his heart;
 Cause him to sacrifice his fame and peace
 To momentary madness, call'd delight.
 Idolater, more gross than ever kiss'd
 The lifted hand to LUNA, or pour'd out
 The blood to Jove!—O THOU, to whom belongs
 All sacrifice! O Thou Great Jove unfeign'd!
 DIVINE INSTRUCTOR! Thy first volume, This,
 For Man's perusal; All in CAPITALS!

In Moon, and Stars (heav'n's golden alphabet!)
Emblaz'd to seize the sight; who runs, may read;
Who reads, can understand. 'Tis unconfin'd
To Christian land, or Jewry; fairly writ,
In language universal, to MANKIND:
A language, Lofty to the learn'd; yet Plain
To those that feed the flock, or guide the plough,
Or, from its husk, strike out the bounding grain.
A language, worthy the GREAT MIND, that speaks!
Preface, and Comment, to the Sacred Page!
Which oft refers its reader to the skies,
As pre-supposing his first lesson there,
And Scripture self a Fragment, That unread.
Stupendous book of wisdom, to the wise!
Stupendous book! and open'd, NIGHT! by Thee.

By Thee much open'd, I confess, O Night!
Yet more I wish; but how shall I prevail?
Say, gentle Night! whose modest, maiden beams,
Give us a new creation, and present
The world's great picture soften'd to the sight;
Nay, kinder far, far more indulgent still,
Say, thou, whose mild dominion's silver key
Unlocks our hemisphere, and sets to view
Worlds beyond number; worlds conceal'd by day
Behind the proud, and envious star of noon!
Canst thou not draw a deeper scene?—And shew
The Mighty POTENTATE, to whom belong
These rich Regalia pompously display'd
To kindle that high hope? Like Him of Uz,

I gaze around ; I search on ev'ry side —
O for a glimpse of HIM my soul adores !
As the chas'd hart, amid the desert waste,
Pants for the living stream ; for HIM who made her,
So pants the thirsty soul, amid the blank
Of sublunary joys. Say, goddess ! Where ?
Where, blazes His bright court ? Where burns His throne ?
Thou know'st ; for Thou art near Him ; by Thee, round
His grand pavilion, sacred fame reports
The sable curtain drawn. If not, can none
Of thy fair daughter-train, so swift of wing,
Who travel far, discover where He dwells ?
A Star His dwelling pointed out below.
Ye Pleiades ! Arcturus ! Mazaroth !
And thou, Orion ! of still keener eye !
Say ye, who guide the wilder'd in the waves,
And bring them out of tempest into port !
On which hand must I bend my course to find Him ?
These courtiers keep the secret of their KING ;
I wake whole nights, in vain, to steal it from them.
I wake ; and, waking, climb Night's radiant scale,
From sphere to sphere ; the steps by nature set
For man's ascent ; at once to tempt and aid ;
To tempt his eye, and aid his tow'ring thought ;
Till it arrives at the Great GOAL of all.
In ardent Contemplation's rapid car,
From Earth, as from my barrier, I set out.
How swift I mount ! Diminish'd Earth recedes ;
I pass the Moon ; and, from her farther side,
Pierce heav'n's blue curtain ; strike into Remote ;

Where,

Where, with his lifted tube, the subtil sage
His artificial, airy journey takes,
And to Celestial lengthens Human fight.
I pause at ev'ry Planet on my road,
And ask for HIM who gives their orbs to roll,
Their foreheads fair to shine. From SATURN's ring,
In which, of Earths an army might be lost,
With the bold Comet, take my bolder flight,
Amid those sov'reign glories of the skies,
Of independent, native lustre, proud ;
The souls of systems ! and the lords of life,
Thro' their wide empires !—What behold I now ?
A wilderness of wonders burning round ;
Where larger suns inhabit higher spheres ;
Perhaps the villas of descending gods !
Nor halt I here ; my toil is but begun ;
'Tis but the threshold of the DEITY ;
Or, far beneath it, I am groveling still.
Nor is it strange ; I built on a mistake ;
The grandeur of his works, whence folly fought
For aid, to reason sets his glory higher ;
Who built thus high for worms (mere worms to Him)
O where, LORENZO ! must the BUILDER dwell ?

Pause, then ; and, for a moment, here respire—
If human thought can keep its station Here.
Where am I ?—Where is Earth ?—Nay, where art Thou,
O Sun ?—Is the sun turn'd recluse ?—And are
His boasted expeditions short to Mine ?—
To mine, how short ! On Nature's Alps I stand,
And see a thousand firmaments beneath !

A thou-

A thousand systems ! as a thousand grains !
So much a stranger, and so late arriv'd,
How can man's curious spirit not enquire,
What are the natives of this world sublime,
Of this so foreign, un-terrestrial sphere,
Where mortal, untranslated, never stray'd ?

“ O Ye, as distant from my little home,
“ As swiftest sun-beams in an age can fly !
“ Far from my native element I roam,
“ In quest of New, and Wonderful, to man.
“ What province This, of His immense domain,
“ Whom All obeys ? Or mortals here, or gods ?
“ Ye bord'ers on the coasts of bliss ! what are you ?
“ A colony from heav'n ? Or, only rais'd,
“ By frequent visit from heav'n's neighbouring realms,
“ To secondary gods, and half-divine ?—
“ Whate'er your nature, This is past dispute,
“ Far other life you live, far other tongue
“ You talk, far other thought, perhaps, you think,
“ Than man. How various are the works of God !
“ But say, What thought ? Is Reason here inthron'd,
“ And absolute ? Or Sense in arms against her ?
“ Have you Two lights ? Or need you no reveal'd ?
“ Enjoy your happy realms their golden age ?
“ And had your EDEN an abstemious EVE ?
“ Our EVE's fair daughters prove their pedigree,
“ And ask their ADAMS—‘ Who would not be Wise ?’
“ Or, if your mother fell, are you redeem'd ?
“ And if redeem'd—is your Redeemer scorn'd ?
“ Is This your final residence ? If not,

“ Change

“ Change you your scene, Translated? Or by Death?
 “ And if by Death; What Death?—Know you Disease?
 “ Or horrid War?—With war, This fatal hour,
 “ EUROPA groans (so call we a small field,
 “ Where kings run mad). In Our world, DEATH deposes “ Intemperance to do the work of Age;
 “ And, hanging up the quiver Nature gave him,
 “ As flow of execution, for dispatch
 “ Sends forth Imperial butchers; bids them slay
 “ Their sheep (the silly sheep they fleec’d before),
 “ And tofs him twice ten thousand at a meal.
 “ Sit all your executioners on thrones?
 “ With you, can rage for plunder make a god?
 “ And bloodshed wash out ev’ry other stain?—
 “ But You, perhaps, can’t bleed: From matter gross
 “ Your Spirits clean, are delicately clad
 “ In fine-spun Æther, privileg’d to soar, “ Unloaded, uninfected; How unlike
 “ The lot of man! How few of human race
 “ By their own mud unmurder’d! How we wage “ Self-war eternal!—Is your painful day
 “ Of hardy conflict o’er? Or, are you still “ Raw candidates at school? And have you Those “ Who disaffect Reversions, as with Us?—
 “ But what are We? You never heard of Man;
 “ Or Earth, the Bedlam of the universe!
 “ Where Reason (un-diseas’d with You) runs mad,
 “ And nurses Folly’s children as her own;
 “ Fond of the foulest. In the sacred mount
 “ Of Holiness, where reason is pronounc’d “ Infallible;

- “ Infalible ; and thunders, like a god ;
 “ Ev’n there, by Saints, the Dæmons are outdone ;
 “ What These think wrong, our Saints refine to right ;
 “ And kindly teach dull hell her own black arts ;
 “ SATAN, instructed, o’er their morals smiles.—
 “ But This, how strange to You, who know not Man !
 “ Has the least rumour of our race arriv’d ?
 “ Call’d here ELIJAH, in his flaming car ?
 “ Past by you the good ENOCH, on his road
 “ To those fair fields, whence LUCIFER was hurl’d ;
 “ Who brush’d, perhaps, your sphere, in his descent,
 “ Stain’d your pure crystal Æther, or let fall
 “ A short eclipse from his portentous shade ?
 “ O ! that the fiend had lodg’d on some broad orb—
 “ Athwart his way ; nor reach’d his present home,
 “ Then blacken’d Earth with footsteps foul’d in hell,
 “ Nor wash’d in Ocean, as from ROME he past
 “ To BRITAIN’S isle ; too, too, conspicuous There !”

But This is all digression : Where is HE,
 That o’er heav’n’s battlements the felon hurl’d
 To groans, and chains, and darkness ? Where is HE,
 Who sees creation’s summit in a vale ?
 HE, Whom, while man is Man, he can’t but seek ;
 And if he finds, commences more than man ?
 O for a telescope His throne to reach !
 Tell me, ye learn’d on Earth ! or blest Above !
 Ye searching, ye Newtonian angels ! tell,
 Where, your Great MASTER’S orb ? His planets, where ?
 Those conscious Satellites, those Morning-stars,
 First-born of DEITY ! from central love,

By

The CONSOLATION.

By veneration most profound, thrown off ;
By sweet attraction, no less strongly drawn ;
Aw'd, and yet raptur'd ; raptur'd, yet serene ;
Past thought, illustrious, but with borrow'd beams ;
In still approaching circles, still remote,
Revolving round the sun's eternal SIRE ?
Or sent, in lines direct, on embassies
To nations—in what latitude ?—Beyond
Terrestrial thought's horizon !—And on what
High errands sent ?—Here human effort ends ;
And leaves me still a stranger to His throne.

Full well it might ! I quite mistook my road.
Born in an age more Curious than Devout ;
More fond to fix the place of heav'n, or hell,
Than studious this to shun, or that secure.
'Tis not the curious, but the pious path,
That leads me to my point : LORENZO ! know,
Without or Star, or Angel, for their guide,
Who worship GOD, shall find Him. Humble Love,
And not proud Reason, keeps the door of heav'n ;
Love finds admission, where proud Science fails.
Man's science is the culture of his heart ;
And not to lose his plumbet in the depths
Of Nature, or the more profound of GOD.
Either to know, is an attempt that sets
The wisest on a level with the fool.
To fathom Nature (ill-attempted Here !)
Past doubt is deep philosophy Above ;
Higher degrees in bliss archangels take,
As deeper learn'd ; the deepest, learning still.

For,

For, what a thunder of omnipotence
(So might I dare to speak) is seen in All!
In Man! in Earth! In more amazing Skies!
Teaching this lesson, Pride is loth to learn——

“ Not deeply to discern, not much to know,
“ Mankind was born to WONDER, and ADORE.”

And is there cause for higher wonder still,
Than that which struck us from our past surveys?
Yes; and for deeper adoration too.

From my late airy travel unconfin'd,
Have I learn'd nothing?——Yes, LORENZO! This;
Each of these stars is a religious house;
I saw their altars smoke, their incense rise,
And heard Hosannas ring thro' ev'ry sphere,
A seminary fraught with future gods.

Nature all o'er is consecrated ground,
Teeming with growths immortal, and divine:
The Great PROPRIETOR's all-bounteous hand
Leaves nothing waste; but sows these fiery fields
With seeds of reason, which to virtues rise
Beneath His genial ray; and, if escap'd
The pestilential blasts of stubborn will,
When grown mature, are gather'd for the skies.

And is Devotion thought too much on earth,
When beings, so superior, homage boast,
And triumph in prostrations to THE THRONE?

But wherefore more of planets, or of stars?
Æthereal journeys, and, discover'd there,
Ten thousand worlds, ten thousand ways devout,
All Nature sending incense to THE THRONE,

Except

Except the bold LORENZO's of Our sphere?
 Op'ning the solemn sources of my soul,
 Since I have pour'd, like feign'd ERIDANUS,
 My flowing numbers o'er the flaming skies,
 Nor see, of fancy, or of fact, what more
 Invites the muse—Here turn we, and review
 Our past nocturnal landschape wide:—Then say,
 Say, then, LORENZO! with what burst of heart,
 The whole, at once, revolving in his thought,
 Must man exclaim, adoring, and aghast?
 “ O what a root! O what a branch, is here!
 “ O what a Father! What a Family!
 “ Worlds! systems! and creations!—And creations,
 “ In one agglomerated cluster, hung,
 “ * Great VINE! On THEE, on THEE the cluster hangs;
 “ The filial cluster! infinitely spread
 “ In glowing globes, with various being fraught;
 “ And drinks (nectareous draught!) immortal life.
 “ Or, shall I say (for who can say enough?)
 “ A constellation of ten thousand gems,
 “ (And, O! of what dimension! of what weight!)
 “ Set in one Signet, flames on the right-hand
 “ Of MAJESTY DIVINE! The blazing Seal,
 “ That deeply stamps, on all created mind,
 “ Indelible, His sovereign attributes,
 “ OMNIPOTENCE, and LOVE! That, passing bound:
 “ And This, surpassing That. Nor stop we Here,
 “ For want of Pow'r in GOD, but Thought in MAN.
 “ Ev'n This acknowleg'd, leaves us still in debt;

* John xv. 1.

“ If Greater aught, That Greater all is THINE, “ DREAD SIRE!—Accept this Miniature of THEE;
 “ And pardon an Attempt from mortal thought,
 “ In which archangels might have fail’d, unblam’d.”

How such ideas of th’ ALMIGHTY’s Pow’r,
 And such ideas of th’ ALMIGHTY’s Plan,
 (Ideas not absurd) distend the thought
 Of feeble mortals! Nor of them alone!
 The fulness of the DEITY breaks forth
 In Inconceivables to men, and gods.
 Think, then, O think; nor ever drop the thought;
 How low must Man descend, when Gods adore!—
 Have I not, then, accomplish’d my proud boast?
 Did I not tell thee, “ * We would mount, LORENZO!
 “ And kindle our devotion at the Stars?”

And have I fail’d? And did I flatter thee?
 And art all adamant? And dost confute
 All urg’d, with one irrefragable Smile?
 LORENZO! Mirth how miserable here!
 Swear by the Stars, by HIM who made them, swear,
 Thy heart, henceforth, shall be as pure as They:
 Then Thou, like Them, shalt shine; like Them, shalt rise
 From low to lofty; from obscure to bright;
 By due gradation, Nature’s sacred law.
 The Stars, from whence?—Ask Chaos—He can tell.
 These bright temptations to idolatry,
 From Darkness, and Confusion, took their birth;
 Sons of Deformity! From fluid dregs
Tartarean, first they rose to masses rude;

And then, to spheres opaque ; Then dimly shone ;
Then brighten'd ; Then blaz'd out in perfect day.

Nature delights in progress ; in advance

From worse to better : But, when Minds ascend,
Progress, in part, depends upon themselves.

Heav'n aids exertion ; Greater makes the Great ;

The voluntary Little lessens more.

O be a Man ! and thou shalt be a God !

And Half Self-made !—Ambition how Divine !

O Thou, ambitious of disgrace alone !

Still undevout ? unkindled ?—Tho' high-taught,
School'd by the skies ; and pupil of the stars ;
Rank coward to the fashionable world !

Art thou asham'd to bend thy knee to heaven ?

Curst fume of pride, exhal'd from deepest hell !

Pride in Religion is man's highest praise.

Bent on destruction ! and in love with death !

Not all these luminaries, quench'd at once,

Were half so sad, as one benighted mind,

Which gropes for happiness, and meets despair.

How, like a widow in her weeds, the Night,

Amid her glimm'ring tapers, silent sits !

How sorrowful, how desolate, she weeps

Perpetual dews, and saddens nature's scene !

A scene more sad Sin makes the darken'd soul,

All comfort kills, nor leaves one spark alive.

Tho' blind of heart, still open is thine eye :

Why such magnificence in all thou seest ?

Of Matter's grandeur, know, one end is This,

To tell the Rational, who gazes on it—

Tho'

“ Tho’ That immensely Great, still Greater He,
“ Whose breast, capacious, can embrace, and lodge,
“ Unburden’d, nature’s universal scheme;
“ Can grasp Creation with a single thought;
“ Creation grasp; and not exclude its SIRE”—
To tell him farther—“ It behoves him much
“ To guard th’ important, yet depending, fate
“ Of being, brighter than a thousand suns:
“ One single ray of Thought outshines them all.”—
And if man hears obedient, soon he’ll soar
Superior heights, and on his purple wing,
His purple wing bedrop’d with eyes of gold,
Rising, where Thought is now deny’d to rise,
Look down triumphant on these dazzling spheres.

Why then persist?—No mortal ever liv’d
But, dying, he pronounc’d (when words are true!)
The whole that charms thee, absolutely vain;
Vain, and far worse!—Think Thou, with dying men;
O condescend to think as angels think!
O tolerate a chance for happiness!
Our nature such, ill choice ensures ill fate;
And hell had been, tho’ there had been no God.
Dost thou not know, my new astronomer!
Earth, turning from the Sun, brings night to man?
Man, turning from his God, brings endless night;
Where thou canst read no morals, find no friend,
Amend no manners, and expect no peace.
How deep the darkness! and the groan, how loud!
And far, how far, from lambent are the flames!—
Such is LORENZO’S purchase! Such his praise!

The proud, the politic, LORENZO's praise !
Tho' in his ear, and levell'd at his heart,
I've half read o'er the volume of the skies.

For think not thou hast heard all This from me ;
My song but echoes what Great Nature speaks.
What has she spoken ? Thus the goddess spoke,
Thus speaks for ever :—" Place, at nature's head,
" A sov'reign, which o'er all things rolls his eye,
" Extends his wing, promulgates his commands,
" But, above all, diffuses endless good ;
" To whom, for sure redress, the wrong'd may fly ;
" The vile, for mercy ; and the pain'd, for peace ;
" By whom, the various tenants of these spheres,
" Diversify'd in fortunes, place, and powers,
" Rais'd in enjoyment, as in worth they rise,
" Arrive at length (if worthy such approach)
" At that blest fountain-head, from which they stream ;
" Where conflict past redoubles present joy ;
" And present joy looks forward on increase ;
" And That, on more ; no period ! ev'ry step
" A double boon ! a Promise, and a Bliss."

How easy fits this scheme on human hearts !
It suits their make ; it soothes their vast desires ;
Passion is pleas'd ; and Reason asks no more ;
'Tis rational ! 'tis Great !—But what is Thine ?
It darkens ! shocks ! excruciates ! and confounds !
Leaves us quite naked, both of help, and hope,
Sinking from bad to worse ; few years, the sport
Of Fortune ; then, the morsel of Despair.

Say, then, LORENZO ! (for thou know'st it well)

What's

What's Vice?—Mere want of compass in our thought.

Religion, what?—The proof of Common-sense;

How art thou whooted, where the Least prevails!

Is it my fault, if these Truths call thee Fool?

And thou shalt never be miscall'd by me.

Can neither Shame, nor Terror, stand thy friend?

And art thou still an insect in the mire?

How, like thy guardian angel, have I flown;

Snatch'd thee from earth; escorted thee thro' all

Th' ethereal armies; walkt thee, like a God,

Thro' splendors of first magnitude, arrang'd

On either hand; clouds thrown beneath thy feet;

Close-cruis'd on the bright paradise of GOD;

And almost introduc'd thee to THE THRONE!

And art thou still carousing, for delight,

Rank poison; first, fermenting to mere froth,

And then subsiding into final gall?

To beings of sublime, immortal make,

How shocking is all joy, whose end is sure!

Such joy more shocking still, the more it charms!

And dost thou chuse what ends ere well-begun;

And infamous, as short? And dost thou chuse

(Thou, to whose palate Glory is so sweet)

To wade into perdition, thro' contempt,

Not of poor bigots only, but thy own?

For I have peep'd into thy cover'd heart,

And seen it blush beneath a boastful brow;

For, by strong guilt's most violent assault,

Conscience is but disabled, not destroy'd.

O thou most Aweful Being! and most Vain;

Thy

Thy will, how frail! how glorious is thy power!
 Tho' dread ETERNITY has sown her seeds
 Of bliss, and woe, in thy despotic breast;
 Tho' heav'n, and hell, depend upon thy choice;
 A butterfly comes crows, and both are fled.
 Is This the picture of a rational?
 This horrid image, shall it be most just?
 LORENZO! No: It cannot,—shall not, be,
 If there is force in Reason; or, in Sounds
 Chanted beneath the glimpses of the moon,
 A magic, at this planetary hour,
 When slumber locks the gen'ral lip, and dreams
 Thro' senseless mazes hunt souls uninspir'd.
 Attend—The sacred mysteries begin—
 My solemn Night-born adjuration hear;
 Hear, and I'll raise thy spirit from the dust;
 While the stars gaze on this enchantment new;
 Enchantment, not Infernal, but Divine!

“ By Silence, DEATH's peculiar attribute;
 “ By Darknefs, GUILT's inevitable doom;
 “ By Darknefs, and by Silence, sisters dread!
 “ That draw the curtain round NIGHT's ebon throne,
 “ And raise ideas, solemn as the scene!
 “ By NIGHT, and all of awful, Night presents
 “ To Thought, or Sense (of awful much, to both,
 “ The goddess brings)! By These her trembling Fires,
 “ Like VESTA's, ever-burning; and, like hers,
 “ Sacred to thoughts immaculate, and pure!
 “ By these bright orators, that prove, and praise,

“ And press thee to revere, the DEITY ;
“ Perhaps, too, aid thee, when rever'd awhile,
“ To reach his throne ; as stages of the soul,
“ Thro' which, at diff'rent periods, she shall pass,
“ Refining gradual, for her final height,
“ And purging off some dross at ev'ry sphere !
“ By this dark pall thrown o'er the silent world !
“ By the world's kings, and kingdoms, most renown'd,
“ From short ambition's zenith fet for ever ;
“ Sad presage to vain boasters, now in bloom !
“ By the long list of swift mortality,
“ From ADAM downward to this ev'ning knell,
“ Which midnight waves in fancy's startled eye ;
“ And shocks her with an hundred centuries,
“ Round death's black banner throng'd, in human thought !
“ By thousands, now, resigning their last breath,
“ And calling thee—wert thou so wise to hear ;
“ By tombs o'er tombs arising ; human earth
“ Ejected, to make room for—human earth ;
“ The monarch's terror ! and the sexton's trade !
“ By pompous obsequies that shun the day,
“ The torch funereal, and the nodding plume,
“ Which makes poor man's humiliation proud ;
“ Boast of our ruin ! triumph of our dust !
“ By the damp vault that weeps o'er royal bones ;
“ And the pale lamp that shews the ghastly dead,
“ More ghastly, through the thick incumbent gloom !
“ By visits (if there are) from darker scenes,
“ The gliding spectre ! and the groaning grove !

“ By

“ By groans, and graves, and miseries that groan
 “ For the grave’s shelter ! By desponding men, “ Senseless to pains of death, from pangs of guilt !
 “ By guilt’s last audit ! By yon moon in blood,
 “ The rocking firmament, the falling stars,
 “ And thunder’s last discharge, great nature’s knell !
 “ By SECOND chaos ; and ETERNAL night !—
 Be wise—Nor let PHILANDER blame my charm ;
 But own not ill discharg’d my double debt,
Love to the living ; duty to the dead.

For know I’m but executor ; he left
 This moral legacy ; I make it o’er
 By his command ; PHILANDER hear in me ;
 And heav’n in both.—If deaf to these, Oh ! hear
 FLORELLO’s tender voice ; his weal depends
 On thy resolve ; it trembles at thy choice ;
 For his sake—love thyself : example strikes
 All human hearts ; a bad example more ;
 More still a Father’s ; that ensures his ruin.
 As parent of his being, wouldst thou prove
 Th’ unnatural parent of his miseries,
 And make him curse the being which thou gav’st ?
 Is this the blessing of so fond a father ?
 If careless of LORENZO ! spare, Oh ! spare
 FLORELLO’s father, and PHILANDER’s friend !
 FLORELLO’s father ruin’d, ruins Him ;
 And from PHILANDER’s friend the world expects
 A conduct, no dishonour to the dead.
 Let passion do, what nobler motive should ;

E z om diw bno i Hw n Let

Let love, and emulation, rise in aid
To reason; and persuade thee to be—blest.

This seems not a request to be deny'd;
Yet (such th' infatuation of mankind!)

'Tis the most hopeless, man can make to man.

Shall I, then rise, in argument, and warmth?

And urge PHILANDER's posthumous advice,

From topics yet unbroach'd?—

But Oh! I faint! My spirits fail!—Nor strange!

So long on wing, and in no middle clime!

To which my great CREATOR's glory call'd:

And calls—but, now, in vain. Sleep's dewy wand

Has strok'd my drooping lids, and promises

My long arrear of rest; the downy god

(Wont to return with our returning peace)

Will pay, ere-long, and blest me with repose.

Haste, haste, sweet stranger! from the peasant's cot,

The ship-boy's hammock, or the soldier's straw,

Whence sorrow never chas'd thee; with thee bring,

Not hideous visions, as of late; but draughts

Delicious of well-tasted, cordial, rest;

Man's rich restorative; his balmy bath,

That supples, lubricates, and keeps in play

The various movements of this nice machine,

Which asks such frequent periods of repair.

When tir'd with vain rotations of the day,

Sleep winds us up for the succeeding dawn;

Fresh we spin on, till sickness clogs our wheels,

Or death quite breaks the spring, and motion ends.

When will it end with me?

“THOU

———“ THOU only know’st,
 “ THOU, whose broad eye the future, and the past,
 “ Joins to the present ; making one of three
 “ To mortal thought ! THOU know’st, and THOU alone,
 “ All-knowing !—All-unknown !—And yet well-known !
 “ Near, tho’ remote ! and, tho’ unfathom’d, felt !
 “ And, tho’ invisible, for ever seen !
 “ And seen in all ! the great, and the minute :
 “ Each globe above, with its gigantic race,
 “ Each flow’r, each leaf, with its small people swarm’d,
 “ (Those puny vouchers of OMNIPOTENCE !)
 “ To the first thought, that asks, “ From whence ? ” declare
 “ Their common source. THOU Fountain, running o’er
 “ In rivers of communicated joy !
 “ Who gav’st us speech for far, far humbler themes !
 “ Say, by what name shall I presume to call “ HIM I see burning in these countless suns,
 “ As Moses, in the bush ? ILLUSTRIOUS MIND !
 “ The whole creation, less, far less, to Thee,
 “ Than that to the creation’s ample round.
 “ How shall I name THEE ?—How my labouring soul
 “ Heaves underneath the thought, too big for birth !
 “ Great System of perfections ! Mighty Cause
 “ Of causes mighty ! Cause uncaus’d ! Sole Root
 “ Of nature, that luxuriant growth of GOD !
 “ First Father of effects ! that progeny
 “ Of endless series ; where the golden chain’s
 “ Last link admits a period, who can tell ?
 “ Father of all that is or heard, or hears !

“ Father of all that is or seen, or sees !
“ Father of all that is, or shall arise !
“ Father of this immeasurable mass
“ Of matter multiform ; or dense, or rare ;
“ Opaque, or lucid ; rapid, or at rest ;
“ Minute, or passing bound ! in each extreme
“ Of like amaze, and mystery, to man.
“ Father of these bright millions of the night !
“ Of which the least full Godhead had proclaim'd,
“ And thrown the gazer on his knee—Or, say,
“ Is appellation higher still, Thy choice ?
“ Father of matter's temporary lords !
“ Father of spirits ! nobler offspring ! sparks
“ Of high paternal glory ; rich endow'd
“ With various measures, and with various modes
“ Of instinct, reason, intuition ; beams
“ More pale, or bright from day divine, to break
“ The dark of matter organiz'd (the ware
“ Of all created spirit) ; beams, that rise
“ Each over other in superior light,
“ Till the last ripens into lustre strong,
“ Of next approach to GODHEAD. Father fond “ (Far fonder than e'er bore that name on earth)
“ Of intellectual beings ! beings blest
“ With pow'rs to please THEE ; not of passive ply
“ To laws they know not ; beings lodg'd in seats
“ Of well-adapted joys, in different domes
“ Of this imperial palace for thy sons ;
“ Of this proud, populous, well-policy'd, “ Though

" Though boundless habitation, plann'd by THEE :
 " Whose several clans their several climates suit ;
 " And transposition, doubtless, would destroy.
 " Or, Oh ! indulge, immortal KING, indulge
 " A title, less august indeed, but more
 " Endearing ; ah ! how sweet in human ears !
 " Sweet in our ears, and triumph in our hearts !
 " Father of immortality to man !
 " A theme that * lately set my soul on fire—
 " And THOU the NEXT ! yet Equal ! THOU, by whom
 " That blessing was convey'd ; far more ! was bought ;
 " Ineffable the price ! by whom all worlds
 " Were made ; and one, redeem'd ! illustrious Light
 " From Light illustrious ! THOU, whose regal power,
 " Finite in time, but infinite in space,
 " On more than adamantine basis fix'd,
 " O'er more, far more, than diadems, and thrones,
 " Inviolably reigns ; the Dread of gods !
 " And Oh ! the Friend of man ! beneath whose foot,
 " And by the mandate of whose awful nod,
 " All regions, revolutions, fortunes, fates,
 " Of high, of low, of mind, and matter, roll
 " Thro' the short chanel of expiring time,
 " Or shoreless ocean of eternity,
 " Calm, or tempestuous (as thy Spirit breathes),
 " In absolute subjection !—And, O THOU
 " The glorious THIRD ! Distinct, not separate !
 " Beaming from Both ! with Both incorporate ;
 " And (strange to tell !) incorporate with dust !

* Nights the Sixth and Seventh.

" By condescension, as Thy glory, great,
 " Enshrin'd in man! Of human hearts, if pure,
 " Divine inhabitant! The tie divine
 " Of heav'n with distant earth! by whom, I trust,
 " (If not inspir'd) uncensur'd this address
 " To THEE, to THEM—To whom?—Mysterious Power!
 " Reveal'd—yet unreveal'd! Darknefs in light;
 " Number in unity! our Joy! our Dread!
 " The Triple Bolt that lays all wrong in ruin!
 " That animates all right, the Triple Sun!
 " Sun of the soul! her never-setting sun!
 " Triune, Unutterable, Unconceiv'd,
 " Absconding, yet Demonstrable, GREAT GOD!
 " Greater than Greatest! Better than the Best!
 " Kinder than Kindest! with soft pity's eye,
 " Or (stronger still to speak it) with Thine Own,
 " From Thy bright home, from that high Firmament,
 " Where THOU, from all eternity, hast dwelt;
 " Beyond archangels unassisted ken;
 " From far above what mortals highest call;
 " From elevation's pinnacle; look down,
 " Through—What? Confounding interval! Thro' all,
 " And more, than lab'ring fancy can conceive?
 " Through radiant ranks of essences unknown;
 " Through hierarchies from hierarchies detach'd
 " Round various banners of OMNIPOTENCE,
 " With endless change of rapturous duties fir'd;
 " Thro' wond'rous beings interposing swarms,
 " All clustering at the call, to dwell in THEE;
 " Through

" Through this wide waste of worlds ! this vista vast,
 " All fanded o'er with suns ; suns turn'd to night
 " Before thy feeblest beam—Look down—down—down,
 " On a poor breathing particle in dust,
 " Or, lower, an immortal in his crimes.
 " His crimes forgive ! forgive his virtues, too !
 " Those smaller faults, half-converts to the right.
 " Nor let me close these eyes, which never more
 " May see the sun (though night's descending scale
 " Now weighs up morn), unpity'd, and unblest !
 " In Thy displeasure dwells eternal pain ;
 " Pain, our aversion ; pain, which strikes me now ;
 " And, since all pain is terrible to man,
 " Though transient, terrible ; at Thy good hour,
 " Gently, ah gently, lay me in my bed,
 " My clay-cold bed ! by nature, now, so near ;
 " By nature, near ; still nearer by disease !
 " Till then, be this, an emblem of my grave :
 " Let it out-preach the preacher ; ev'ry night
 " Let it out-cry the boy at PHILIP'S ear ;
 " That tongue of death ! that herald of the tomb !
 " And when (the shelter of thy wing implor'd)
 " My senses, sooth'd, shall sink in soft repose,
 " O sink this truth still deeper in my soul,
 " Suggested by my pillow, sign'd by fate,
 " First, in fate's volume, at the page of man—
 " Man's sickly soul, though turn'd and toss'd for ever,
 " From side to side, can rest on nought but THEE :
 " Here, in full trust, hereafter, in full joy ;

" On THEE, the promis'd sure, eternal down
 " Of spirits, toil'd in travel through this vale.
 " Nor of that pillow shall my soul despond;
 " For—Love almighty! Love almighty! (sing,
 " Exult, creation!) Love almighty, reigns!
 " That death of death! that cordial of despair!
 " And loud ETERNITY's triumphant song!
 " Of whom, no more:—For, O THOU PATRON-GOD!
 " Thou God and Mortal! Thence more GOD to man!
 " Man's theme eternal! man's eternal theme!
 " THOU can'st not 'scape uninjur'd from our praise.
 " Uninjur'd from our praise can HE escape,
 " Who, disembosom'd from the FATHER, bows
 " The heav'n of heav'ns, to kiss the distant earth!
 " Breathes out in agonies a sinless soul!
 " Against the Cross, Death's iron sceptre breaks!
 " From famish'd ruin plucks her human prey!
 " Throws wide the gates celestial to his foes!
 " Their gratitude, for such a boundless debt,
 " Deputes their suff'ring brothers to receive!
 " And, if deep human guilt in payment fails;
 " As deeper guilt prohibits our despair!
 " Injoins it, as our duty, to rejoice!
 " And (to close all) omnipotently kind,
 " * Takes his delights among the sons of men." [heav'n?
 What words are these—And did they come from
 And were they spoke to man? to guilty man?
 What are all mysteries to love like this?

* Prov. chap. viii.

The song of angels, all the melodies
 Of choral gods, are wafted in the sound ;
 Heal and exhilarate the broken heart,
 Though plung'd, before, in horrors dark as night :
 Rich prelibation of consummate joy !
 Nor wait we dissolution to be blest.

This final effort of the moral muse,
 How justly * titled ! Nor for me alone ;
 For all that read ; what spirit of support,
 What heights of CONSOLATION, crown my song !

Then, farewell NIGHT ! Of darkness, now, no more :
 Joy breaks ; shines ; triumphs ; 'tis eternal day.
 Shall that which rises out of nought complain
 Of a few evils, paid with endless joys ?
 My soul ! henceforth, in sweetest union join
 The two supports of human happiness,
 Which some, erroneous, think can never meet ;
 True taste of life, and constant thought of death !
 The thought of death, sole victor of its dread !
 Hope be thy joy ; and probity thy skill ;
 Thy patron HE, whose diadem has dropp'd
 Yon gems of heav'n ; Eternity, thy prize :
 And leave the racers of the world their own,
 Their feather, and their froth, for endless toils :
 They part with all for that which is not bread ;
 They mortify, they starve, on wealth, fame, power ;
 And laugh to scorn the fools that aim at more.
 How must a spirit, late escap'd from earth,

Suppose PHILANDER's, LUCIA's, or NARCISSA's,
 The truth of things new-blazing in its eye,
 Look back, astonish'd on the ways of men,
 Whose lives whole drift is to forget their graves!
 And when our present privilege is past,
 To scourge us with due sense of its abuse,
 The same astonishment will seize us all.
 What then must pain us, would preserve us now,
 LORENZO! 'tis not yet too late: LORENZO!
 Seize wisdom, ere 'tis torment to be wise;
 That is, seize wisdom, ere she seizes thee.
 For, what, my small philosopher! is hell?
 'Tis nothing but full knowlege of the truth,
 When truth, resisted long, is sworn our foe;
 And calls ETERNITY to do her right.

Thus, darkness aiding intellectual light,
 And sacred silence whisp'ring truths divine,
 And truths divine converting pain to peace,
 My song the midnight raven has outwing'd,
 And shot, ambitious of unbounded scenes,
 Beyond the flaming limits of the world,
 Her gloomy flight. But what avails the flight
 Of fancy, when our hearts remain below?
Virtue abounds in flatterers, and foes;
 'Tis pride, to praise her; penance, to perform.
 To more than words, to more than worth of tongue,
 LORENZO! rise, at this auspicious hour;
 An hour, when heav'n's most intimate with man,
 When, like a falling star, the ray divine

Glides

Glides swift into the bosom of the just ;
And just are all, determin'd to reclaim ;
Which sets that title high within thy reach.
Awake, then : thy PHILANDER calls : awake !
Thou, who shalt wake, when the creation sleeps ;
When, like a taper, all these suns expire ;
When TIME, like him of Gaza in his wrath,
Plucking the pillars that support the world,
In NATURE's ample ruins lies intomb'd ;
And MIDNIGHT, Universal Midnight ! reigns.

END of the Night-Thoughts.

Printed by J. B. Smith

London

Printed in the Year MDCCLXXII

J. Wale del.

C. Grignion sculp.

THE CENTAUR
NOT FABULOUS.

IN Six LETTERS to a FRIEND,
ON THE
LIFE in VOGUE.

The FOURTH EDITION, Corrected.

Doth he not speak parables? Ezek.

L O N D O N:

Printed in the Year MDCCCLVII.

THE CENTAUR

NOT FABULOUS

IN LETTERS TO A FRIEND
ON THE
LIFE in VOGUE

The Fourth Edition, Corrected
By the Author

LONDON:
Printed in the Year MDCCCLVII.

T O T H E

L A D Y * * * * *

M A D A M,

YOUR Ladyship's character is so well known, that the public would blame me, if I presented not these papers to You, who can so readily put them into the hands of those who want them most.

You will, probably, ask, why The CENTAUR is prefix'd as a title to them. The men of pleasure, the licentious, and profligate, are the subject of these letters; and in such, as in the fabled Centaur, the brute runs away with the man: therefore I call them *Centaur*s. And farther, I call them Centaurs not fabulous, because by their scarce half-human conduct, and character, that enigmatical, and purely ideal figure of the antients, is not unriddled only, but realized.

Your

Your ladyship's curiosity is great; and you, possibly, are willing to know what account antiquity gives of the family, or rather breed, of the *Centaur*s. It is as follows.

Of the *Centaur*s the most celebrated was CHIRON. He was a great botanist; and our bitter herb Centory takes its name from him. He thought all herbs bitter, because being very amorous, he could not find any amongst them, that could abate the fever in his blood: and he left a complaint in the greek language to that purpose; which Ovid, sick of the same disease, has translated, and transmittted to posterity in his works.

But he was not only a botanist, but a great master of music: he composed an exquisite piece of harmony for young Achilles his pupil, which charm'd Deidamia to his embraces; by whom he had Pyrrhus, in the court of her father Nicomedes, a little before he dropp'd his petticoats, and put on his boots for the Trojan war. But what will endear to your ladyship CHIRON's memory beyond any the most renown'd in story, is, that he was not only

only the venerable father of OPERAS, but was also the son of a MASQUERADE; the very first of those numerous sons, with which that prolific entertainment has since multiply'd mankind.

It happen'd thus: SATURN, false to his good wife OPS, had an intrigue with PHILLYRA. Seeing, one day, his injured spouse coming to disturb their intimacy, for escape, he turn'd himself into a HORSE; which occasioned the noble equestrian figure of Chiron, his son.

This, madam, was the very first of MASQUERADES. You see the virtuous occasion, and the laudable fruits of it. Jupiter's masquerading in the form of a BULL, was long after. Europe takes its name from EUROPA, with whom he ran away in that shape. And your friend Clodius says, that, probably, we celebrate HORNED MASQUERADES in memory of it. This is the recorded origin of that nocturnal assembly; and, indeed, it is evident to common sense, that the masquerade had had never existed, but for its then accidental, and since establish'd, subserviency to love.

These, you will say, are wild fables; but they are not without their morals. This fable of Saturn and Ops means, that, jealous CONSCIENCE, the soul's lawful wife, will ever disturb licentious pleasure; and that there is no means of escaping the persecution, but by becoming quite brutal in it. This, and the following explanations of the mystical part of antiquity have been overlook'd by former commentators, though BACON was among them.

There is a second moral in the present fable. CHIRON, madam, was a man, as much, I mean, as the gayer part of your acquaintance. Why then is he represented as a Centaur? For two reasons. He was, as I have said before, the son of Saturn; and a very lewd old fellow. Representing him as a Centaur, signifies, that beings of origin truly celestial, may debase their nature, forfeit their character, and sink themselves, by licentiousness, into perfect beasts.

Secondly,

Secondly, it signifies, that the rest of the species, the sober part of mankind, prejudic'd by the abandon'd manners of such men, may naturally imagine, that they hear them neighing after their wives and daughters; galloping with more than human haste after temptations; and, therefore, rather insolently prancing on four legs, than decently content with two. This probably, is the meaning: first, because prejudice greatly hurts our discernment, and transforms objects exceedingly. Secondly, because all allow that a Centaur is a mere creature of the imagination.

But though Chiron was the most celebrated, yet was he not the most antient, of our mythological cavalry. Ixion was a primitive man of pleasure; a gallant of Juno, and much in favour. Jupiter, less in his interest, interpos'd a cloud in her stead, which not long after was brought to bed of the first Centaurs. From that hour Juno commenc'd a scold; and in that character Virgil makes her swear, that if she can't find friends in heaven, she will ransack hell for them.

The

The amour of Ixion imports, the great height of our expectation, and as great depth of our disappointment, in illicit love. And JUPITER's interposing the cloud, intimates, that heaven decrees this disappointment; and that therefore it is madness to flatter ourselves with hopes of the contrary. The fable would farther teach us, that our imagination, fir'd by passion, imposes not only on our understandings, but our very senses; which take clouds for goddesses; and adore darkness, as divine.

You see, madam, that gallantry is hereditary in this illustrious house, I should say STABLE: that therefore continence may be construed as an argument of bastardy. Who then can blame your gay friends for being loth to be bastardiz'd, and disinherited; to lose honour, patrimony, and mistress, together?

They keep clear of this imputation: but there is one particular, that speaks not so much in their favour; but rather calls their legitimacy in question. How comes it to pass that the posterity of cloud-begotten Sires, should should be so cloudless a generation, that not one spot of Stupidity can be found about them?

But though spotless in this point, they are not so in another; which may set all right again. DEIANIRA, as a charm to regain the love of her husband HERCULES, who was gone astray after OMPHALE, queen of Lydia, sent him a shirt dipp'd in the blood of the Centaur NESSUS. But instead of answering her honest end, it gave him a distemper so virulent, that it prov'd mortal. To balance the disadvantage above, some say, this distemper, at certain seasons, still runs in his race. Others rob our modern Centaurs of that credit; imputing their disorder to another cause. And indeed, the present story tells us, that ladies may convey somewhat else, when they mean only to make a present of their love.

But worse than distemper is to be feared. You know, madam, Ixion's remarkable punishment; but probably, not the full import of it. Jupiter, for the father's sake, detesting his whole posterity, design'd Ixion's wheel, not only as an emblem of their endless rotation in unaltered circles of present pleasures ; but also, as a prophecy of their future pains, and an exact representation of that rack, which, prudes say, they deserve for their family-feats.

And now, madam, all things considered, have I named them wrong ? I have named them, as most men of antient renown were, from their personal qualities and exploits. If you still think me to blame, I flatter myself you will change your mind, when you have read the letters following.

This address to your ladyship, will my sober readers say, is itself a Centaur of the Pegasean kind, in which the untamed imagination has too much run away with the judgment, and carried it to enormous heights. If your ladyship will venture, however, to be my fellow-traveller, I promise to carry you safely to an eminence in Fairy-land, from whence you shall survey the most surprising and amusing scene. To comply with your taste, it shall even be a ludicrous one. Your favourite Centaurs shall be permitted to intrude even into into the most solemn groves of sacred meditation. Their grotesque figures shall continually meet your eye, where you the least expect, and where the severest critic, and the prude (all but Centauresses are prudes with you) will be most scandalized to find them.

As a pledge of this promise, accept of my frontispiece. It offers a sketch which your ladyship, who know our Centaurs secret accomplishments better than I do, may employ a better hand to perfect.

The statues of the renown'd are set up in public, to kindle honest emulation. In most antient schools of wisdom were the busts, or portraits of the wise. What, madam, if, for your modern academy, Hogarth should draw a Centaur, not, as usual, with his bow and arrow, but (what will hit my mark as well) with Harlequin's sabre by his side; in a party-colour'd jacket of pictur'd cards, a band of music before, a Scaramouch-demon behind him; a weathercock on his head, a rattle in his hand, the decalogue under his feet; and, for the benefit of your scholars, a label out of his mouth, inscrib'd, as was the temple of Apollo, with Γινώσθι σεαυτὸν, in letters of gold [In ME, Know thyself]; they, your scholars, will take it in the true philosophic sense, and wonder how it came into the mouth of so ridiculous, and, to them, so foreign, a monster.

As your ladyship's assembly, of all our hyppodromes is the most renown'd, I hope you will favourably accept the wholesome provender I send you. It is of an anti-circean nature; and may, possibly, turn your monsters into men.

But I detain you: it is SUNDAY NIGHT; and I hear a whole string of your high-bred, unbridled, colts coming in full career; with a blaze in their foreheads, to outbrazen my rebukes; and a spring in their heels to bound high at your balls.

Quadrupedante putrem sonitu quatit ungula campum.

This, madam, you understand better than they. But you begin to frown, as you always do at praise. Fear not; not one word of compliment shall you have from me during our

our whole journey. I shall carry you at first a heavy trot through rough unbeaten ways, entertaining you unpolitely, with discourse quite foreign to your way of thinking; such as passed in correspondence between me, and a friend, that would equally despise, and be despised, among such as you think yours. In the progress of our travels (which I must honestly tell you, will only touch upon, not terminate in, Fairy-land) I shall carry you into an unknown country, where every thing is real, bright, and transporting. If there, compelled by the force of sovereign truth, I should not only assert, but convincingly prove, that you are of rank more than imperial, and present you with an unflattering glass, in which, notwithstanding, your own form shall appear with all the charms of an angel——But some breathing-time is necessary to prepare for such an arduous expedition. Therefore, I dismount for the present, and say no more. I am.

MADAM, &c.

our whole journey. I shall carry you at first a heavy but through rough unbroken ways, carrying you unobscured, with discomplete foreign to your way of thinking; such as passed in correspondence between me, and a friend, that would equally delight, and be delight, among such as you think yours.
 In the progress of our travels (which I must honestly tell you, will only touch upon, not terminate in, Fairy-land) I shall carry you into an unknown country, where every thing is real, bright, and transporting. If there, compelled by the force of foreign truth, I should not only alter, but convincingly prove, that yours of rank more than imperial, and present you with an unobscured state, in which notwithstanding, your own form shall appear with all the charms of an angel.—But some breathing time is necessary to prepare for such an arduous expedition. Therefore, I dismount for the present, and say no more.
 I am,

Yours, M. A. M. G. C. C. C. C.

L. E. T.

F. 1

LETTER I.
ON INFIDELITY.

LETTER
ON INFIDELITY.

LETTER I. ON INFIDELITY.

Dear Sir,

MAKE no apology for your request; the world is your apology. The occasion calls louder on me, than my friend can possibly do; and robs me of the credit of having my compliance owing intirely to your desire. Alarm'd at our reigning passion for PLEASURE, you press me to write on that subject. Who can forbear? since if the present canine appetite for it should increase, where is that Bedlam which can receive a whole nation into proper methods of cure?

Your enjoining me one task has engaged me in two: Prevails not INFIDELITY as much as Pleasure? And for-ever they must prevail, or decrease, together. Infidelity is the parent of the love of Pleasure in some: Eve doubted, and then eat: It is the consequence of it in others ; most of Eve's daughter's first taste, and then disbelieve. Pleasure, and Infidelity, reciprocally generate each other ; and that, necessarily. For Faith is intirely the result of Reason ; and reason is impotent in proportion to the prevalence of sense ; therefore sensual Pleasure begets Infidelity. On the reverse, he that disbelieves a futurity, must be fond of the present, and eagerly swallow its unrival'd delights ; and therefore, Infidelity lets loose the rein to Pleasure, and gives it an ample range : He then, who would reduce one, must strike at both. Eve, and the serpent, fell together ; Pleasure, like the first, plucks the forbidden fruit ; and Infidelity says, with the latter, Thou shalt not surely die.

These two, now national distempers, fairly divide us between them. One seizes the body : one, the mind : and where these two fiery darts have taken place, the destroyer may spare a third ; his work is done. What then must be mine ? The task is hard to extract them ; for they seem, at present, to be not only poisoned, but barbed, arrows, in the British heart.

However I shall attempt, first, to make the Infidel, and then the Voluptuary, sensible of his error. I shall recommend Belief and Virtue, in the room of Doubt, and Dissoluteness ; and by (I hope) properly adapted Devotion, assist their Repentance ; that necessary step of transition from one of these states, to the other. And considering into whose hands these letters will first come (for I design them for the press) with regard to yourself, I shall give you your friend Eusebius's character at large. And with regard to your sister, I shall invite her, and her gay favourites, to a Funeral, instead of a Ball; and, then, I shall enter on subjects not unimportant, nor foreign to these.
of

As the mind is our superior part, I shall first speak of INFIDELITY, and then of PLEASURE. And it shall be my endeavour so to speak of both, as to render it the province of wit, rather than wisdom, to reply. What may silence wisdom will but provoke wit, whose ambition it is to say most where least is to be said. You may as well attempt to silence an eccho by the strength of voice, as a wit by the force of reason. They both are but the louder for it: they both will have the last word. How often hear we men with great ingenuity supporting folly? that is, by wit destroying wisdom; as the same sort of men, by pleasure destroy happiness; prone to draw evil out of good, and set things at variance, which, by nature, are allies. Happiness, and pleasure, as wisdom, and wit, are each other's friends, or foes; and if foes, of foes the worst. Well-chosen pleasure is a branch of happiness; well-judging wit is a flower of wisdom: but when these petty subalterns set up for themselves, and counteract their principals, one makes a greater wretch, and the other a grosser fool, than could exist without them: Pleasure then calls for our compassion, and wit for our contempt. Of how many might the names have slept in safety, had not their unlucky parts awakened a just clamour against them?

Have we not a recent, and signal instance, how far wit can set wisdom at defiance, and, with its artful brilliances, dazzle common understandings? That noble author * smiles at a certain text of which I shall make a serious use, viz. When the sons of God came in to the daughters of men, they begot giants. So when great talents fall in love with mean purposes, they beget errors of an enormous size, both in opinion, and in life. What more enormous than to let infidelity gather such strength, even in our decline, as to stand the terrors of a death-bed, and bequeath proud legacies of its poison to the world? Is not this stretching out our boldness even beyond the day of tryal? carrying the war into the very borders (if I may so speak) of that dread Being we dare oppose? and, desperately presuming to atchieve that in our grave, of which a Julian, of equal genius, though not of equal guilt, despaired on a throne; and that the greatest on earth? Julian was for defeating one prophecy; my lord is for expunging them all; and, with like success, Vicisti Galilæe, may serve for both.

* Lord Bolingbroke.

Take I too great a freedom? It is both folly, and vice, to bear any man ill-will. But it is also folly, and vice, not so to behave, when occasion requires, as that our conduct may be mistaken for ill-will, if the prejudiced think fit. Why should our opponents call that ill-will, which they, if they were of our opinion, and thought us in a fatal error, and heartily wished us well, would, necessarily, do out of perfect love? If the viscount's admirers resent out of zeal to his honour, I assure them, (though I have had no apparition) that his lordship, now on my side, thanks them not for the favour.

Time was, when those errors, into which he fell, would have been more excusable. For, that truth was obscure, and falsehood specious, and opinions endless; and that in these circumstances the mind of man could find

find no rest, because suspense is anxious, and assent almost inevitably betrayed into mistake? this was the sad, and just complaint of the heathen world, which by God's dereliction had lost its way, and could not regain it, by the feeble glimmerings of natural light.

But of what have we to complain, who grope, and wander, and stumble, at noon-day? Ours is not ignorance, but perverseness; not want of a guide, but defection from him. Our noble author, so much admired, because so much in the wrong, declares our light to be darkness; and with the boasted acuteness of his superior understanding, instead of couching those that are blind, is for putting out the eyes of those that see. Thus, heaven's supreme blessing on us in the Gospel, is not annulled only, by our perverseness; but turned to much hurt. We are favour'd to our misfortune, we are enrich'd to our loss.

The heathens courted truth as a mistress, with warm, and sincere, addresses, but could not obtain her. We, having obtained her, treat her, as an abandoned age the lawful partners of their beds, with satiety, and disgust, and a wild desire after new embraces. And what have we embraced? Thus runs at best the palatable doctrine of an age too knowing to need instruction; and too proud to bear it from heaven itself.

“ Whatever notices of duty to God, or man, are im“ printed in us by nature, or deduced by reason, these “ are obliging and necessary to be performed by all; as
“ the natural religion: but as for any positive institutions, “ or particular forms of religion, these are of human “ origin,

“ origin, stamped in the political mints of craft, interest, or ambition ; a coin current for the vulgar only.” It is fit, it seems, that the vulgar should be fettered, that their superiors may expatiate more at large, and not fear to meet with rivals in them. And, indeed, if the vulgar had the same principles, and opinions, with many of their masters, their masters would have as fair a chance to have their throats cut, as the murderer to be hanged for it.

As to God, they say, “ The natural religion commands us to think worthily, and speak reverently, of Him : but, as some have thought churches derogatory to the notions of an Omnipresent Being : so formal prayers, and solemn services, are no way necessary to a Being Omniscient.” They present Him (if with any) with a more sublime and philosophical devotion, stripped of all externals, invisible as the Deity himself, and, indeed, as incomprehensible to the multitude ; whose religion, like themselves, must have a body, as well as a soul ; or it will evaporate into nothing. Thus, under pretence of a compliment to one divine attribute, they rob all of the worship due to them. They pretend to give God exalted homage, as the Jews arrayed our blessed Lord in a purple robe, to mock him, not adore. And here our undissembled neglect, if not contempt, of religion, and our barefaced venality setting all, even souls, to sale, cannot but recal to mind, that these sister iniquities, as if naturally connected, went hand-in-hand (as the historian tells us), towards the ruin of the Roman common-wealth.

Deos negligere, omnia venalia habere. Sallust.

As to the duties of the second table, they tell us, that “ the precepts of nature run evidently against injuries,
“ and injustice ; we must by no means commit rapine,
“ or murder ; these are unfociable crimes : but as for any “ pleasurable enjoyments of ourselves, why deprive our“ selves of these ? why starve at a feast heav’n sets before “ us ? We cannot conceive God to be a tyrant ; to what “ end has he given desires, but that we should satisfy
“ them ? or appetites, but that we should indulge them ?
“ Anger and lust, if constitutional, are venial sins.”

Thus the sluices are set open for all sensuality, promiscuous incontinence, and studied arts of excess, to pour in uncontrouled : and by a second compliment to the Deity, as sincere as my lord’s pretended regard for Christianity, is varnished over a second violation of his laws. Bacchus, and Venus, are recalled to a new apotheosis under a christian æra ; and receive daily sacrifice in the fortunes, health, and common dignity of man. What voluntary victims are we ? And as victims of old were crown’d with flowers, how gayly does poor, devoted, Britain bleed at their altars ?

In answer to their pleas, it must be observed that desires, and appetites, were not given us out of tyranny, but with an intention doubly kind ; as a means both of pleasure, and virtue, if gratified, and restrained, as religion directs. In both views they are blessings, but greatest in the last ; yet an Esau will ever be for preferring the former.

Thus you see, Sir, that both the tables of the decalogue are broken, in a more terrible sense, than they were by Moses, at his descent from the mount : and from no dissimilar cause. The sufficiency of human reason is the golden calf which these men set up to be worshipped; and in the frenzies of their extravagant devotion to it, they trample on venerable authority; strike at an oak with an osier; the doctrine of God's own planting, and the growth of ages, with the suddain, and fortuitous, shoots of imagination; abortive births of an hour. These human improvements on divine revelation may be compared to the prophaning the holy Bible with the figures of heathen idols, under Antiochus Epiphanes; or rather, to the proud Roman emperor, who took the head from Jupiter's statue, and placed his own in its stead. These are bold men; but the boldest, we hope, may be reclaimed. That Almighty finger which wrote the divine laws twice in stone, cannot want power to give them a new impression in their apostate hearts.

And that they may the more willingly receive that impression, I shall observe, that setting aside the immoral consequences of infidelity, faith is necessary on its own account, without relation to any thing else. Faith is not only a means of obeying, but a principal act of obedience. It is not only a needful foundation; it is not only as an altar, on which to sacrifice; but it is a sacrifice itself; and, perhaps, of all the greatest. It is a submission of our understandings, an oblation of our idolized reason, to God; which he requires so indispensably, that our whole will, and affections, though seemingly a larger sacrifice, will not, without it, be received at our hands.

Does any question this? His lordship's disciples will be very apt to question it; yet this is true; unless we can suppose the primitive martyrs to have laid down their lives for what was unnecessary to their salvation. For it was not an attestation of their doctrine, but their faith, for which the blessed apostles were persecuted, and the martyrs shed their blood; which they might easily have avoided, if they had insisted only on the moral precepts of their new dispensation. Their moral precepts were approved, and welcomed, by the wisest on earth. Nay, our infidels compliment them, especially when they would give themselves the greater weight in their opposition to our creed; yet, possibly, they had rather subscribe that absurd creed, than stand obliged to practise that morality, which they so much commend.
not

To renounce, or corrupt, the faith (one, or both of which is my lord's point) abstracted from libertine gratifications to follow, or to get rid of fear from those past; there seems to be so little temptation, that I should think none would venture on it, but through ignorance of its guilt. Its guilt therefore I have pointed out; which shews that modern deism, how laudable soever the deist's life is, is criminal in itself. A virtuous life, rising from a corrupted faith, (if that could possibly be) is as an angel of light supported by a cloven foot; which many seem not to believe, otherwise they would not be so often pleading the virtue of deists, as a full absolution of that sect: whereas we are expressly told, that the just shall live by faith; that is, even the just shall not live, that is, be saved, without it.

But though a corrupt faith is sufficiently criminal in itself, yet its guilt rarely rests there; it often produces an irregular life. On the contrary, vicious practice is sure to produce a corrupt faith; or an absolute renunciation of all belief: for the notices of good and ill are so fairly imprinted imprinted on our nature, and the practice of them is so strongly guarded by consequent hope and fear, that no conscience is so hardened, as to sin without the shelter of some pretence. The guilty hush conscience with such soft whispers as these; Either, heaven takes not such cognizance of our actions; or, is not so much concerned about them, as some imagine; or, its mercy will not suffer it to be just; or, its justice will not suffer it to be so severe, as to punish temporal guilt with eternal pain: all which are corruptions of the faith. Or if these opiates will not do, they proceed to renounce the faith. They give themselves a quite-quieting draught of absolute unbelief: a Deity is a dream, and Religion a cheat. And thus they throw off their fears, their God, and common sense, together; and are deplorably gay, till they are irremediably undone. How happy might such wretches be, if they knew what a trifle pleasure is to peace! A very trifle is it, even when pleasure is innocent: but when not, when pleasure is an enemy to peace; then, then indeed, it is a trifle no more.

There is a text which must give some surprize to those who doubt whether a bad life occasions a false or no belief. It is said, there must be heresies, that is, false beliefs. And why? There is certainly no fatal necessity for them, from God's destination—No; but there is a moral necessity for them from man's corruption. A heart boiling with violent and vicious passions, will send up infatuating fumes to the head; and a delirious giddiness of head will make a man fall into the grossest mistakes, be his natural abilities what they will. A lewd and obstinate will fails not to blind the strongest judgment, as Delilah the man of might.

Many,

Many, even of those that hold fast the faith, may perhaps not have observed, that faith is doubly precious; it is our duty, and our refuge; nay, it is doubly our refuge. It rescues our passions from flaming into vice; and it rescues our understanding from darkening into errors. The same qualification which is necessary for us in order to please God, is as necessary to secure ourselves from imposture; and not only from such impostures as others may prepare for us, but from our own. It is our sole security against our framing impositions to deceive our own judgments (as shewn above), as well as against our incurring crimes to defeat our own salvation.

As to the mysterious articles of our faith, which infidels would by no means have me forget; “Who,” say they, “can swallow them?” In truth, none but those who think it no dishonour to their understandings to credit their Creator. Socinus, like our infidels, was one of a narrow throat; and, out of generous compassion to the Scriptures (which the world, it seems, had misunderstood for 1500 years) was for weeding them of their mysteries! and rendering them, in the plenitude of his infallible reason, undisgusting, and palatable to all the rational part of mankind. Why should honest Jews and Turks be frightened from us by the Trinity? he was for making religion familiar and inoffensive. And so he did; and unchristian too. Those things which our hands can grasp, our understandings cannot comprehend. Why then deny to the Deity Himself the privilege of being one, amidst that multitude of mysteries which He has made?

Here

Here let me observe, what perhaps has escaped your notice, with regard to the blessed Trinity, which gives our unbelievers the greatest offence. The revelation of it is not only necessary for our understanding the foundation of christianity, but is also, I conceive, an absolute demonstration of its truth. Because it is a mystery which by nature could not possibly have entered into the imagination of man; which they, who most explode it, confess by their obstinate rejection of it. For why do they reject it, but on that very account? Our opponents therefore, in some measure, support us in our attachment to this supreme article of our creed, which they most condemn; and (what is somewhat remarkable in favour of our faith) support us in it by the very cause for which it is condemned by them.

Mysteries, that is those great and hidden things of our religion, whose truth we are assured of by Divine Authority, but the manner of their being surpasses our understanding: such as the plurality of persons in the Divine Unity: God manifest in the flesh: the operation of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of believers: the spiritual presence of Christ in the eucharist: the uniting our scattered parts from the dust of death. All which the Scriptures have expressly delivered as catholic truths. Several of these, several heretics have rejected; and the Socinians have, in a manner, rejected them all. Faith in these is more acceptable to God, than faith in less abstruse articles of our religion; because it pays that honour which is due to His testimony; and the more seemingly incredible the matter is which we believe, the more respect we shew to the relator of it. This (putting in a caveat against the ridicule of infidels) may be called heroic faith, correspondent dent to heroic virtue, at which, out of prudence, they must smile.

This heroic faith may be more acceptable to God (some may say); but, sure, not more useful to man. It may have a good influence on another life; but what account does this find in it? Who can shew me the moral effects of it?—From faith in these mysteries, man necessarily, and more justly, adores the incomprehensible majesty of God; and more justly and perfectly contemplates his own littleness, and disproportion of thought to those truths that are vouchsafed to his faith. Hence he heartily renders God a due honour for his testimony; and a due acknowledgement of his professed care of his church; and a due thankfulness for the mercy of his revelation. He renders a due obedience to his proper government, as a christian, that is, the authority of the church; and a due assistance to the public peace, which is never safely built but on unity of judgment. And as to his private virtue, he keeps in due subjection the pride of understanding, that most vicious affection of the mind, which, if let loose, would be attended with a multitude of evils; and with one in particular, which occasions this letter. But though we could see none of these temporal advantages, yet would it be most reasonable in us to believe; unless we, who think it right to believe implicitly in those on whom our fortune depends, think it wrong to believe implicitly in Him, on whom depends our salvation.

But there is, I confess, some error, on our own part, with regard to mysteries. We, perhaps, have given some small excuse for our infidels contempt of mysteries, by more pious, than prudent, attempts, that have been sometimes

sometimes made toward an explanation of them. A mystery explained is a mystery destroyed: for what is a mystery, but a thing not known? But things not known may reasonably be believed; in the very strangest things there may be truth, and in things very credible, a lie*.

It is with our understandings as with our eyes. Both have their mysteries: both have objects beyond their reach; some accidentally, some absolutely. We see not those objects that are placed in an obscure light, because there is a defect in the medium: we see not those that are vested with too much light, because there is a weakness in the sensory, unable to sustain such strong impressions. Thus it is with the objects of our understanding: some things we know not, for want of being duly informed. Salvation was a mystery to the Gentiles; but ceased so to be, when revealed by the gospel. Other things we know not, because they exceed the measure of our comprehension. Thus, some articles of our faith are such mysteries, as by no revelation can cease to be so. They must be mysteries, while men are men; while yet unblest with powers that are not indulged to this imperfect state. As it is bold and vain, so, perhaps, it has ever been prejudicial to the truth, to labour at rational evictions of sacred mysteries; for, by these means, men attempt to comprehend the Divine Nature, by putting it under some injurious disguise; as we venture to gaze at the sun, after we have watched it into a cloud.

God forbid images of Himself, because it is impossible that any sensible representations could do otherwise than derogate from Him that is invisible: nor can the diminishing imagery of our notions derogate less from Him that is incomprehensible. I presume not to censure those who have made use of illustrations to the proper ends of piety; all I mean, is, that fallible ratiocination should not be made the grounds of faith, whose proper basis is infallible testimony. Nor is it longer faith than while it rests on that; for when I believe, not so much what is revealed, as what my own reason pronounces to be true; I believe not God, but myself. I assume, not obey; and give proof rather of the pride, than humiliation, of my reason; whereas its humiliation is a principal end aimed at by God's so strict demand of our faith.

* Quintil. Institut. l. iv. c. 2.

And, indeed, far from humiliation, and even common modesty, must he be, who hopes to give light to those mysteries which St. Paul, with all his learning, eloquence, and inspiration, pronounced to be to the Jews a stumbling-block; and to the Greeks, those most subtle of men, foolishness: that is, they thought it folly to believe them, because unintelligible; and because they did not apprehend, that there was any Divine authority to compel their belief. And such Greeks have we; Epicurean Greeks, sensual, subtle, and unbelieving; and whose celebrated writings are of equal authority with

Quicquid Græcia mendax

Audet in historia.

Juv.

Men, who reject divine assistance, as too officious, with a sort of disdain, as if it affronted their own abilities; and whose presumptuous opinions are industriously spread, by pest-men, through the land.

With the gross and horrid effects of such opinions, and their consequences, the distempered age groans,
and

and kingdoms shake, and judgments threaten. And well they may. How many private families have their infamous secrets? how many public transactions their barefaced iniquity? high courts of justice have their jus datum sceleri, and blush not to plead precedent for the violation of their own laws; and the corruption of the times, for more corruption still. Is not this heaping mountain upon mountain against heaven? And think we heaven will never return the blow?

We have had already, nay now have, some light and merciful admonitions from heaven. But can it be thought, that an age of judgments, and pastimes; of riots and distresses; of excessive debts, and excessive expence; of public poverty, and private accumulation; of new sects in religion, and new fallies in sin; and every other contradiction to common sense, does not call for more? I, Sir, am fastened in the country; nor know I much of that larger and fouler sink of debauchery in which you breathe. But even here, I know too much. Where is that village that has not its suicides of intemperance; or its bold adventurers for still quicker death from the hand of public justice? And, to confirm that opinion above advanced, of the close tie and mutual growth of vice and unbelief, almost every cottage can afford us one that has corrupted, and every palace one that has renounced, the faith.

I know, Sir, you will tell me, that it is the business of our common piety, to deplore; of our prayers, to obstruct; and of our lives, rather than our harangues, to confute them. True; for if our christianity is to be found no-where but in our books, the Christian and Infidel, fidel, may drop their dispute. A Tillotson, and a Bolingbroke, are on the same side: their contest is but verbal; their agreement is essential, and their association will prove eternal.

But, Sir, it is our duty to speak and write (if we can), as well as live, against the enemies of our Christian faith. I proceed therefore to observe, that the Viscount's arguments against the authority of the Scriptures have been long since answered. But he is not without precedent in this point. This repetition of already refuted arguments seems to be a deistical privilege, or distemper, from which few of them are free. Even echoes of echoes are to be found amongst them: which evidently shews, that they write not to discover truth, but to spread infection; which old poison re-administered will do, as well as new; and it will be struck deeper into the constitution, by repeating the same dose. Besides, new writers will have new readers. The book may fall into hands untainted before; or, the already-infected may swallow it more greedily in a new vehicle; or, they that were disgusted with it in one vehicle, may relish it in another. I therefore ask pardon: what I mis-called distemper, I find, on second thoughts, is perfect prudence: but such prudence as, with them, would throw a christian writer into the bottom of contempt.

There are more reasons for our deists to be dissatisfied with themselves than those already given. Infidel is an opprobrious name: but time was, when deism was the true religion; and they are for still retaining the credit once due to that character. It is therefore fit for a friend to Christianity, nor less fit for a friend to them, to take notice, that it is impossible for a good man, that is, one aiming at the divine favour above all things, to reject an offered revelation, without inquiring into its title to the high character it assumes; and, that it is as impossible (in my opinion) for a reasonable man to reject the Christian revelation, if he does inquire. He, therefore, who continues a deist, in a land enlightened by the Gospel, must be wanting in goodness, or reason; must be either criminal, or dull. None, therefore, can be more mistaken than they, that profess deism for the credit of superior understanding, or for the sake of exercising a more pure, and perfect, virtue. Yet these are the only pretences which they do, or dare, avow, for their fatal choice. Must not then their real motive be of a nature which they think prudent to conceal?

But to conceal it, is not easy: for reason, our of itself defective reason, in many points of the last moment to man, wants, wishes, calls for a revelation; and cannot but accept, when offer'd, what it calls for: that is, reasonable deists cannot but become Christians, where the Gospel shines.

Or argue thus (for it admits of various proof): God Almighty would not have made a revelation, but in order to be received. And by whom received? Doubtless by the reasonable, and good. And if by some of them, why not by all? And if all the reasonable, and good, receive it; what must they be that reject it? Therefore revealed religion rejected, proves natural religion disobeyed. I said, above, that deists were blameable, how good soever their lives might be: But now it seems to appear, that their lives cannot be good.

Others,

Others, perhaps, have forbore speaking so plain, out of charity. I venture on it out of what I conceive to be charity, greater still: for nothing that can awaken them can be kindly suppressed.

Cornelius, the centurion, though one of the best of men, thought not the belief of the Gospel unnecessary to his salvation. But modern deists, wiser, not better than he, have their objections to the Gospel. Their chief objection is against its mysteries. There is nothing mysterious in it, but with regard to things, which we either can not, or need not, understand. Can not, through the limitation of the human intellect; or need not, through the sufficiency of other means, and motives, for our leading good lives. To what amounts, then, this capital objection, and charge against it? To no more than this, viz. That Christianity performs not, what is impossible to be performed; for it is as impossible for its Author, Almighty God, to do more than is needful for his gracious end, viz. the good lives of mankind; as to do what, in its nature, is impossible to be done.

Indeed, all their objections to Christianity seem to be no more, nor less, than playing the best card they have; than using the best expedient they can think of, to keep themselves in countenance, and the world in the dark, as to the true motive of their apostasy. Nor are their objections to be looked on, in those that are men of sense, as an argument of their disbelief, but their dislike. They wish not the mysteries removed; for that would rob them of a favourite objection. They wish not the darkness of the mysteries removed, but transferred; transferred from the doctrines, to the moral precepts. These are without a cloud; these are too plain for their purpose. None ever fully complied with these, but was easily reconciled to the mysteries of the Gospel. The disgusted, despotic heart commands the passive obedient head, to fight its unjust quarrel, and say it is its own: So that Satan may blame them for some degree of hypocrisy in his favour; may blame them for only pretending to disbelieve. If, on the other hand, Christians were not also hypocrites; hypocrites, I mean, as to practice; they would rob the deists of their most plausible plea against us; and either lessen their numbers, or increase their shame.

I hope that some of the deists; at least, some of those whose principles are endangered by them; may admit some little impression from what has been offered. I hope they may discern, and own the self-accusation which is, evidently, implied in our deists renunciation of Christianity: or, if I am mistaken, that they will set me right; for if I have wrong'd them, I have wrong'd them much. For, in what a disadvantageous light appear these deserters from christianity in these pages? A deistical tongue, a christian conscience, and a partly pagan heart! What a sad composition is this? It is a far heavier charge than I wish to find true.

But it is a natural question, “How comes it to pass, that men of parts should so much disaffect the Scriptures, so admirable, and still more and more admirable, in proportion to the discernment of their reader?”

Can it be from ignorance? It may be so, if their hearts are worse than their heads; for there are parts of Scripture which none but a good man can well understand: “Rejoice “ Rejoice always ; and again I say, Rejoice.” This must appear to the vicious absurd, because impracticable, and therefore un-inspired. To rejoice in tribulation, they have neither cause, nor power. Thus, bad manners, almost necessarily, render men infidels to holy writ. On the contrary, a good life is a key to the Scriptures. “ The secret of the Lord is with those that fear him.” A text this, as unintelligible to the vicious as the former. As he has had no experience, so neither has he any comprehension of its truth. The good man comprehends, and feels it too. Thus the Scripture, like the cloudy pillar which it records, is light to the true Israelite, but darkness to the Egyptians. Hence acutest understandings in religious debates often lose their edge.

Can that cause we seek, be vanity ? It may be said of the Viscount's writings as of Catiline, Satis eloquentiæ, sapientiæ parum. Had his eloquence been less ; had those talents been denied him, which flattered him with hope of shining a first lustre in the lettered world, he had escaped a temptation which has evidently been too hard for his prudence ; and a common fiz'd head had, probably, left his heart in safety. So formidable a possession is an immortal pen (if his is immortal) ; a pen more fatal to its master, than Cato's sword.

Or might not envy be the cause we seek ? “ But can these men envy Christians, whom they quit on account of our unhappy mistake ?” Man is not only desirous, but ambitious too, of happiness. He but ill bears that another should be happier than himself ; because superior happiness is a natural argument of superior wisdom or worth. The man of a libertine life knows that the good Christian, if his religion is true, is, on the whole, much happier than himself. Therefore he wishes it to be false; and endeavours to find it so. And strong endeavours to be in the wrong, Heaven will punish with success. It will permit them to believe their own lye; that is, to fall on their own sword, which was drawn against the truth.

Non hos quæsitum munus in usus.

Vir.

And I am the more inclined to impute their opposition to envy, rather than vanity; because pure vanity is consistent with good-nature; and may be a very candid thing: But envy has bitterness, and ill-will; and ridicule is the genuine child of ill-nature; ridicule, that offensive brat of which they are so fond.

Now though nothing is more improper in important debates than raillery; yet can I make some apology for them. They may, possibly, perceive, that the load on their own misgiving consciences, would sink them, were it not for the light expedient of forced mirth, like a bladder filled with wind, to keep them above water: and that they, sometimes, have their doubts, and misgivings of heart, it is reasonable to believe. To give full-established security is the incommunicable privilege of the Gospel.

For the reasons above, I venture to set down envy among the causes of infidelity, though (I think) by others overlooked. And further, I believe it to be a very principal cause of lettered infidelity in the world. Other, but not greater vices are, doubtless, the chief cause cause of infidelity in lower, and illiterate, life; where sense has no rival in thought, but tyrannizes alone.

But whatever is the cause of their infidelity, be it ignorance, vanity, envy, or any other vice, their infidelity will naturally have some effect in our favour. It is much to be hoped, that it will put us on our guard, and make us better men. Our leading a bad life, is playing into their hands. It is giving them an argument in the debate, against ourselves. Though the argument is bad, yet is it an argument still. And since they have none but bad arguments, and such they will make use of, we should not increase the number. That is like furnishing them with ammunition to protract the war: and though the war protracted will not hurt us, yet will it hurt them; and, as we are Christians, that should give us an equal concern.

Secondly, Christianity may thank its opponents for much new light, from time to time, thrown in on the sublime excellence of its nature, and the manifestation of its truth: opponents, in some sort, more welcome than its friends; as they do it signal service without running it in debt; and have no demand on our gratitude for the favours they confer. The stronger its adversaries, the greater its triumph: the more it is disputed, the more indisputably will it shine. With what pious pleasure must you see the brightest talents striking at it, with the most hearty good-will, yet dropping harmless, like old Priam's spear?

Telum imbelle sine ictu

Conjecit; rauco quod protenus ære repulsum;

Et summo clypei nequicquam umbone pependit. Virg.

Christianity, that great support of man's welfare, and God's glory, like a well-built arch, the greater load of opposition, and reproach, its enemy lays on it, the stronger it stands.

Thirdly, Their antichristian writings may detect them : for since (as shewn above) a false faith, or no faith at all, is the natural consequence of a bad life, it is possible that the gentlemen in the opposition, while they are giving us their opinions, may be giving us more : They may be discovering their morals, while they mean only to teach us their creed : And, thus, they may carry, like Bellerophon, their own condemnation, while they imagine they are, graciously, conveying intelligence, and new light, to mankind : So that the old proverb, Bellerophontis literæ, may be a proper motto for the learned labours of them all.

But condemnation from others will be much more supportable than their own ; if that should fall on them. And where is he on whom it shall not one day fall ? If a man born blind, who had never so much as heard of the sun, moon, and stars, should suddenly receive sight ; he would not be more astonished at the first rushing in of those material glories, than would the man, by vice struck blind to religion, be, at his first conviction of heavenly truths, viz. divine manifestations, awful revelations, fulfilled prophecies, numberless miracles ; and one unbroken chain of marvellous expedients, from before creation to this hour, for our salvation ; those spiritual luminaries ; those (dare I say) sun, moon, and stars, of the moral world ; if God should give him light. Till then, walking in darkness, he must mistake danger for safety, safety, shame for glory, and mischief for pleasure. Like the blinded of Sodom, he reaches eagerly after, and presses hard for, enjoyment; but of real enjoyment, of true felicity, he cannot find the door; as I propose shewing in my next.

If some part of it may seem too severe, I must observe, that no man can strike fire with a feather. A fire elemental is diffused through all nature, though lock'd up in dark matter, and unapparent in most parts of our globe. Thus, I conceive, that there is divine grace spread through all hearts (where not intirely quenched by vice), though unactive, and dormant in them. No slight animadversion can awake it. It must be a blow of some force, that strikes it out of a heart of flint. And such there must be in these days of darkness, when few sparks of grace are apparent. Such there must be when infidelity prevails; for infidelity, and faith, are the day, and night, of the moral world. One reveals, the other hides, heaven from our thoughts. Happy am I if this Letter shall occasion the smallest dawn on but one single heart, in this our grand eclipse. With you, dear Sir, the dawn is long since past; and that you may continue in the light, till heaven, at that knock of faith which only will be heard, shall admit you into perfect day, where undisputed truth, and unmistaken pleasure, with endless glory, crown the just; this is the prayer of

Your Affectionate

Humble Servant.

LETTER II.

ON

PLEASURE.

LETTER II.

ON

PLEASURE.

G 2

LETTER II.

ON PLEASURE.

Dear Sir,

I Now proceed to say something of Pleasure; that subject which you so warmly recommend; not aware, I believe, that it may be long before men, whose faults set the public eye at defiance, will learn to blush when alone in their closets. And till then, what hope of much reformation from the pen? Besides, though our transgressions with regard to pleasure are great; yet they are not new. To the scandal of the antediluvians be it spoken, there were British iniquities before the flood. To such a degree have all moral subjects been exhausted, that it is difficult for a writer on them not to repeat, though he is no plagiarist. But your desires are an apology for my deficiencies in compliance with them.

Whether

Whether we are more hardened in infidelity, or softened in pleasure may be disputed : but none can deny that the love of pleasure is the root of every crime. Theft, murder, perjury, are a few of its fatal fruits ; nor the worst. But I shall not dip so deep in its consequences ; yet deep enough to render the name of a man of pleasure, which some affect for their honour, not only ridiculous, but detestable.

What an extravagant dominion does pleasure exercise over us ? It is not only the pestilence that walketh in darkness ; but an arrow that destroyeth at noon-day. The moon hides her face at our midnight enormities ; and the morning blushes on our unfinished debauch. I am almost tempted to say that our impudent folly puts nature out of countenance. But there is no need by words to exaggerate the fatal truth. Our luxury is beyond example, and beyond bounds ; it stops not at the poor : even they that live on alms are infected with it.

It has often been observed, that it is with states, as with men. They have their birth, growth, health, distemper, decay, and death. Men sometimes drop suddenly by an apoplexy ; states, by conquest ; in full vigour, both. As man owes his mortality to original sin ; some states owe their fall to some defect, or infelicity, in their original constitution. But contracted distemper is the most common ruin of states, and men. And what national distemper more mortal than our own ? On the soft beds of luxury most kingdoms have expired.

If causes should not fail of their usual effect ; if our national distemper, far from being cutaneous at present, should reach the vitals of our state ; how applicable to this

this opulent, proud, profligate metropolis, (which calls the sea her own, and whose vices, more diffusive, are without a shore) would be the prophet's sacred dirge over antient Tyre; whose sea-born wealth, and hell-born iniquity, let it not be said, was but a prelude to our own? And yet if we proceed in our infernal career, that most infamous reproach may become but too true.

The sublime, and most memorable words run thus; and I cannot but think that, at present, they must have a formidable sound in a British ear. “ Is this the joyous “ city? whose antiquity is of days remote? whose mer“ chants were princes, and her traffickers the honour“ able of the earth? whose revenue was the harvest of “ rivers? and her exchange the mart of nations? who “ sat as a queen; stretched out her hand over the seas;
“ and shook the kingdoms? But she is fallen! she is “ fallen! Heaven has stained the pride of all glory.
“ How sorely must you be pained at the report?”

Has not Britain reason to be more deeply struck with this part of Scripture than the rest of mankind? The prophecy as yet, indeed, through mercy, is unfulfilled in us: but if Britain continues, like Tyre,—“ To sing
“ as a harlot; to take the harp; to make sweet melody;
“ sing many songs; turn to her hire; and commit for“ nication with all the kingdoms of the world,”—her fall is to be feared, unless the fate of most former empires betray us into mistake; and that national poison which has ever proved mortal, is mortal no more. If the fate of kingdoms is lodged in a just, and impartial hand, what but the grossest self-flattery can banish our fears? And if our fears are banished, leave it not unobserved, served, that our very want of fear is a proof of our danger: for Heaven infatuates, when it determines to destroy.

“ But such a general face of affluence, and gaiety. “ Are these signs of ruin ? ” Not signs only, but causes of it too. Not Babylon alone has been smitten at a banquet, and perished in its joys. Most nations have been gayest, when nearest to their end; and, like a taper in the socket, have blazed, as they expired.

Were our fathers to rise from their graves, they would conceive that their fortune had thrown them on some day of public festivity, nor imagine that every day was drunk of the same disease. By our gaiety, we seem to celebrate the perpetual triumph of the millennium; by our vices, to add to it the manners of the antediluvian world; and, by our security under them, to put full confidence in the divine promise that the world shall be drowned no more. If with the vices of the antediluvians, we had their years too, more might be said in our excuse: but to weigh such a moment against eternity, shews that the ballance is in very weak hands. The world, which the divine vengeance swept away for its enormities, was incapable of so great a guilt.

But in so general a dissolution of manners, are there none that stand intitled to more particular blame? Are not our great patrons of luxury a sort of anti-Curtii, who leap into the gulph for the ruin of their country? Their country's ruin they threaten by the malignity of their example; while by the profusion of their expence they nearly finish their own. What a weakness is self-denial? what idle self-tormentors are penitents? what wretched lunatics, lunatics, or gross suicides, are the noble army of martyrs, if these men are in the right? How cheap would their pleasures come, if they cost them nothing more than their health, credit, and estates?

Pleasure is in some sort more pernicious than direct vice. Vice has, naturally, some horror in it. It startles, and alarms the conscience, and puts us on our guard. Pleasure, under the colour of being harmless, has an opiate in it; it stupefies, and besots. In the soft lap of pleasure conscience falls asleep. Vice, losing its horror, becomes familiar. And as vice increases, some expedient becomes necessary to reconcile us to ourselves. Thus, looking out for some shadow of excuse, we naturally slide into groundless doubts, and become infidels out of pure self-defence.

And, as pleasure makes us infidels, by stupefying the conscience; so it makes us very bad husbands of temporal enjoyments, by darkening our understandings; and thus unqualifies us for the very point to which alone we pretend.

It is this cloud on their understanding which hinders our voluptuaries from discerning, that their blind rage for pleasure turns blessings into their reverse. Birth, education, and abundance, are great blessings; but, abused by pleasure into motives and instruments of indulgence, birth is more ignoble than obscurity; knowledge is more pernicious than ignorance; and abundance more a misfortune than want. Men of rank (and of such I speak) if wrong, can scarce avoid sinning beyond themselves. How pestilential their example falls on the lower world, which, under the welcome force of such illustrious authority, authority, turn dissolute, as much for the sake of their credit and fortune, as of their lusts; pride, and interest, bringing needless succour to loose desire; and Tyburn has sometimes reaped, what assemblies have sown. Great men in the wrong, are powerful engines of mischief, and, like bursting bombs, destroy themselves, and all around them.

And as to the two supreme blessings, and glories of man, their reason and immortality; these, as they manage it, flame out into vengeance too great to be mentioned without horror. Their reason serves only to render them more guilty; and their immortality to render endless the sad wages of their guilt.

It is this cloud on our understanding which makes us so little masters in the very science we profess. Happiness is our study, but are we not dunces in it? We know not, or seem not to know, that all real enjoyment lies within the compass of God's commands; which abridge not, but defend them: that when we dip too deep in pleasure, we stir a sediment, that renders it impure, and noxious: that (as much a paradox as it may seem) the best means of arriving at the true pleasures of the body, is to preserve, and cultivate, the powers of the soul; and that a good understanding is, in man, the source, and security, of mere animal delight.

Let these gentlemen take notice that I am not against enjoyment; I am as great a lover of it, as they; for without a relish of the good things of life, we cannot be thankful. Enjoy, but enjoy reasonably, and thankfully to the great Donor; that will secure us from excess. To enjoy, is our wisdom, and our duty; it is the great lesson of of human life; but a lesson which few have learned; and none less than these, who proclaim themselves masters of art in it.

It is this pleasure-bred cloud on the understanding, which makes us forget, that virtue is the health of the soul: that all provision, and parade from without, can make a sensualist just as happy, as the same can make an invalid: that both have pains adhering, necessarily, to their present state: that both have rather remedies, than joys: that assemblies, balls, masquerades, &c. are but as well-stored hospitals, unnecessary to the sound; and but poor palliatives to the sick: though pretenders to more than health, they confess our distemper; and, what is worse, increase the distemper they confess: and that of distempers the worst, a wrong judgment in our most important point.

I grant, that in the boundless field of licentiousness, some bastard joys may rise, that look gay, more especially at a distance; but they soon wither. No joys are always sweet, and flourish long, but such as have self-approbation for their root, and the divine favour for their shelter. We are for rootless joys, joys beyond appetite; which is the sole root of sensual delight. We are for joys, not of man's native growth, but forced up by luxurious art: dung'd by great expence; and shone on, not by the divine favour, but a strong imagination, which gives them all their little taste; and makes them apt, like other crude fruits, to surfeit, and destroy. We are, in a word, for joys of our own creation, the seeds of which Heaven never sowed in our hearts. But we may as well invade another prerogative of Heaven, and, with the tyrant of Elis, pretend to make thunder and lightning, as real joy. I say real joy; joy we may make, but not chearfulness. Joy may subsist without thought; chearfulness rises from it. Joy is from the pulse; chearfulness from the heart. That may give a momentary flash of pleasure; this alone makes a happy man. And happy men there may be, who never laughed in their lives: and in a situation, where reason calls for the reverse, there is not in nature so melancholy a thing as joy.
with

It is this intellectual cloud, which hangs, like a fog, over every gay resort of our moral invalids (though invisible to common eyes), which flings us not only into mistakes, but contradictions. How sick are we of yesterday? yet how fond of to-morrow, though devoted to the same cheat as the past? Which flings us into contradictions not only in reason; but contradictions to sense. We can't believe that fatigue, is fatigue; let its cause be what it will. Too much recreation tires as much, as too much business; yet one we swallow; are choaked by the other. The man of business has, at least, his seventh day's rest. Our fever for folly never intermits. Our week has no sabbath in it. So much harder is the master whom we serve, than that of better men; and yet, to our infamous honour be it spoken, we are better servants than they. How do we run, labour, expend; expose ourselves, hurt our families, resist unbounded, eternal temptations to wisdom; offer up the rich sacrifice of conscience, and understanding; watch; watch late; and all, but pray, for his service? Quite jaded with protracted amusements, we yawn over them. The dull drone of nominal diversion still humming ming on, when the short tune of enjoyment is over, lulls us quite asleep. Like the bear in the fable, we hug our darling to death. Instead of rejoicing in tribulation (of which few among us ever heard), we sorrow in delight: for, to speak the truth (though we would not have it divulged), we tread this eternal round of vanities, less, for the pleasure it brings, than for the pain it suspends. It is a refuge, not a prize. Like criminals (as we are), we fly to it from our much-injured, unforgiving foes, from ourselves; which chide and sting us, when alone; when together, we support each others spirits; which is like sailors clinging to each other for safety, when the vessel is sinking. We fly from ourselves, because we first fly from our Maker. Wretched flight! Hell is nothing but an intire absence from Him; and every partial departure has its proportion of it.

But those deep draughts of pleasure which besot us, must answer for all absurdities; and, among the rest, for our intire ignorance of the nature of that world in which we live. Mirth at a funeral is scarce more indecent and unnatural, than a perpetual flight of gaiety, and burst of exultation, in a world like this: a world, which may seem a paradise to fools, but is an hospital with the wise: a world, in which bare escape is a prime felicity. Effugere est triumphus.

The numberless pains of body, and mind; the dark, solemn approaches to, or dismal vestibules of, the grave, as well as opening graves themselves, are so thick scattered over the face of the whole earth, that an unpetrified heart can't look round, without feeling an inevitable damp, and general disconsolation; and venting a sigh universal

universal for the whole family of Adam, for the lot of all mankind. Nothing but strong faith in eternal life could hinder tears from bursting o'er it: Nor are tears too much; for sympathy is the chief duty of human life.

Were one tenth part of the wretchedness seen, that is felt; it would strike us with horror. Heaven means to make one half of the species a moral lecture to the other. It furrounds us with deplorable objects, not more for the sake of the wretched, than for our own; that our compassion awaken'd, may awaken our prudence; and teach us what we have to do, by shewing us what we have to fear. Shall the rich, and the well-educated, throw their abundance down the sink of unprofitable and untasted delights, while untaught multitudes mistake, and sin; and indigent multitudes shiver, and starve? While we think we are sparing expences, we are running in debt. How deep are we in arrears to the distressed? The distressed have, from reason, as just a demand on our superfluities, as we have, from law, on our stewards for our estates. But this is no play-debt, and therefore, without dishonour, undischarged.

Is then my repeated censure of intellectual darkness too severe? I wish it were. But, alas! how distant from their thoughts are the points the most important? How foreign to their interest, all that is nearest their hearts? When I speak of their darkness, I do not forget my own. There is not that man on earth that does not well deserve censure, and even from them. But there is difference in deviation from the right. Mulattos are not Ethiopians. I grant in their excuse, that, though all can see folly in pleasures past, yet must he be wiser than Solomon, who sees it in those to come. Yet wiser than Solomon, in this respect, must we be, or continue mere ideots; and ideots with regard to the present life; for this life's enjoyment lies, chiefly, in our title to the joys of the next; as earth becomes fruitful from the kind influence of the distant sun.

And now what occasion of advancing any thing more to the condemnation of these sons of Epicurus, and in disfavour of pleasure, than this, viz. That by darkening our understandings, it robs us of this world; and by stupefying our consciences, of the next. So far are they from their boasted happiness, that even in the judgment of a Heathen (not to mention the Scripture, of much less authority with them), they are dead while yet alive. Is demum VIVERE, atque animâ frui videtur; qui alicui intentus negotio, aut artis bonæ, aut præclari facinoris, famam quærit. Sallust.

It is said of their master Epicurus, Deos verbis reliquit, re sustulit. By his, and their, goddesses, Pleasure, they do just the same. They loudly boast, and effectually destroy, it; the first, through want of modesty; the last, through want of understanding. But they must keep themselves in countenance, though out of heart; and make themselves some small amends from vanity, for what is wanting to reason, and to sense.

Nor tread they their Master's steps in this alone. He, out of a swarm of dancing atoms was for making a world: They, out of a giddy whirl of innumerable amusements, those minute particles of pleasure, are for forming

forming happiness: A system equally philosophical; and of equal success. A God alone can make one; the god-like only can achieve the other: And where are they to be found in his hopeful school?

The one thing necessary for happiness is in common to both worlds; this, and the next. In vain we seek a different receipt for it, one in time, another in eternity. Virtue wanting, every thing else becomes necessary to happiness, and ineffectual. To what amounts, then, the boast of their numberless felicities? It brings, in proof of their happiness, a demonstration of their misery. A good man shall be satisfied from himself alone. A bad man shall be dissatisfied, with all the world at his devotion.

But there is a third particular, in which, if they had followed their Master, it would have been more for their advantage, and credit: An indulgent Providence has abundantly provided us with irreproveable pleasures; why are these swept away with an ungrateful hand, to make room for poisons of our own deadly composition, to be placed in their stead? Epicurus was in love with his gardens. But that is an amour too innocent for them: A garden has ever had the praise, and affection, of the wise. What is requisite to make a wise, and happy man, but reflection, and peace? and both are the natural growth of a garden. Nor is a garden only a promoter of a good man's happiness, but a picture of it; and, in some sort, shews him to himself. Its culture, order, fruitfulness, and seclusion from the world, compared to the weeds, wildness, and exposure of a common field, is no bad emblem of a good man, compared to the the multitude. A garden weeds the mind ; it weeds it of worldly thoughts ; and sows celestial seed in their stead. For what see we there, but what awakens in us our gratitude to heaven ? A garden to the virtuous is a paradise still extant ; a paradise unlost. What a rich present from heaven of sweet incense to man, was wafted in that breeze ? What a delightful entertainment of sight glows on yonder bed, as if in kindly showers the watry bow had shed all its most celestial colours on it ? Here are no objects that fire the passions : None that do not instruct the understanding, and better the heart, while they delight the sense ; but not the sense of these men. To them the tulip has no colours ; the rose no scent : Their palate for Pleasure is so deadened, and burnt out, by the violent stroke of higher tastes, as leaves no sensibility for the softer impressions of these ; much less for the relish of those philosophic, or moral, sentiments, which the verdant walk, clear stream, embowering shade, pendant fruit, or rising flower, those speechless, not powerless, orators, ever praising their great Author, inspire : Much less still for their religious inspirations. Who cannot look on a flower till he frightens himself out of infidelity ? Religion is the natural growth of the works of God ; and infidelity, of the inventions of men.

Spiritually blind, deaf, and stupid, they see not the great Omnipresent walking in the garden ; they hear not his call ; they know not that they are naked ; they hide not among the trees ; but stand in open defiance of his laws. Religion is far from them.

And where can we hope religion, if not in age ? And are there Hecubas to be found among the bright Helens of our times? Is diversion grown a leveller, like death? Can assemblies banish distinction, and shew us all dates, like church-yards? The latter, for their years, is the more proper scene. Give me leave, Sir, to address them; and address them in haste: They may die by to-morrow. To-night they are shining at the assembly. Thither, for a moment, imagination transports me to attend them.

“ So various, Ladies! and cogent, are the reasons
 “ which might call you to this place, that I am at a loss
 “ which to thank for the honour it receives. Come
 “ you to admire, or to be admired? Your modesty de“ clines the last. Come you out of kindness, then, to “ authorise those amusements, you chuse not to adorn?
 “ Or come you, out of compassion, to make these young “ criminals appear more innocent, than they could ap“ pear uncompar’d with superior indiscretion? Or come
 “ you, out of piety, to return thanks at this religious “ house, for your so narrowly escaping the grave? Or “ come you, out of pure generosity, to heighten the “ mirth of the night? Your point is carried. What “ borrowed ornaments are these? Is vanity still in its “ spring? Is the folly of hairless heads putting forth
 “ its gay blossoms in the December of life? Age can“ not drop its dignity, and yet retain its privileges. It “ must be laughed at, if it will not be revered; and ob“ jects of reverence cannot enter at these doors. We “ reverence age, as we reverence noble birth; on sup“ position, both: If our supposition proves false, our “ homage dies.

“ A little entertainment, you say, is natural.—What
 “ a por-

“ a portentous jumble of seasons, what a violation of “ nature is this ; winter dancing with the spring ? Where “ are the first partakers of your pastimes, when pastimes “ became you ? Their very monuments are in ruins.
 “ What real connexion of heart, or interests, can you
 “ have with any now alive ? And without such connec“ tion, how insipid your commerce with them ? Sure “ you cannot approve Mezentius's connection of the “ living with the dead.

“ Hang your hours, though, probably, so few, so very “ heavy on your hands, that you had rather bear con“ tempt, than them ? Is it drowned by the sprightly “ viol, or hear you yon solemn bell ? Wants that the “ power to call you to your closets, which calls your “ grand-children to their graves ? Is it thus you discharge
 “ the duties of age to the rising generation ? Whatever “ seeds of prudence you would sow in their hearts, be“ fore they can take root, these vanities blow away ;
 “ especially, if you, like the ladies of Lapland, heighten
 “ the * hurricane yourselves.

“ Have you never heard, my good Ladies, of the re“ demption of time ? You carry yours to market,
 “ and sell it for nothing ; nay, you dearly buy it off
 “ your hands. Can nothing but such trifles, such mur“ der of time, make you think that you are alive ? Can “ nothing but the stroke of death convince you, you “ shall die ? To their beauty alone, too much amuse“ ment is forgiven, even in the young. What, then,
 “ have you to plead ?—That which is fairer than beauty,
 “ If you will call it to your aid : Virtue can reconcile

* Some assemblies so called.

“ our respect to wrinkles. It can render age amiable,
 “ when bloom smiles in vain. But vice, and defor“ mity, when twisted together, is such a Gorgon, as turns
 “ the tenderest heart into stone.

“ Pardon, Ladies ! that I presume to call that vice,
 “ which you will soften by some milder name. What is “ innocence in youth, may be vice in years. Besides,
 “ mark the mischief of what you call harmless expedi-
 “ ents to smoothe the rugged path of life. You spread
 “ that path with snares, to the ruin of those you love.
 “ You make parental authority, that natural safeguard
 “ of youth, their temptation to folly ; and filial obedi- “ ence, so lovely, so pious, the strange cause of their “ crimes. Through such mazes of more than folly,
 “ when parents lead the way ; children, out of pure “ duty, may tread their wrong steps. Or, if they have “ more discernment, or more grace ; what follows ?—
 “ What you yourselves will be shocked to hear ; and I
 “ to tell : A daughter blushing for her who bore her.
 “ Which, to my knowlege, and astonishment, has been
 “ the too memorable, and too deplorable, case.”

Here I would fain leave off, and throw a mantle over the nakedness of our own sex : But that would be too great partiality. It is too sure Adam also fell. As I have spoken to his daughters, I must speak, Sir, by your permission, now to his aged sons. I can speak with more freedom to these : I was forced to spare his daughters, out of decency.

“ Ye first on roll for Eternity ! why this waste of time ?
 “ Why is its date quite erased ? Your spruce appearance
 “ is

“ is a perfect forgery. And deserves it not the wonted “ penalty for it? You, for whom it is almost as unna“ tural, as for a mole, to be seen above-ground, what “ mean you by trespassing on this nether world? Or if “ here, ye deserters from death! to whose corps you “ belong, why list into so very foreign a service? Death,
“ the more he is forgot, the more formidable he grows.
“ But how could you forget him, who have seen him “ snatching from your bosoms such numbers of your “ friends? Has he so often knocked at the next door, and “ so frequently shook his lance in vain? Will you drop “ into the grave on your road to the ball? You, who,
“ one full age of man expired, commence, a new, with “ all the wantonness of youth, by an antichristian re“ generation; a second birth into all the foibles of a sen“ sual life! Consider, what tender reverence, what re“ spect mixt with compassion, is paid to years owning “ their infirmities, and supporting them, as they ought.
“ But infirmities of body dissembled, that those of the “ mind may be the more indulged; a vicious mind “ stinging on a jaded body into shame; this calls not “ only for the scorn, but detestation, of mankind.

“ Consider, Sirs! is there not some mistake? Do not “ your minds, through disorder of the machine, go too “ slow, and misrepresent the time of day? Else, how “ could men, who have not space sufficient left between “ them, and their graves, for life's wonted delusions to “ display their gay phantoms; who can hardly hope to “ repeat to-morrow the farce of to-day; still persist to “ be boys? Young men, indeed, may see visions of what “ never shall come to pass; and be ravished with them:
“ But old men in their senses, cannot so much as dream

“ dreams of delight ; such delight, I mean, as yours.
 “ What delight can these gay scenes afford you ? I “ should think you should be more mortified, than “ amused, where you scarce can see a face that does “ not make you look twenty years older than before.
 “ Hope you any regard, or affection among them ? No ; “ despair even of toleration, but when these moderns, for “ amusement, dip into you, as into chronological tables,
 “ to know what happened before the flood : Find friends
 “ in coevals, or despair.

“ Indeed, my good friends, in one sense, most cer“ tainly, you are strangers upon earth, why will you
 “ not be so in the best ? That you might be so in the “ best, is, probably, the sole reason you are still alive.
 “ Men in years, and the clergy, are the two natural “ supports of virtue and religion ; that is, the two co“ lumns on which public welfare is built : And the first
 “ is the stronger, as there is less prejudice against it.
 “ They both have higher obligations to be wise than “ other men : And if the world sees those higher obli“ gations fail of their due effect, their consciences will “ sit easier under the neglect of their own. The clergy “ are volunteers ; the aged are pressed by nature into
 “ the service of wisdom : And if they both desert, vice “ may triumph without a battle ; and virtue fall with“ out a mourner.

“ Ye fine men of rank, and parts ! a common soldier
 “ (your contempt, no doubt) shall reproach you. One
 “ of them, requesting dismissal from CHARLES Vth,
 “ gave this reason for it, Inter vitæ negotia extremumque
 “ diem oportet aliquod temporis intercedere. Much more,

“ inter

“ inter vitæ voluptates, and our last hour. Will you go
 “ to your graves with your eyes shut, as Plutarch tells “ you the Spartans went to their beds in the dark? If “ so, as reasonable men in years enter their graves, as “ a harbour; you will strike on yours, as on a rock.
 “ You do not only expose yourselves, but your whole
 “ species. When they that have most reason to be wise, “ are the farthest from it; it sinks the dignity of our “ common nature, brings, beyond all other enormities,
 “ a reproach on mankind; and gives each individual,
 “ as a sufferer, as a sharer in the scandal, a just right
 “ not only of censure, but revenge.

“ This will excuse my indignation at two notorious of“ fenders; and therefore I shall dare name them. Who “ are they, but Sedbury, and Torrismond? Their pictures
 “ have been partly drawn by the famous Seymour: I “ shall sketch the rest. These are two perfect heroes
 “ in this transgression; old offenders in an offence,
 “ which, till old, they could not begin: Who join the “ gallantries of Paris to the years of Nestor: Who read
 “ a play-bill, and a bill of mortality, with the same sen“ sation, and aspect: Who can amuse themselves with “ a cathedral service; and go for an hour’s diversion to “ the funeral of a friend!

“ How many friends have they lost? that is, how “ often has their confidence in the world been shaken
 “ at the root? And give they still full proof of their ob“ stinate adherence to, and cordial incorporation with,
 “ it? Has it not daily crumbled away in their fingers?
 “ and will they hug it still? How can their hearts still “ swell with those flattened bubbles of idle joy, so often “ pricked by death?

“ Ye two antideluvian youths ! what greater folly on “ earth than that of confounding seasons, and not giv“ ing their respective appropriations to the different pe“ riods of life ? Nothing can be in credit, that is out “ of character ; and credit you affect, no one more. If “ you would find it, let these gentle hints, like the light “ touch of a magic wand, make you shrink from your “ vernal bloom ; and wither at least to the decencies of “ fourscore ; for I would make you some allowance “ still.

“ Know ye not that they who in their wrinkled de“ cline outdive in folly the temerities of youth, and die “ immaturely at twice the age of man, are void of “ shame from censure human, and divine ; quite callous
 “ to God, and men ? Know you not that such faults “ after seventy are as severely judged by this world, as
 “ the next ? To be born like a wild ass's colt, is natural ;
 “ but not to live so, and retain the colt's tooth, when “ all the man's are fallen out. Time was, when to “ centaurize was less ridiculous. But unless your eque“ strian part is now dismissed, laughter is irresistible ; as “ your friend Horace assures you :

*Solve senescentem mature sanus equum, ne
 Peccet ad extremum ridendus.*

“ Instead of surfeiting every public place with your un-“ godly omnipresence, you should be reserved as the “ great Mogul. A little self-annihilation would be the “ wisest way even for your own vanity ; for the more
 “ we forget our age, the more we remind others of it ;
 “ and

“ and the younger we would appear, so much older “ shall we look, in all eyes but our own.

“ Yes, gentlemen! to preserve your dignity, retire
“ like eastern kings. And kings, indeed, you may be,
“ and glorious ones too, if you will be wise: For „ wif-“ „ dom is the crown of old age; and the fear of the “ „ Lord is its glory.”

Since the witchcraft of Pleasure is so strong as to turn young men into old, by their infirmities; and old into young, by their affectation, and conceit; let us look a little more narrowly into the perverse composition of that marvellous being, which we style a Man of Pleasure; and make somewhat, if possible, like an analysis of it.

The man of Pleasure (though I fear he never asked himself the question) of what nature, species, or rank in the creation conceives he himself to be? Does this yet uncontrued, undecyphered creature consider himself as an immortal being? or only as a rational? or as a mere animal? If as an immortal, let him regard things eternal: If as a rational, let reason reign: If as a mere animal, let him indulge appetite; but not go beyond it. When appetite is satisfied, an animal's meal is over: If as a composition of all three; let it not be a confusion of them; let it be a composition; and order alone can preserve that name.

No; he is for neither of these. He is an immortal, without a sense of immortality. He is a rational, dethroning reason; and an animal, transgressing appetite: An unhappy combination, a wretched chaos of all, without the benefit of either: Nay, a sufferer from each, because an abuser of all. They are not, as heaven designed them, three parties in alliance for his happiness: but three conspirators, of his own making, against his peace.

For mark this immoral maze of human ruin; appetite, reason, and immortality, violate, and are violated by, each other. Subtle reason finds arts, and arguments to tempt appetite beyond her bounds. Unbounded appetite with stupefying sensualities bribes reason to drop her dominion. Her dominion dropped renders blind immortality regardless of things eternal: And they being disregarded, all immortality's boundless powers, and desires, devolve on things temporal; and devolved on them, with violence impel deposed reason, and riotous appetite, to monstrous lengths of extravagance, which had otherwise lain quite beyond both their power, and desire.

Thus stands the perplexed, and hitherto, not unravel'd case. The man, in his constitution, debauches the brute: The brute debauched, dethrones the man: The dethroned man, and debauched brute, join in rebellion against the immortal: The subdued immortal resigns to them its infinite powers and desires; which they exert to the destruction absolute of all three.

The man, if not in alliance with an immortal, never would have had an unbounded power and desire. If not in alliance with a brute, he never would have debased them to mean, and sordid ends; never would have confined them to things below: But being joined to both,
and,

and, through perverseness, and stupidity, rendering celestial immortality inglorious, and terrestrial brutality more brutal, he creates a far more miserable being than either of them apart could possibly have been. We may therefore congratulate the mere brute on his high prerogative of being incapable of becoming such a monster of rationality as this. And The Man of Pleasure, if modest, will, for the future, give the wall to his horse. He, like Codrus, disguises himself, puts off his dignity to rush into danger; and happy for him, if he meets with nothing worse than death.

Reason, and immortality, the man, and the immortal, these only occasion the calamity; and the poor animal, an innocent ally, must suffer with them.

If your sister's favourites will contemplate themselves in any glass but their own, let them look in this true mirror; and though the features are somewhat monstrous, let them not disown them; since they may change them when they please; and they are pictured so minutely, that they may be the more inclined so to do. For what a hideous ruin of humanity is this? The world after the deluge, a less melancholy sight. Such shocking footsteps sin leaves behind it, in nature animate, and inanimate. Reason, and virtue, are the sole beauty, and sole salvation of all. Through all her realms creation groans without it. The Deity is all reason in his nature, conduct, and commands. The great, invincible, eternal alternative, throughout his creation, is, or reason, or ruin. To how many ears in this happy metropolis is this dismal news?

I was going to say, that reason is the sole basis of happiness ; but it is not. There are three kinds of happiness on earth, gradually less, and less. There is a happiness from the exertion of reason, where reason is given : This is the happiness of a man. There is an inferior happiness from the gratification of sense, where reason is denied : This is the happiness of a brute. And there is a calamitous happiness where reason is suppressed, or abused : And this is the happiness of a wretch. You see then in what line of happiness our fine men must be content to rank.

I know your sister will call my analysis above, a labyrinth of sophistry. I will therefore give The Man of Pleasure's character in a manner less perplexed, and which she may probably censure as too plain ; and may wish a clue were wanting to find the meaning.

He is one, who, desirous of being more happy than any man can be, is less happy than most men are.

One, who seeks happiness every-where, but where it is to be found.

One, who out-toils the labourer, not only without his wages, but paying dearly for it.

He is an immortal being, that has but two marks of a man about him, upright stature, and the power of playing the fool, which a monkey has not.

He is an immortal being, that triumphs in this single, deplorable, and yet false hope, that he shall be as happy
as

as a monkey when they are both dead ; though he despairs of being so, while yet alive.

He is an immortal being, that would lose none of its most darling delights, if he were a brute in the mire ; but would lose them all intirely, if he were an angel in heaven.

It is certain, therefore, that he desires not to be there : And if he not so much as desires it now, how can he ever hope it, when his day of dissipation is over ? And if no hope—what is our Man of Pleasure ? A man of distraction, and despair, to-morrow.

And who would buy to-day so dear, if it were so to be bought ? as certainly it is not. Doubtless the true Man of Pleasure is he, who preserves order in his compounded nature ; and gives the animal, rational, and immortal, their respective dues. Who, as immortal, places in the supreme Being his supreme delight ; and, as rational, shunning superstitious austerities, and, as animal, too great indulgencies ; admits of all secular enjoyments that are strictly consistent with his supreme. The true, and false, Man of Pleasure are brothers ; born of the same parent, viz. an inextinguishable love of delight : But so superior is one to the other, that like the fabled brothers Castor and Pollux, one may be said to be in heaven, the other on earth.

To be more explicit, I would gather three particular branches from this general root of happiness, and present them to your sister, as a specimen of the rest.

There

There is no man of Pleasure without his Eve ; no Eve without her serpent ; no serpent without its sting. He that knows not the pure delight, and ever-growing tenderness of a chaste love, knows not the most that the fairest can bestow.

He that knows not the sound cordiality, and constant warmth of a disinterested friendship, knows not the most that man can enjoy from man.

He that keeps not open a constant intercourse with heaven by frequent fervours of rational devotion, knows not a joy still sublimer than both.

What are the joys of vice, compared to these ? What think their deluded admirers of a magnanimous triumph over strong temptation ; of a sweet repose in divine favour and protection ; of an indefeasible right to life eternal ? Is there not a certain grandeur, and solidity of happiness in this ? Is not this better than ranging from the gaming-house to brothels ; and with other little fluttering, gilded, noxious, liquorish, insects, to be fixing on every nuisance for delight ? Sons of Beelzebub the god of flies. I like not a certain, modest faintheartedness in the friends, and advocates of what is right. A Christian should let all see what an animation there is in Christianity above all that the world may admire besides. Christianity should be the boast, as well as comfort, of our hearts.

And now if we enquire after the cause which has brought us into that fool's paradise, on which I have dwelt so long, we shall see with what good reason

Pleasure,

Pleasure, and Infidelity, are joined together in my plan.

The Scripture ascribes the conquest of the world; that is, of its Pleasures, to faith; and is very copious in enumerating renowned instances of it. Were faith as prevalent in us, we too should prove Alexanders in the moral world. All agree, that several goods being proposed for our ultimate enjoyment, it is impossible in our nature not to chuse the best. All agree, that God's promises are better than any thing we can carve for ourselves. And all agree, that they are inconsistent with sin. So that he who will take out his portion in this life, must lose it in the next. What then, against our nature, and against our reason, hinders us from prosecuting our chiefest good?—Want of faith. All is resolvable into that alone.

For instance. Our temptations are of two kinds. From things that grieve, or things that please; the former fright, the latter allure us, from our virtue. From poverty, pain, disgrace, or persecution, we fly to falsehood, or fraud, for escape. But those ills are not the immediate cause of it; but want of faith in God's promises, that, “He will succour us in those exigencies; and deliver us in his good time; and make all things work together for our good.” On the other hand, when Pleasure intices, and carries its point; we do not think those Pleasures, be they what they will, preferable to heaven. But heaven is at a distance, and the soul is eager for present good. But why is heaven at a distance? for want of faith; for faith is “the substance of things hoped for; and the evidence of things not seen.” It “ an-antedates the existence of that which is future ; makes “ our conversation in heaven, though we are still in the “ body ; associates us with angels, tho’ in our solitude ;

 “ and gives us greater joy in contemplation, than the “ world can give in hand.” This is true, or the conduct of those heroes in Scripture had been impracticable ! and they, like ourselves, were mere men. Thus Infidelity leads to Pleasure ; and Pleasure confirms Infidelity ; and both together consummate ruin.

These gentlemen seem to think that the world was made in jest ; that there is nothing of moment, or serious in it. There is nothing else. There is not a fly, but has had infinite wisdom concern’d, not only in its structure, but in its destination. And was man made only to flutter, sing, and expire ? A mere expletive in the mighty work, the marvellous operations of the Almighty ? Is joy their point ? He that to the best of his power has secured the final stake has a fons perennis of joy within him. He is satisfied from himself. They, his reverse, borrow all from without. Joy wholly from without, is false, precarious, and short. From without it may be gathered ; but, like gathered flowers, though fair, and sweet for a season, it must soon wither, and become offensive. Joy from within, is like smelling the rose on the tree ; it is more sweet and fair ; it is lasting ; and, I must add, immortal.

As, therefore, I have above offered these gentlemen three expedients for happiness ; to persuade their acceptance of them, I shall now give three short maxims, which will sit light on their memories, and (I hope) in time, easy on their hearts.

Ho

He that will not fear, shall feel the wrath of heaven.

He that lives in the kingdom of sense, shall die into the kingdom of sorrow.

He shall never truly enjoy his present hour, who never thinks on his last.

Let your sister, dear Sir, tell her grey pretty fellows, who are apostles to these Gentiles, that, if they can advance three maxims of greater truth; or three expedients of greater efficacy to happiness, than those above-mentioned; I am their convert; I exchange my Bible for Bolingbroke; and prepare for the ball: For N. B. I am but fourscore.

With best wishes to you, and those you love, that is, all mankind; I am,

Dear Sir,

Most affectionately,

Yours.

L E T-

the that will not fear, shall yield the wrath of heaven.

He that lives in the kingdom of love, shall die into the kingdom of glory.

He shall never truly enjoy his present home, who never thinks on his last.

Let your sister, dear Sir, tell her very pretty fellows, who are apostles to these Gentiles, that if they can add various three maxims of greater truth; or three expedients of greater efficacy to happiness, than these apostles

mentioned; I am their constant; I exchange my labors for Brothbrokers and purgative for the hall; for the

I am but a theorist, and a theorist is a man who has no other business than to talk of things which he never does.

With best wishes to you, and those you love, that is, all mankind, I am,

Dear Sir, your most obedient servant,

John Locke

London

1704

1704

1704

1704

1704

L E T T E R III.

O N

P L E A S U R E.

In ANSWER to One received.

Dear Sir,

TH E contents of your letter damp my joy in hearing from you. Even a good man's approaching death strikes us with some concern. I am sorry that the sting, which Pleasure left in your unhappy friend, occasions so swift a decline. How naturally we lay hold on heaven when the world sinks under us, and will support our hopes no more! The piece of devotion which you desire, you shall receive in my next. I cannot reflect on your friend's distress, and a noble youth whom I myself attended in his extremes, without dwelling still longer on Pleasure, which has cost the world so dear.

If disease, and infirmity, make us daily visits in the persons of our neighbours, and friends; and death by the same affecting messengers, gives us frequent notice that he will be with us soon:

If

If, when death arrives, all mankind, however divided before, unanimously close in one opinion, and one wish :

If libertine enjoyments hasten the approach, and heighten the dread, and imbitter the consequences, of death :

If death is the single event sure, and virtue the single pursuit indefeasible ; and the Divine Favour the single point of absolute importance :

If that favour comes so cheap, that the very leavings (in time, care, and expence) of our real enjoyments, would go a great way in the purchase of it :

If the martyr's blood makes that purchase sure ; and it is impossible that martyrdom, and voluptuousness, should share the same fate :

If the fate to be shared is endless ; and this life but as a moment to an age ; and an age not a moment to eternity ; and eternity as much ours, as the present hour :

If he, that is over-fond of the present, or high in expectation from any future, hour, either knows not this world ; or believes not in the next :

If all this is true ; that is, if it is day at noon ; how happy, like your friend Eusebius, to strike early into the right path ; and not so long to slumber in indulgence, like the noble youth (of whom I shall soon speak), as to suffer the birth-day of our understanding to be the last day of our lives ?

I told you, in a former letter, that I would give you your friend Eusebius's character at large ; not, to be sure, for for your information; but to place him in opposition to the Men of Pleasure: And so, that their deformity may be set in a stronger light, for the benefit of those weak eyes, who cannot see a mountain without spectacles; with whom a Centaur passes for a man. Or, rather, who think a Man of Pleasure an extremely happy creature, and, with antient astronomers, place the Centaur in heaven. Their Sagittarius there, or eternal hunter, ever aiming at Pleasure, and ever missing his mark. How very much, the character of Eusebius will plainly shew.

Facem preferre pudendis.

Juv.

Men of Pleasure, notwithstanding all the thorns they meet with in their flowery path, imagine all would enter it, but for want of taste, or spirit, or purse: Eusebius wants none of these. He wants not a taste for aught that can gratify either imagination or sense; that can make a coxcomb or debauché; but he is neither. Nor wants he a purse, or heart, to provide those gratifications. His purse is large; larger his heart; but not corrupt, and nobly wrong. He is young, gay, rich, expensive. So far he is with them; but will leave them soon, as the sun slides from under an eclipse. His riches widen the circle of his virtues. Their riches increase the number of their crimes. There are two kinds of expence: in both, riches make themselves wings, and fly away. But widely different in their flight: in one they fly away as an eagle towards heaven: in their flight beautiful, and celestial in their end. In the other, they fly away as an owl to the desert: ungracious and ill-omened, in their flight, and ending in the desert of ignominy, and ruin.

Eusebius,

Eusebius, though liberal to the demands of nature, rank, and duty; starves vice, caprice, and folly. These (the great cormorants of gold), he sends begging to their doors; they, as old intimates, welcome, and embrace them all. And if they have not thrice the fortune of Eusebius, must soon be beggars themselves. While he, with one half they sink in a debauch; lifts beggars (beggars, I mean from fortune, not from folly) into the real comforts of life.

He too has his amusements; but not such as deaden, but revive: such as recover the relaxed tone of application; reanimate to new effort; and thus are essential, though pausing, parts of noble, well-judging industry. He starts not at a masquerade: nor thinks cards the books of the devil. But thinks all our diversions like long books, that were better epitomized; or, like the books of the Sybil, which, as they were lessened in number, rose in their price.

He, as well as they, has his parks, gardens, grottos, cascades, statues, paintings, &c but enjoys them more. Not because his are better than theirs, but because he is better than they. His paintings have beauties unborrowed from the pencil; and his statues in his eyes appear, like Pygmalion's, to live; though mere marble in theirs. His all-animating joy within gives graces to art, and smiles to nature, invisible to common eyes. Objects of sense, and imagination, for their greater power of pleasing, are indebted to the goodness of his heart. For as the sun is itself the most glorious of objects, and makes all others shine, so virtue itself is the greatest of pleasures, and of all other pleasures redoubles the delight.

He,

He, and they, though they both value riches, yet entertain widely different opinions about them. He considers a great fortune, as his being put, by a kind providence, into its honourable commission for doing much good. They consider it as a privilege, or at least as an excuse, for the contrary. He surveying his ample arcades, and lofty domes, rejoices more in what benefits others, than what aggrandizes himself: rejoices more in considering how many mouths he has fed, than in considering how many eyes he has drawn. He triumphs in reflecting to what numbers he has been enabled, by the divine indulgence, to turn, without a miracle, those stones into bread. They, from their huge Babel-like buildings, contract a Babel-like pride, which turns, with regard to those beneath them, their hearts into stone. Such men, in effect, build downward, are the more ignoble, that is the lower, for their height.

He thinks, that heaven's rich donations imply in them some transfer to the public: they think they imply a transfer of the public homage to themselves. Instead of imagining his grandeur to be a demand on the public for its homage, he looks on it as the public's demand on him for bounty, and patronage, of which he has erected such proud promises; and by them raised so just an expectation. He thinks, that their riches (how strangely soever it may sound) run them in debt; and that not to benefit, is, to defraud.

His humility is equal to his magnificence; and as magnificence with humility speaks more regard for others, than himself, it escapes envy, and ensures general applause. Their pride defeats their magnificence, and robs it of that applause, which is its single aim: For it is a great authority which tells us, "That pride is a tree which eats up its own fruit."
great

He knows (what they consider not), that splendid superiorities cannot be neutral, with regard to the characters of those who possess them; that, therefore, men possess them at their peril; that they must degrade, if they do not exalt them. That heaven, which in spite of different ranks, levels happiness, designed it as the peculiar curse of the great (if they deserve it) to be lessened by grandeur, and illustriously disgraced. That, if apes, and crocodiles, men hurtful, or ridiculous, inhabit superb piles, they must despair of being worshiped; though but through vain and keen appetite for public incense, they never had been built.

You see in how many points these men fall short of Eusebius in Pleasure from expence; which, notwithstanding, is an article on which they pique themselves not a little. And give me leave to subjoin one more particular, which will affect them less than the former, though it ought to affect them most of all: his wealth has subterranean chanel; blesses unseen; and costs the relieved neither blushes, nor thanks. Not one prison have they opened; not one tear have they dried; which might speak in their favour, when their own begin to flow. The sorrows we have relieved are the surest support in our own. The best that can be said of their expences, is, that they are an unwilling encomium on those of your friend.

Sensual, of all our pleasures are the meanest; how low must a soul celestial stoop for them? Yet these, our thirsty sponges of sensuality, who suck up every drop of it, in or

or out of, their way, tho' they take up the dirt, with it, prefer to all the rest. And in these, if in any, they will venture to dispute his superiority. But, for reasons, some already mention'd ; more, most obvious, He is their superior in these. In pleasures intellectual, how far are they behind him ? and then the moral, they are all his own. It is one of their minute, and meagre pleasures, professedly to decline them : And these are the supreme. Moral pleasures, tho' faintly (in this imperfect state), yet truly taste of heaven ; and, what is more, insure that heaven of which they taste. And what an inestimable superiority is this ? He that can think of death undismay'd, Extremumque diem vitæ inter munera ponit. LU.

has more enjoyment, even in distress, than they in triumph, with every vain amusement turning reason out of doors, lest it should wound them with one whisper of the grave. On how many melancholy occasions in life should we be glad of an asylum to which to fly ? How should we be transported with a thought that had infallible comfort in it ? And that thought can be but one ; and that one, it is the constant aim, labour, nay boast, of these wise men to destroy.

Eusebius's love of pleasure is equal to theirs ; whence then this vast inequality of happiness ? He commands his pleasures ; some he cultivates ; some admits cautiously ; others sends blushing away. Their pleasures domineer ; scout them away on vilest errands ; bid them throw their patrimony in the dirt of prostitution, or debauch ; or dungeon them in midnight dens of fraud, and destruction ;

tion ; and command them to whirl it away with a losing card ; or stamp it to nothing with a desperate dye. What scaffolds of fatal execution are those guilty boards, where moments determine on fortunes for life ; and rage, and distraction threaten ruin eternal ?

From this thralldom to their pleasures, this wretched impotence of heart, it is that while he has but one, and that a most gracious Master, they have as many tyrants as there are follies, and vices, in the world. Ten times a day they change their Pharaoh ; and why ? Because his wages are so poor. They have it, indeed, in their power to change their master, but not to break their chain.

The Romans once pretended that they had a golden shield which fell from heaven : To secure it from theft, they laid it up among eleven others made of brass. This expedient had been unnecessary against their wisdom. They run away by choice with the eleven counterfeits ; with a multitude of false, ineffectual pleasures, and leave the celestial, as of no value, to men of less understanding.—Virtue, the delight of Eusebius, is a celestial shield against every evil of human life. Their pleasures are rather swords, that pierce them through with many sorrows.

The contrast how strong ! Their pleasures die in fruition, and are remembered with regret. His survive the present actual enjoyment, and are as sweet in retrospect, as in hand. Theirs lessen on repetition ; his increase : Theirs create, and aggravate, calamities ; his avert most, and alleviate the rest : Theirs hasten death, and heighten heighten its horrors ; his owe their perfection to his final hour, after having heightened, and lengthened, all the blessings of life. And what a wretch is that happiness, and what an idiot that wisdom, that can offer no comfort in the days of darkness, and the hours of death ? In a word, their wretched joys flourish, like dismal weeping willows watered by a ditch : Poor the figure they make ; flux and obscene the ground on which they stand : His flourish, like cedars of Libanus, from the fountains of heaven ; and are rooted in a rock ; the rock of his salvation.

It is this superior ground on which he stands, which imparts that inimitable sweetness of air, aspect, and deportment, which marks him among multitudes of the gayest, for the gay. They, like things gilt, have much to shew ; much more to hide ; are all darkness within. He, like a diamond, is transparent, and shines at heart. He looks, as if virtue, according to the wish of some sages, was at last become visible, and shone through him ; in person, not precept, making a visit to mankind : And man is mended by looking on him.

Now, please, Sir, to observe, to what an astonishing degree that intellectual darkness, mentioned in my former letter, prevails in these men, that would outshine all the world. What is their chief boast ? Why this, that they make the most of this life. Whereas the very fundamental difference between them, and Eusebius, is, That they make nothing of this world, because they design to make their all of it. He makes much of this world, because he holds it as little ; because ever having the sentiments, without the terrors, of a death-bed, he never cuts off this life from the thoughts of the next; but sees his whole existence in one unbroken thread extended before him.

But, before I dismiss your friend Eusebius (though he has made you a very long visit), I must take notice of one particular more. These gentlemen pique themselves on their epitome of all virtue and religion, benevolence: If they had it, it would confute most I have said; and make them very happy: For it may stand as a general maxim, that men are happy in proportion to their goodwill: Nor is it strange, that, to the greatest duty, should, by nature, belong the greatest reward. But their title to this virtue is not clear. The reason they so loudly pretend to it, is, because they know they have it not. The weakest side of a citadel is to be defended most. Eusebius, on his principles, must have universal goodwill. Self-love obliges him to it; and his own happy state of mind inclines him the same way: For all are most kind to others, when most easy, and pleased with themselves. On their principles, that this world is all; or, at least, all they will concern themselves about; self-love obliges them to the contrary: And their uneasiness in themselves seconds that obligation: So that you may as well expect to find an angel among the dissolute, as a friend. And, indeed, can any expect that they should love them, better than their own souls? Yet that would they do, if they car'd for them at all.

But, instead of endeavouring to prove what needs no proof, I shall present you with the picture of one of these great lovers of all mankind, if you will promise not to cut his throat; which picture, better than a Demosthenes, will prove my point. You will know whom I mean,

I mean, when I tell you, that he is enamoured of the charms, and deep in the mysteries of play. That is, he is so fond of riches (which a good judge tells us * nemo bonus unquam concupivit), of riches is he so over-fond, that he is quite miserable if denied a daily chance of being stripped to beggary. Greater professions of friendship can no man make, than this arch-promiser: greater proofs of the contrary can no man give. He never did a favour that proved barren to his own designs, but he sent a curse after it. All his kindnesses are artificial flies; if nothing is caught, they are pocketed again. "Hook him, or hang him," is a favourite maxim of his own coining. He smiles, indeed, with great complacency on a crowded levee of devoted friends; with no less than on a hand of good cards. And his hope from both is just the same; that is, so to play them off, as to win his game. That done, if interest, or humour bids, he throws them aside as a foul pack, and calls for new; to shuffle, and cheat, and play tricks with, as before. He considers fools, as trumps, with which he is sure to win. If there are no fools to be taken in, he makes a pretty good hand of it with a knave of the right suit. If he is so unlucky as not to be blessed with either, he gives out, and, for that time, plays no more: For, without a good hand, a bad heart is insupportable. But prosperity soothes remorse, and lays conscience asleep. This is one who knows the world; which, generally, means, one that knows not God. He never thought of that great, final stake, with regard to which, he, that honestly but desires it, is sure to win; and he that plays foul the most dextrously, is sure to be undone. Such is Avidienus, such is that good man, who, as freely as eat his meal, could lay down his life for his friend.

But, in excuse for such men, I must own, that, for such as place their all here, there can be no shadow of social happiness but from deceiving, or being deceived. From deceiving, and so finding some account in their villainy: Or from being deceived, and so finding some account in their folly. For real friendship amongst them is impossible: And, indeed, to hope a friend in any man, that is not truly his own friend, is absurd. From this account, it is evident, that the chief fountain of happiness is dried up in their hearts.

A wretch, almost smothered with all the reputed means of happiness, would of all objects be the most ridiculous, were it not the most melancholy too. Dio-genes went about the city of Athens begging to the statues; being asked the reason, he said, He was learning to bear a repulse. These gentlemen should learn the same lesson; no statue can be deafier than most of their pursuits, when they ask real pleasure of them.

These are the men, who, while Providence lays the reins of free-will on their wanton necks, rush headlong into even unimportant temptations. But when it shall put its hook in their nose, and its bridle in their jaws; when it shall drag them into the condition of your unhappy friend; or worse, when the tattered, convulsed, body shall be shaking out an unwilling soul, loth to leave it for a still worse habitation; then, oh! what a change! It places full before me the last hours of that noble youth I mentioned above. Last hours full of anguish!
how

how fit to be remembered by those that wish peace to their own. This is the funeral to which, in my first letter, I promised to invite your sister Sempronia, and her gay admirers; Sempronia, who delights psallere, & cantare, elegantius quam necesse est probæ. And what invitation more kind than that for which she may thank me for ever, when other entertainments end? If they have their wine, this has its nectar. Its cup of salvation, pressed from that Vine, whose leaves heal the nations, and whose swelling clusters teem with eternal bliss. Funeral solemnities are more for the sake of the living than the dead. What a trifle that honour they receive from them, to the benefit we may reap from that affecting scene!

Oh! Sir, how affecting! It is still before my eyes. That wretched youth dies again! Again I am smitten with his death. It wounds me even in remembrance: What, then, the scene itself! No words can paint it; no time efface it; I meet it in my dreams; I shall bear it to my grave.

I am about to represent to you the last hours of a person of high birth, and high spirit; of great parts, and strong passions, every way accomplished, nor least in iniquity. His unkind treatment was the death of a most amiable wife; and his great extravagance, in effect, disinherited his only child.

But to my point. The death-bed of a profligate is next in horror to that abyss, to which it leads. It has the most of hell that is visible on earth. And he that has seen it, has more than faith to confirm him in his creed.

I see it now. For who can forget it? Are there in it no flames, and furies?—You know not, then, what a scar'd imagination can figure; what a guilty heart can feel. How dismal is it! The two great enemies of soul and body, sickness and sin, sink and confound his friends; silence, and darken the shocking scene. Sickness excludes the light of heaven; and sin, its blessed hope. Oh! double darknes! more than Egyptian! Acutely to be felt!

How unlike those illuminated revels of which he was the soul? Did this poor, pallid, scarce-animated mass dictate in the cabinet of pleasure; pronounce the fashion; and teach the gayest to be gay? Are these the trophies of his Paphian conquests? these the triumphs to be bought with heaven? Is this he who smote all their hearts with envy at his pre-eminence in guilt? See, how he lies a sad, deserted, outcast on a narrow isthmus between time and eternity? for he is scarce alive. Lash'd and overwhelm'd on one side, by the sense of sin; on the other, by the dread of punishment! Beyond the reach of human help, and in despair of divine!

His dissipated fortune, impoverish'd babe, and murder'd wife, lie heavy on him: The ghost of his murder'd time (for now no more is left), all stain'd with folly, and gash'd with vice, haunts his distracted thought. Conscience, which long had slept, awakes like a giant refreshed with wine; lays waste all his former thoughts, and desires; and, like a long-depos'd, now victorious prince, on his bleeding heart, imposes, inflicts, its own. Its late soft whispers are thunder in his ears; and all means of grace rejected, exploded, ridiculed, is the bolt that strikes him dead. Dead even to the thoughts of death. In deeper distress, despair of life is forgot. He lies a wretched wreck of man on the shore of eternity, and the next breath he draws, blows him off into ruin.
his

The greatest profligate is, at least, a momentary saint, at such a sight: For this is a sight which plucks off the mask of folly, strips her of her gay disguise, which glittered in the false lights of this world's mummery, and makes her appear to be folly, to the greatest fool.

How think we then? Is not the deathbed of a profligate the most natural and powerful antidote for the poison of his example? Heals not the bruised scorpion the wound it gave? Intends not heaven, that, struck with the terrors of such an exit, we should provide comfort for our own? Would not he, who departs obdurate from it, continue adamant, though one rose from the dead? For such a scene partly draws aside the curtain that divides time from futurity; and, in some measure, gives to sight that tremendous, of which we only had the feeble report before.

Is not this then a prime school of wisdom? Are not they obliged, that are invited to this? For what else should reclaim us? The pulpit? We are prejudiced against it. Besides, an agonizing profligate, though silent, out-preaches the most celebrated that the pulpit ever knew: But, if he speaks, his words might instruct the best instructors of mankind. Mixt in the warm converse of life, we think with men ; on a death-bed, with God.
I 5 converse

But there are two lessons of this school written, as it were, in capitals, which they that run may read. First, He that, in this his minority, this school of discipline, this field of conflict, instead of grasping the weapons of his warfare, is for ever gathering flowers, and catching at butterflies, with his unarmed hand ; ever making idle Pleasures his pursuit ; must pay for it his vast reversion ; and, on opening his final account (of which a death-bed breaks the seal), shall find himself a beggar ; a beggar past beggary ; and shall passionately wish, that his very being were added to the rest of his loss.

Secondly, He shall find, that truth, Divine Truth, however, through life, injured, wounded, suppressed, is insuppressible, victorious, immortal. That, though with mountains overwhelmed, it will, one day, burst out like the fires of Ætna ; visible, bright, and tormenting, as the most raging flame. As now, (Oh ! my friend !) I shall too plainly prove.

The sad evening before the death of that noble youth, whose last hours suggested these thoughts, I was with him. No one was there, but his physician, and an intimate whom he loved, and whom he had ruined. At my coming in, he said ;

“ You, and the physician, are come too late.—I have “ neither life, nor hope. You both aim at miracles.
“ You would raise the dead.”

Heaven,

Heaven, I said, was merciful.

“ Or I could not have been thus guilty. What has
 “ it not done to bless, and to save me? — I have been “ too strong for Omnipotence! I plucked down ruin.”

I said, The Blessed Redeemer—

“ Hold! hold! you wound me!—That is the rock
 “ on which I split—I denied his name.”

Refusing to hear any thing from me, or take any thing from the physician, he lay silent, as far as sudden darts of pain would permit, 'till the clock struck. Then with vehemence;

“ Oh, Time! Time! It is fit thou should'st thus “ strike thy murderer to the heart.—How art thou fled
 “ for ever!—A month!—Oh, for a single week! I ask “ not for years. Though an age were too little for the “ much I have to do.”

On my saying, we could not do too much: That heaven was a blessed place—

“ So much the worse. 'Tis lost! 'Tis lost!—Heaven
 “ is to me the severest part of hell!”

Soon after, I proposed prayer.

“ Pray you that can. I never prayed. I cannot “ pray.—Nor need I. Is not heaven on my side already?

“ It closes with my conscience. Its severest strokes but “ second my own.”

His friend being much touch'd, even to tears, at this (who could forbear? I could not), with a most affectionate look, he said :

“ Keep those tears for Thyself. I have undone thee.
 “ —Dost weep for me? That's cruel. What can pain
 “ me more?”

Here his friend, too much affected, would have left him.

“ No, stay. Thou still may'st hope;—Therefore hear “ me. How madly have I talked? How madly hast
 “ thou listened, and believed? But look on my present “ state, as a full answer to thee, and to myself. This “ body is all weakness and pain; but my soul, as if “ stung up by torment to greater strength and spirit, is “ full powerful to reason; full mighty to suffer. And “ that, which thus triumphs within the jaws of morta“ lity, is, doubtless, immortal.—And, as for a Deity, “ nothing less than an Almighty could inflict what I “ feel.”

I was about to congratulate this passive, involuntary, confessor, on his asserting the two prime articles of his creed, extorted by the rack of nature; when he thus,
 very passionately :

“ No, no! let me speak on. I have not long to “ speak—My much-injur'd friend! my soul, as my “ body,

“ body, lies in ruins ; in scattered fragments of broken
 “ thought : Remorse for the past throws my thought
 “ on the future. Worse dread of the future, strikes it “ back on the past. I turn, and turn, and find no ray.
 “ Didst thou feel half the mountain that is on me, thou “ wouldst struggle with the martyr for his stake ; and “ blest heaven for the flames ;—That is not an everlast-
 “ ing flame ; That is not an unquenchable fire.”

How were we struck ? Yet, soon after, still more.
 With what an eye of distraction, what a face of despair,
 he cried out :

“ My principles have poisoned my friend ; my extra“ vagance has beggared my boy ; my unkindness has “ murdered my wife !—And is there another hell ?—
 “ Oh ! Thou blasphemed, yet most indulgent, Lord “ God ! hell itself is a refuge, if it hides me from thy “ frown.”

Soon after, his understanding failed. His terrified imagination uttered horrors not to be repeated, or ever forgot. And ere the sun (which I hope has seen few like him) arose, the gay, young, noble, ingenious, accomplished, and most wretched, Altamont expired.

If this is a Man of Pleasure, what is a man of pain ?
 How quick, how total, is the transit of these Phaetonti- ades : In what a dismal gloom they set for ever ! How short, alas ! the day of their rejoicing ! For a moment they glitter, they dazzle. In a moment where are they ?
 Oblivion covers their memories.—Ah ! would it did !

Infamy

Infamy snatches them from oblivion. In the long-living annals of infamy their triumphs are recorded. Thy sufferings still bleed in the bosom (Poor Altamont!) of the heart-stricken friend: For Altamont had a friend. He might have had many. With what capacities was he endowed, with what advantages, for being greatly good? But with the talents of an angel a man may be a fool. If he judges amiss in the supreme point, judging right in all else but aggravates his folly; as it shews him wrong, though blessed with the best capacity of doing right.

Such, so fatal, when abused, are the greatest blessings of heaven. Heaven grant his agonies were an expiation of the past; not a presage, and sad specimen, of the future. That his surviving companions and admirers may never suffer the same, give me leave to speak to them, while this affecting object is (or might be) in their sight.

“Ye staunch pursuers of Pleasure, opening in full “cry on its burning scent! who run yourselves out of “breath, health, credit, estate, and often life, after that “you cannot catch! For a moment, slacken your speed,
 “and cool the fervor of your chace. It is a friend that “calls, and he is his own, that hears.

“If there is a scene on earth, in which you can find “greater advantage, than in that to which you have “been invited, do not come: If there is not, indulge
 “me in a few words, which may not be soon forgot:
 “At least, they will recur to your thoughts, they will “recur

“ recur to your feeling hearts, when your present jovial
“ chace is over ; when Pleasure is no more.

“ It will be grateful to your friend deceased, whom
“ you were always willing to oblige, if, with his ac“ complishments, you remember his faults ; for then
“ you will not forget your own ; but read, in his deep “ distress, a strong caution against them. Affords not
“ the rock on which he split, a solid basis for your safe“ ty ? Has he not well-marked where mischief lies ?
“ See you not the wreck of that gallant first-rate ? or,
“ rather, is he not a beacon, lighted up by kind Provi“ dence, to guide you safe through the dangerous voy“ age of human life ?

“ He once, as you now, imagined himself, in this “ life, immortal. Was he not mistaken ? He has taken
“ his final flight ; whither, who can tell ? If you con“ tinue yours, in the same fatal track, who is he that “ cannot tell where the folly must end ? Smitten, trans“ fixed, when most secure, from the most towering “ heights he dropp'd, at once, into depths of distress,
“ not to be fathomed by man. In gaiety of heart “ defy not the danger. Are there not more arrows in
“ the same quiver ? and are not you as fair and tempt“ ing a mark ? more tempting, if unadmonished, and “ mounting still over his forgotten tomb. And whom “ dare you tempt ? An Archer that never missed his “ mark.

“ But you, from your gay pavilion, embowered in “ roses, see no threatening prospects ; no dangers of “ death. — Oh, Sirs ! Death delights to lie hid in “ thickets

“ thickets of roses ! How often the gayest fall first in “ his snare ? Yet even this is too gentle, too mild, to “ answer the good-will of heaven ; it cannot keep the “ world in awe.

“ What uncommon fortitude is needful to bear pro-“ sperities unhurt ? It is now sunshine with you ; and “ you think all is well. It is the season of indulgence.
 “ —But seasons will change. You that are now all so“ cial comfort, gathered close in glad clusters, and “ (like embodied birds of passage bound for new “ climes) on your impatient wing for new delights !
 “ what will you do, when each of you, sever'd from
 “ the rest, an unexperienced, unexpected, recluse, lies “ forely pain'd ; dreading worse ; none to converse
 “ with, but the two greatest strangers, his own heart,
 “ and Him who made it ; and neither at peace with “ him ? Say, ye strangers to care, and abounders in “ mirth ! what will he do, when he finds himself still “ subsisting in a state, where none of those pleasures,
 “ for which alone he wished to subsist, can possibly any “ longer subsist with him ? When the dark matter at “ the centre will not be more foreign to him, than that “ which now beats high in his pulse, and flushes in his “ cheek ; and stings him on to schemes, that laugh at “ such lectures as these ? When he finds himself led, by “ the soft hand of Pleasure, to those dismal gates, which “ she herself will never, never, never, enter ?

“ Consider, my good friends ! you still retain the “ name of Christians ; and have heard of the Scrip“ tures. To speak their language, If Christians are “ racers,

“ racers, you have not yet started : If warriors, your “ armour is not yet on : If labourers in the vineyard,
“ you pluck down the vine, and get drunk with the “ grapes : If watchers, your nap is not yet over. There “ is no man, but, in some part of life, either stung by “ self-mov’d conscience, or alarm’d by some providen“ tial event, as out of a long idle dream, starts, at once,
“ into his senses. The longer the dream, the greater “ his surprize and pain ; and, if he nods to the last, the “ pain and horror (as too well has been prov’d) is in“ expressible.

“ Cannot that awful truth interrupt your slumber ?
“ He sleeps sound indeed, at whose ear a friend’s knell “ shall knock in vain. But, setting friendship aside ; “ granting, that with men of your cast, a friend dead is “ a friend annihilated ; ask, I beseech you, pure self- “ interest one question ; “ Have you no concern in this “ death ? Is it nothing to you ? ”—Oh ! much, very “ much ! It cannot stand neuter. It is big with good
“ or ill. It must hasten your amendment, or heighten
“ your offence. Henceforth, the same crimes are seven-“ fold guilt !

“ Have you never consulted the workings of nature ?
“ Have you never been surprized with a serious feeling
“ of heart ? When I stand, though a stranger, on the “ verge of another’s grave ; when I see the shaken “ mould take possession of human pride ; and hear the “ solemn sound of dust to dust ; what swelling of soul,
“ but instantly subsides ? What salutary thoughts, but,
“ at once, it inspires ? The grave of one unknown, and “ dying

“ dying a common death, would have this effect : What “ then, the grave of a friend, and of our own character ;
 “ and that not good ; and dying of the follies in which “ we live ; and with admonitions in his mouth, and “ horrors in his heart ? What heart impregnable to such “ an assault ? What thunder equal to such a groan ?
 “ It would eccho for ever in a penetrable ear. In a “ penetrable heart there would be wrought a mighty
 “ change.

“ For see you not the mighty force that is implied in “ this mercy ? Heaven trusts not to your faith ; but “ gives sensible proof of what you have to fear. And “ could it do more ? Would a miracle suffice ?—You “ have it in a mercy so little deserved. If danger can “ alarm you, you, now, are alarmed. If nothing can “ alarm you, nothing can save.

“ I should grieve to have said too much. Yet, have “ I said too much, if my words serve only to render “ more inexcusable that imprudence, which they labour
 “ to remove. Rather know your danger, and embrace
 “ the plank (though not of cedar) which I throw out
 “ for your escape. Our fondness for good, shuts our “ eyes on evil ; we scarce allow it existence before it
 “ is felt. But, remember, we live in a most mutable “ scene : and have the fear of to-morrow before your “ eyes. Not the keenest discernment can ken through
 “ the second of a minute. To keep within the reach
 “ of mercy, is the grand concern, and supreme blessing
 “ of human life.

“ My

“ My converted! or condemned!
“ farewell.”

Thus, dear Sir, I speak to these gentlemen. I wish they do not rather chuse to show their parts, than their penitence; and criticise my speech, instead of their own conduct. If so, they demonstrate how very great occasion there was of it; though it proves ineffectual.

Most Yours.

LET.

LETTER IV.
ON PLEASURE.

Dear Sir,

YOU seem to think, in your last letter, that our age is so far gone, as to be past recovery. I hope not. Aviola, a consul in the time of Gordian, revived on his funeral pile. I will not despair, but that British virtue, now, like the phenix, dying in its sweets, may start up from its ashes, and re-assume its former glory. I shall therefore proceed a little farther.

I grant, that The Man of Pleasure, as well as the good man, has his joy. But their joys are very different. They differ not only in their objects, but their kind. Which is as yet a secret to them; and, possibly, to you. Joy from temporals, is a terrestrial joy. And, like all things terrestrial, has a dreg in it. If you observe your own heart, you will find, that joy from temporals, has ever somewhat of a gay inquietude, a disturbed and tumultuous delight. Like some liquors, all in an unquiet ferment, and confusion, while they sparkle, and smile. Joy from eternals, joy, I mean, on spiritual accounts (viz.) Mens conscia recti; or, a delightful hope of immortality; or, an humble persuasion of Divine Favour, &c. This joy is celestial, and, like a fine calm summer's evening, is undisturbed, placid, and serene. The first is a passion, and that in the strictest sense; we suffer from it, as well as enjoy. Nay, some have suffered from it even to death. The latter seems rather to be, or to resemble, an inspiration, in which the divine cause takes away, or supersedes, our human infirmity. Therefore, by our church, most properly stiled The Peace of God. Nor let *Centaur*s imagine, that this peace is occasioned by the smallness of the joy. No, It passeth all understanding; and is, strictly speaking, a specimen, an actual part, of heaven.
own

For, indeed, the supreme happiness, and misery, of rational beings, through all variation of circumstances, and through every period of their existence, is of a piece, or of the same kind. Though, perhaps, in no two periods of it, of the same proportion, or degree. Therefore, heaven and hell, how distant soever some think them, are really, though not fully, on earth. Where ever, and whenever, their causes, that is, virtue and vice, exist, they will exist, in a measure correspondent to them. What then are the good and bad, but the wretched and happy? He, whose soul reposes on his firm trust in God, like the halcyon that builds on the waves, if storms arise, may be tossed, but not endangered.

gered. Or, grant the worst, those tumultuous billows that devour others, rock him to rest eternal.

When the good man lies down to rest, no fears from the dangers of the night break through his strong confidence in the Divine Protection. When he awakes, his first thought lays hold on heaven; which gives thro' the consecrated day, such a sweetness of aspect and deportment, such a force and firmness, to his felicity; that we may venture almost to say, He cometh forth as a bridegroom from his chamber, and rejoiceth, as a giant, to run his course.

The Man of Pleasure has his little clouds at the brightest, the course of his happiness is retarded by a straw; and any considerable, scarce considerable, accident puts it quite to death. Not only the necessaries, or conveniences, but the decorations, and superfluities of life, are vital to his sickly felicity. In any of them he may receive a deep or deadly wound. Whereas they are mere excrescences to the good man's happiness; and he has no more feeling in them than in his hair, or his nail: Nay his happiness is of so strong a constitution, that it can stand real calamities unhurt. Nor quits its serenity on the confines of the grave; which the Man of Pleasure but ill retains in the sunshine of life.

Of which strange inferiority one cause is very obvious. When all our hopes and fears are confined within this narrow scene, what an insupportable importance, what a tyranny over our passions, does this give it? what demi-gods does it make our superiors, who can bestow, what we most value? We tremble before them.

What

What mountains does it make of little things, because the greatest in our inventory? We turn pale, sometimes die, at their loss. But, the first moment we take God for our protector, and his precious promises for our chief portion, our superiors, even kings, shrink to men; and crowns imperial lose their lustre. Little things are little, and leave our hearts at rest. As a taper to the sun; such the sun to the glories that shall be revealed. Looking to the close of the drama, we resume our native dignity; nor are longer over-awed on the stage, by our fellows; or, perhaps, our inferiors behind the scene. Nay, sometimes, on it too. When, like poor Altamont, they are forced to change their plume for the warm cap of sickness; and are unbuttoning their buskins on the bed of anguish, terror, and death.

And must this, one day, be the case? after having run the gauntlet of disappointing, painful, pleasures, and, for some years being afflicted with delights; to drop unregarded, unlamented, infamous, into punishment far greater, for the punishment they have already undergone—Of human happiness what a dismal account is this? Yet this is the true. Let us, therefore, enquire if it is not worse than they deserve.

Our Men of Pleasure affect much being Men of Honour too; that is, they are as proud, as they are dissolute: or, in other words, they will not stoop to mean and little vices: they deal only in great. They scorn to pick a pocket; but triumph in cutting a throat. If their immaculate honour is violated by word, look, or thought, then they trample all the laws of religion, justice, and humanity, without remorse. My enquiry will join The Man

Man of Honour and The Man of Pleasure together. But how shall I enquire? How shall I know the heart of these men? And that only can inform me right. Let us then consider what these mens prayer would be, if they prayed at all. For what is a prayer, but addressing to some superior power, the real desires of our hearts?

Thus then I will shew you an exact picture of their hearts. There was so masterly a copy of a capital picture of Julio Romano, taken by one of his scholars, that he swore it was his own original drawing. I hope so to copy their hearts, that they shall imagine, that it is not I, but they themselves, that speak. The desires of their hearts, if cloathed in words, would run to the following purpose.—But, first, this caution: Let not that offend pious ears, which passes in an impious heart; and which, for the sake of piety (though, perhaps, not without some shock to it), is drawn out into light.

The PROFLIGATE'S PRAYER.

“ O Thou! whose omnipotence is but a second a'tri-
 “ bute, an able servant to thy delight. Thou
 “ great fountain of Pleasure! as such I adore thee.
 “ Pleasure alone makes me devout; and let devotion
 “ advance my Pleasure. For I am not more devout,
 “ than modest; I ask not, yet, for heaven. Give me
 “ my heaven on earth. Let Mabomet's paradise descend,
 “ and bleis me on this side the grave. Let my honour
 “ too shine before men; and let none see my heart,—
 “ but Thee. Noctem peccatis, & fraudibus objice nubem.
 “ Give my lusts a long and prosperous reign over me;
 VOL. IV. K “ and

“ and let not religion approach to hurt me. Lead me “ into temptation, and give me strength to comply with “ it. And deliver me from all evil, that may mar my “ delights. Let me be (as I have been) a brute while
 “ I live, and an angel (if angels there are) when I “ die.”

Is the good man shocked at this? Yes; and the profligate too. Few know the foulness of their own hearts. A famous modern, when, in an age he had lost his understanding, passing by a looking-glass, cried out in compassion, “ Poor old man!” not knowing it to be himself. Thus the profligate, at sight of this mirror, equally ignorant, no doubt will cry out in surprize, “ Horrid wretch!” I answer, therefore, to the question above, viz. Is it not worse than they deserve? That Men of Pleasure, themselves being judges, deserve the worst.

In contrast to this (and sure it wants an antidote), accept that piece of devotion you desired on your friend's account; and may it prove of some little service to him.

Devout THOUGHTS of the Retired PENITENT.

“ YES, blessed, ever blessed be the Divine Indul“ gence for this. How wanted, how welcome,
 “ this asylum? this recess? Here earth holds its peace;
 “ and heaven's voice can be heard. Heaven's voice, if “ we listen, ever speaking in the human heart. Here “ let me commune with my so long-anxious heart;
 “ which

“ which has frequently called on me for an audience,
 “ and found me pre-engaged. Or else, the rude world “ broke in on our conference; and fatally pushed it “ off ’till a farther day. Though (shocking to confi“ der!) though a depending eternity often chid my “ delay.

“ While the noise of the world beats its drum in our “ ears; and its bustle, and hurry, throws its dust in “ our eyes; who can hear the soft whispers of consci“ ence, or read the strong demands of reason, though “ written in capitals, on the compos’d and disenchant“ ed heart? I now read, hear, and tremble. I tremble at “ that, in which I once triumphed. I blush at that, of “ which I, once, was vain. Oh, Pleasure! Pleasure!
 “ what art thou? The death of reason. And with “ reason dies the whole heaven, as well as character,
 “ of man.

“ The cloud now a little broken, which wrapped me
 “ up in night, look round, my soul enlarged! and say, “ where, or what am I? An immensity around me! an “ eternity before me! a shadow, my Pleasure! a moment,
 “ my time! a vapour, my life! And shall a moment, shade, “ vapour, engage all my love? engross all my thought?
 “ Shall it bid an angel from heaven wait my better lei“ sure? Bid the great Father of angels defer his call ’till
 “ to-morrow?—What, O my soul! if He should call no “ more!—Good God! If He should call no more? If “ He should leave thee to thyself?—Where, then, is “ hope? Where, then, is man?

“ Man, desperate man, the first moment he sets up
 “ for himself, and impatient of controul, takes the “rein into his own mad hands ; the first moment he is

 “at liberty, he is the greatest of slaves. How shackled!
 “how harrafs’d ! how starved ! In the midst of his riots,
 “what a famine of joy ? None can be wise for time,
 “that are fools for eternity. Dreadful independence !
 “the first moment man quits hold of his Creator, he “drops ! In distraction and ruin, how unfathomed his “fall !

“Out of that deep, I call unto Thee, O Lord ! Lord, “hear my voice. Dissolve the charm that ties me down
 “to delights trifling, terrestrial, infernal ; and give me “wings to rise into day, and reach the things that be“long to my peace. Where is the creature, which “Thou hast made ? Where is the heart, which Thou “hast given ? This sink of pollution ! this nest of all “vices ! it could not come from Thee. No, I have “snatched it out of thy blessed hand, and let it fall
 “in the mire. What is it to me, that thy mercy is over
 “all thy works, since I am not what Thou hast “made ?

“I have slept on a precipice, and dreamt I was in “heaven. Slept on its very brink ; though vengeance “frowned over me, and flames roared beneath. What “horrors awake me ! What a gulph lies before me !
 “What mercy has saved me ! Where had I been, had “I died yesterday ? Oh, let this load, this mountain“ous load, on my heart, sink me lower, and lower “still, in adoration that I live ! Had I felt these pangs “before,—before I had been reclaimed.—Thou, that “bearest up the pillars of the earth, support my spirits !
 “—Where had I been, if yesterday had been my last ?

“Where

“ Where—oh where?—And eternal too!—Eternal!—
 “ O Lord, God Almighty! could thy thunder shake
 “ me more?

“ Thou glorious God, who makest the thunder! let “ me climb above creation; and soar into thoughts of “ Thee.—How I wander up and down, bewildered and “ benighted, through the boundless of such a contempla“ tion? Where, what, who, how, art Thou? Source “ of all Being! Centre of all Good! Great Antient of “ days! before the birth of time! beyond the compre“ hension of angels! Filler of Immensity! who lookest “ down on the highest; and the lowest dost support!—
 “ support even me.

“ Support me while I labour at some idea of my God
 “ —but I labour in vain. Thou most obvious, and “ most occult! most present, and most absent of beings!
 “ how much of Thee is enjoyed? How little of Thee
 “ is known? I am in Thee, yet cannot find Thee. I “ can neither go from Thee, nor to Thee. Clouds,
 “ and thick darkness are thy pavilion! Wonders passing “ wonders, through the moment of time, and the im“ mense of eternity, guard, and aggrandize, thy tre“ mendous throne!

“ Before such a Judge, O my soul! art thou to plead
 “ thy cause; to pour out thy deep sorrows, and deeper “ sins; to tremble out thy complaint? Oh! let me an“ nihilate myself before Him. Nor wretch, nor man,
 “ nor angel, is any thing in His sight, 'till he is nothing
 “ in his own. Who, Lord! ever thought on Thee, and “ was not confounded? And give me leave to add,
 “ Who, Lord! ever prayed to Thee (as he ought), and “ was not blessed ? For which infinite mercy, from the “ first thrones in heaven, to the meanest worm on earth,

 “ be payed all homage, praise, and adoration ; constant,
 “ profound, ardent, and eternal !

PART II.

“ Are they that pray, blessed ?—But what is that to “ me ? Dare I to pray ? To whom is prayer addressed ?
 “ Oh ! how dreadful in majesty ! more dreadful in “ vengeance ! dreadful to the blessed above ! more “ dreadful to man ! more still to the sinner ! what then
 “ to the deepest in sin ? May not I then say (as is said, “ Lord God Almighty, of thy blessed Self), Hell is open
 “ before me ; destruction hath no covering ? Where then “ shall I fly ? I cannot fly from thy presence. I dare
 “ not stand in it. Should I sink to the centre, I am “ still in thy sight. Even darkness detects me ! even “ flight brings me nigh ! Oh ! Thou that dost light the “ sun, as a taper ; or tread it out, as a spark ! Why still “ in being, a wretch ever destined to pain ? Oh ! let “ me be nothing ; or, let me be Thine.

“ And what a nothing, indeed, am I ? What a nothing, “ compared, is man ?—Thou that inhabitest eternity !
 “ my foundation is in the dust. Lord most Holy ! I “ was conceived in sin. God most Mighty ! what “ weaker than man ? Great ! Holy ! Mighty ! Three “ Persons, and One God ! Creator ! Redeemer ! Sancti-“ fier ! Three Benefactors, and One Being ! with what “ indignation dost Thou behold a wretch of such com“ plicated guilt ? a sinner to Thee, to the Public, and “ Himself ?

“ And

“ And dare I then approach ? The presumption how “ great ?—But greater to forbear. To sin is bad : To “ despair is fatal. Oh ! most merciful Jesus ! what “ refuge, but in Thee ! Yet dare I not meet thy face :
 “ I come trembling behind Thee. If I touch but the “ hem of thy garment, I shall be whole. Even dogs
 “ may eat of the crumbs that fall from their master’s “ table.—For that bountiful grant, what adoration is “ due ? With prostration profound I cannot but adore.
 “—What adoration is equal ? I cannot adore aright. Or “ could I ; I am unworthy to lift an eye to thy throne.
 “ My incense has no odour ; my anthem, no praise.

“ But Thou, Lord, wide as the arch of heaven, dost “ extend thy compassionate arms to receive a return“ ing world. As the sands of the sea are thy mercies,
 “ and (with horror let me speak it) my transgressions. I
 “ have looked on an unfeeling heart, as a quiet consci“ ence : On a multitude of sinners, as an apology for “ sin : And on the fashion of the world, as a repeal of “ thy laws. I have been thankless, for what Thou “ hast most bountifully given : Senseless, of what Thou “ hast more bountifully promised : Provoking, under
 “ the greatest obligations : Peevish, and impatient, un“ der the smallest evils : Riotous under thy judgments :
 “ And by thy blessings, most unblest : I turned them
 “ into poison ; and by my prosperity was undone.

“ I have studied iniquity as a science : Been vain of “ distinction in it ; and ashamed of my duty : I have “ blushed at the glance of a man, and a man most mis“ taken ; and set my face as a flint against reason, and “ against Thee : I have even borrowed infidel scraps for “ the credit of the day ; and run in debt for destruc" tion: Time given for repentance, I turned over to

 " folly; and made the Divine Mercy a promoter of sin.
 " Nay, I have sinned even beyond my power. What " schemes have I laid, which thy goodness disap" pointed? How many crimes have I committed, which " never came to pass?

" With such overflowings of ungodliness I quenched
 " Thy blessed Spirit, I have trod, with thy Divine
 " Laws, thy precious blood, under foot. All this,
 " Lord! Thou knowest; and yet I still live: All this
 " Thou hast seen; and yet hast Thou held thy peace.
 " Thou hast shortened thine arm; and curbed venge" ance in air; though called for (if daring can call for " thy vengeance) to fall on my head.

" How long, Lord! hast Thou forborne me? And " forborne when thine arrows went abroad: Though I " stood in the first rank of offenders; nor ever lifted
 " up the shield of devotion; quite naked in sin. My " less vicious companions fell frequent around me; and " dismal was their fall. I washed off its memory in " the next welcome debauch; and the just cause of re-
 " morse but redoubled my guilt. By admonitions un-
 " admonished, by thy mercies unsoftened, by my own
 " sentiments unawed, by my own conviction uncon-
 " vinced, I censured their conduct, and trod on in their " steps. I deplored their sad exit, and posted on to " my own: Because spared, when most obnoxious, I " thought myself immortal. In every path of Plea" sure, in every flight of ambition, what gay, sanguine,
 " multitudes of those born after me, and in every pro" mise of life to be placed before me, have I seen rise,
 " bloom,

“ bloom, triumph, languish, decay, and die? What a “ mystery of mercy is this? And what a miracle of “ madness am I? Amid this mighty field of slaughter “ am I still alive?—While I doubt if I still live, I “ live on in my crimes. Nay my very repentance in“ creases the number. Repentance so languid; so far “ short of my guilt!

PART III.

“ Lord! from that stupendous height, towards which
 “ the cherubims lift up an eye in vain, bow down thine “ ear, and hear.—O Lord! hear me not. For what “ have I to plead? what excuse to cover, what palliation
 “ to soften, my guilt? Can my confession of sin weigh “ aught in my favour? I fear, not a grain: for where“ fore have I confessed my transgressions? because I “ could not conceal them. Thou knowest even those,
 “ that are unknown to myself. But then, Lord! I have “ been tempted.—Yes; and I have courted temptation.
 “ Frail nature has seduced me.—And have I not indulged
 “ my seducer? Public example bore hard on me.—
 “ And I rejoiced in that excuse. I have sinned with my “ fathers.—True, but I have sinned beyond them. What “ age for indulgence has so loosen'd the rein? And who,
 “ in such an age, has rushed farther in ill, than the “ wretch at thy feet?

“ But is there nothing in counterbalance? no dawn“ ings of good? no pretensions, at least, to virtue, to “ lighten the loaded scale? Yes; I have been an advo“ cate for virtue—That I might remove all obstructions
 “ in vice. I have gone to thy temple—But left my “ heart behind. Nay, I have prayed—But wished not “ what I asked. I have aimed at humility—Out of “ pride. I have given—But without charity. I have “ been kind, the very kindest of men—To gain power

 “ of being cruel, as the most malignant of foes. My “ devotion to Thee has been absolutely declined; yet “ never have I repented, but of omissions in guilt: nor “ ever had a darling joy, but what is the parent of my “ present grief.

“ On searching my own heart, that abyfs of cor“ ruption, I find there is hardly a virtue which my “ hypocrisy has not worn, as a mask; hardly a vice “ which my presumption has not acted under it. By “ these abandon’d means bringing into discredit virtue
 “ of others the most sincere; and making more heinous
 “ my own deepest guilt: to the public a scarce less per“ nicious pest, than a fatal assassin to myself. Thus, “ Lord! all my pleas but inflame my indictment; and “ seeking excuses, but discovers new crimes.

“ But, as I discover new crimes in myself by my own
 “ awakened reflection; by the gift of thy Grace, I dis“ cover new goodness, new glories, new wonders, in “ Thee. I have lived in darkness, in the shadows of “ eternal death. I wrapped myself up in the world, I “ saw nothing; but what had been better unseen, what “ made me blind to Thee. But now thy Divine attri“ butes break in upon me, like the morning; and awake “ me to thy presence. I see Thee in every thing. And “ seeing, I adore. And adoring tremble.

“ Thine attributes, at once, all lighten upon me; and “ strike me, like him of Tarsus, thy less persecuting foe;
 “ they

“ they strike me to the dust. Thy most awful Omni“ presence ; thy most incomprehensible Glory ; thy most “ unbounded wisdom ; exquisite Justice ; and ineffable “ Goodness ! Goodness, how ineffable ? And to me, “ Lord ! to me unsupportable. That chief cause of my “ confusion ! severe upbraider of my conduct ! and ter“ rible aggravation of my guilt ! If thy goodness thus “ pains me ; what then will thy vengeance ? When thy “ vengeance awakes (cover me, O ye mountains !)
 “ When thy vengeance awakes—Oh ! mercy ! mercy !
 “ mercy !—Thou mighty to save ! oh ! have mercy up-
 “ on me.

“ And mercy thou wilt have, thou Father of all mer“ cies ! of mercy redundant, inexhaustible, source ! Thou “ wilt not condemn him, who condemns himself. Who “ trembles at his own tribunal. Who is scarce struck “ with more horror at vengeance, than at guilt. At “ such guilt ! and to such a Master ! whose bounties en“ abled me so signally to sin ; and who, my sin so pro“ voking, so long over-looked.

“ But I repent. Lord ! I repent—Yet how dry are “ these eyes ? how hard is this heart ? Strike thou the “ rock, and the waters flow. Let not him, who groans
 “ under his transgressions, groan under thy displeasure.
 “ Thou Giver, Guider, Lover, yea, Buyer, of Souls !
 “ and, at what a price ? Who dost hear the very thoughts
 “ of the wounded at heart ? Hear, pity, spare ! Nor “ let the Lord be angry, if I presume to add—Oh !
 “ spare thy paternal tenderness, oh save it from its “ aversion ; its strange work. Vengeance is an alien to “ thy most amiable nature. Ruin is a subversion of “ thy most glorious scheme.

“ Though common sense has deserted me ; and a “ legion possessed me ; though I have contradicted my “ own reason ; and fought my own heart, which stood
 “ in defence of thy laws ; though I have struggled hard
 “ for madness ; and taken ruin by force ; yet let not “ compassion be quite a stranger in heaven. Let not “ thine anger burn for ever. Wherefore is the Lord “ angry, because I am a sinner ? What else canst thou “ forgive. Because my sin is great ? If pardoned, the “ greater thy glory. Thy servant is wicked : but still “ a servant. Thy son a prodigal : but still a son.
 “ Though a son’s duty has been wanting in me ; lose
 “ not Thou, boundless love ! all the bowels of a father.
 “ Am not I the work of thy hand ? Do not despise it.
 “ An image of thy majesty ? Do not blot it out. The “ price of thy blood ? Oh ! cast it not away. Shall “ things incompatible combine to my destruction ? Can
 “ I be related to ruin, and to Thee ? Let it be thy blessed “ pleasure to reclaim, not to destroy me : if destroyed,
 “ thy foe will triumph : if reclaimed, there is joy in hea“ ven ; and ten times ten thousand will sing praise round “ thy throne.

P A R T IV.

“ But if I am pardoned, who then can be punished ?
 “ What stains can condemn, if an Æthiop escapes ? The “ regions of darkness are part of thy creation ; and hor“ rors infernal were not made in vain. My crimes, in “ themselves, how great ? as committed in defiance of “ Infinite Majesty, they are greater still. What then “ shall I say ? To what shadow of excuse shall I fly ?
 “ — Pardon, Lord ! the weakness of my reason, if I “ judge,

“ judge, or, rather, hope, amiss: Thine Infinite Majesty,
“ seems to plead for me. Fain would I find an advo“ cate in that; in that very cause, which most heightens
“ my guilt.

“ For what, my Lord! am I? a poor complex of “ littleness and vanity; the very centre of infirmities;
“ a combination of all causes, that can call for thy “ compassion. Frail flesh, and fleeting spirit! a moth!
“ a worm! a flower of the field! To-day, and not to“ morrow! at morning, and not at night! not master
“ of a moment; not a match for a breeze! A dream!
“ a vapour! a shadow! a thing of nought! posting
“ through daily doubt and danger, toil and trouble,
“ into trodden dust and ashes!

“ Such am I! such was I made!—and made by “ Thee: And now, Lord! wilt Thou make bare an arm “ Almighty against me? wilt Thou lift up a bolt that can “ crush creation, against its meanest worm? (oh! par“ don what distress compels me to plead) thine Infinite
“ Majesty declares against it: that rescues the sinner, “ though it enhances the sin. Does not my meanness “ disarm thy might? Is not the greatness of the offended,
“ the offender’s defence? I am, indeed, unworthy, most “ unworthy, thy favour: but am I not unworthy thy “ resentment too? Thou that fittest on the highest hea“ vens, and seest worlds infinite dance beneath thee, as “ atoms in the sun!—Wilt Thou, oh! wilt Thou, not “ remember, that I am but dust?

“ Yes, Lord! Thou wilt remember it: Thou wilt “ remember thy glorious Self; what antient days re-“ — found;

“ found ; what wonders Love Divine has wrought of “ old. For to whom do I cry ? Art Thou not He, to “ whom none ever cried in vain ? Who created not, but
 “ to bless : commands not, but to preserve : nor punishes,
 “ but to reclaim. Who has not more relieved, than “ amazed, with his extremities of love ! for art Thou
 “ not the same Lord, who, though most offended, as if “ Thou wert the offender, beseeches us to be reconciled ?
 “ Who mourns over the impenitent ? and over the im“ penitent for sins against Himself ? And when his for-“ row can’t prevail, even weeps in their stead ? those “ tears obdurate Jerusalem would not shed, did’st Thou
 “ not take to thy own blessed lids, which overflowed at
 “ the bare prospect of its ruin ? Who, without pious “ terror, without the greatest astonishment, can think on “ these things ? or, who, without comfort, still greater “ than that ? — I saw death ! I saw death !

“ Nor end our healing hopes of comfort here ; not “ only to beseech, commiserate, and weep, descended
 “ the Lord of Glory, and Eternal Life, but to die.
 “ And what a death ? And after what a life ? A life of “ compassions, without number, and beyond measure :
 “ What a shining progress, what a stupendous ascent in “ love ? He meets the returning prodigal : looks com“ passion on denying Peter : rejects not disbelieving Tho- “ mas : admits sinful Magdalen : pardons the taken adul“ terers : and associates to himself, in Paradise (where “ angels cast their crowns at his feet), a thief from the “ cross. What a marvellous and most adorable climax
 “ is this ? And is it possible for love to rise higher still ?
 “ Oh ! let it rise higher, and reach even me.

“ What

“ What am I, Thou most exuberant Fountain of Love !
 “ that I should set a bound to such compassion as this ?
 “ Can ocean be repelled by a single grain on the shore ?
 “ What a triumph of mercy to pluck the ruined from “ ruin ? What an omnipotent action to save the most lost ?
 “ Though pleasure has fooled me ; though reason, con“ science, heaven, nay and earth too, in one scale, has “ been outweighed by a feather in the other ; though,
 “ with Esau, I sold my birthright for nothing ; yet,
 “ Lord ! let these distractions of thought, these convul“ sions of heart, these pangs of the wretch, if not the “ prayer of the penitent, reach the foot of thy throne :
 “ for His dear sake who spared not his most precious “ blood ; oh ! spare, pardon, bless ; yes, bless me, even “ me, O my Father ! Yes, Thou all-surrounding, all-“ pervading, all-sustaining, and all-blessing Majesty of “ heaven ! bless me, even me, O my God !

“ Thou ! who if thou movest thy lip it thunders : if “ thou liftest thine eye, the sun is dark : who hast thy “ way in the whirlwind ; and walkest on the wings
 “ of the wind : who fittest above the heavens, and hidest “ thy footsteps in the great deep ! But (above all), whose “ superabundant effluence, whose ocean of love, over“ flows the whole creation ! add to these wonders one “ wonder more—the forgiveness of guilt like mine :
 “ hear the suppliant voice, see the bleeding bosom, these “ throws, these throbs of the most vile and abandoned—
 “ but most repentant, and heart-broken, of men.

“ Then, Lord ! come the worst, I will not complain.
 “ My joy shall burst its way through the frowns of the “ world ; and the shadows of death. Then—Blessings
 “ and

“ and honour, and glory, and power, be to Him who sitteth on the throne, and to the lamb, who nails sin to his cross!—Thus will I sing in spite of my groans! Thus will I sing with my last expiring breath! Thus will I sing for ever, and ever.

“ Amen. O my soul! Amen, Amen.”

This, Sir, is that importunate, ardent, persevering, spirit of address, which was suitable to the state of the person from whom I borrowed it. It may possibly (partly at least) suit some others. And I thought it inhuman, to gaze, so long as I have done, on the disease, without aiming at some expedient to mitigate its malignity. There is a sovereign balm in prayer.

I know, Sir, there are certain quietists in devotion, faints of great repose in prayer, who may censure this, as too warm. But, when should we be warm, if not when our eternity is at stake? Shall we be warm in our vices? and cool in our repentance? Were our passions given for nothing? or given only as the servants of sin? Is it not heaven, but its reverse, that is to be taken by violence? I, therefore, drop this dispute, not only as unchristian, but undeistical too: for, if there is a God, all our affections are too feeble, all the wings of our soul are too few, to be put forth in pursuit of his favour; and being languid in devotion, is, being solemnly un-devout. If there is a God, he gave us our passions, as well as our reason; they therefore, as well as reason, should assist in his service. And, indeed, reason without them, though it may loudly tell, will but lamely perform, our duty. How great a part of the scripture must these men's kind of criticism explode? Poor David must break break his harp, lest it give offence. Even angels have their passions, nor are any beings exempt from the need of them on this side the throne of God. Whatever exemption some may fancy in their own favour, let us, my friend, who have seen the necessity of devotion for others, not neglect our own. Nor, in the pride of instructing, lose the prudence of safety.

You and I, my friend ! lie under two disadvantages in this point : the world's example, and our own years. It is an undevout age : and will you not be surprized to hear me say, that ours is an undevout period of life ?— Yet it is most certain, that there is a tenderness of heart, and a susceptibility of awe, with regard to God, as well as man, in youth, which in most, is wanting afterwards. This want is an enemy we must fight, and fervent prayer, that sword of the spirit, is the best weapon against him. Prayer, because the most easy of duties, seems, with many, the hardest to be performed. It costs them so little pains, they think they may as well let it alone. Whereas, it is the supreme, the great, mother-duty ; all other duties, and virtues, are its progeny ; are brought forth, nursed, nourished, and sustained by it. Devotion is the sole asylum of human frailty, and sole support of heavenly perfection : it is the golden chain of union between heaven and earth ; keeps open the blessed communication ;

—Geminique facit commercia regni. CLAUD.

He that has never prayed, can never conceive, and he that has prayed as he ought, can never forget, how much is to be gained by prayer.

Dear Sir,

Yours.

L E T-

over his sheep, lest it give offence. Even angels have their passions, nor are any beings exempt from the influence of them on this side the throne of God. Whosoever exemption from any tendency in their own favour, let us, my friend, who have seen the necessity of devotion for others, not neglect our own. Nor, in the pride of infidelity, lose the guidance of safety.

You and I, my friend! lie under two disadvantages in this point: the world's example, and our own years. It is an undevout age: and will you not be surprised to hear me say, that ours is an undevout period of life? Yet it is most certain, that there is a tendency of heart, and a susceptibility of awe, with regard to God, as well as man, in youth, which in most, is wanting afterwards. This want is an enemy we must fight, and fervent prayer, that sword of the Spirit, is the best weapon against him. Prayer, because the most easy of duties, seems, with many, the hardest to be performed. It costs them to let the pains, they think they may as well let it alone. Whereas, it is the sublime, the great, another day; all other duties, and virtues, are its progeny; are brought forth, nursed, nourished, and sustained by it. Devotion is the sole ally of human frailty, and sole support of heavenly perfection: it is the golden chain of union between heaven and earth: keeps open the blessed communion;

—Christianus facit commercia cunctis.
CLAUDE
He that has never prayed, can never converse, and he that has prayed as he ought, can never forget, how much is to be gained by prayer.

Yours
L. H. T.

L E T T E R V.

LIFE'S REVIEW.

The GENERAL CAUSE of SECURITY
in SIN.

THOUGHTS for AGE.

THE LIFE OF
THE LATE GENERAL
W. L. G.

LIFE'S REVIEW
OF
GENERAL CAUSE OF SECURITY
IN SIN.

THOUGHTS FOR AGE.
2

LETTER V.

LIFE'S REVIEW.

Dear Sir,

IN this and the following letters I shall touch on five points : Life's Review : The General Cause of Security in Sin : Thoughts for Age : The Dignity of Man : The Centaur's Restoration to Humanity. The three first are naturally suggested to me, by the world's wickedness, and our own ; and our advanced time of life. The fourth, viz. The Dignity of Man, is naturally suggested by the notoriety of its reverse in those, for whose sake these letters are principally written. For who can look on Lucifer in his abyss, without thinking of that height from which he fell ? By which alone we can take any just measure of his calamity. And the fifth point, viz. The Centaur's Restoration to Humanity, is forceably imposed on me by the transporting thought, that such an event is possible. Yet, should it take place, posterity will scarce believe it : Annalium nostrorum laborabit fides. L. FLO.

I begin

I begin with The Review of Life; and that, tho' chiefly for our own sakes, yet also for the sake of all our grey-headed boys, as Sudbury, Torrismond, Ironside, &c. for though beasts of so gross a class as they choose to rank with, scarce deserve to be brought to the manage, yet pupils not yet expelled the school of life, ought still, if possible, to be taught the lesson they have so long neglected; and I offer myself gladly for their tutor; tho' I fear they would prefer a tetanothrurum * to an apothecosis: Their erudition will not leave them at a loss to know what I mean.

There is nothing of which men are more liberal than their good advice, be their stock of it ever so small; because it seems to carry in it an intimation of our own influence, importance, or worth. We (for you approved it; we, I say) have bestowed abundance of it on our Centaurs, which, I fear, will bring us in but little thanks. Let us, therefore, return from abroad, come to ourselves; and see if our export of wisdom may not be wanted at home. We have censured the aged; are we not such ourselves? Is there no folly to be found, but at assemblies and masquerades? Or is folly not folly, because it hits our own taste? Let us lay the line to our own conduct: Let us drop foreign ware, and put ourselves into the scale.

Yes, my friend! let us make a short visit to our former selves. They are, indeed, great strangers; nor much to be liked: Yet is it a visit all should make who wish well to the future of life. A Review of Life is an employment agreeable but to few; because none can look back without self-condemnation; and none will look forward but with self-flattery. But though the task may be bitter, it is wholesome too. Ask you, "What advantage from it?"—It is the only way of taking my Centaur's * advice, and knowing ourselves. A man can see himself in retrospection only. When warm in action, he is ever looking on something else; on his point in view: Or, if he could see himself, he could not judge aright, either of himself, or others. While warm in action, prejudices, and passions, excited by the then present objects, and incidents, corrupt his judgment. But in a cool review, he becomes rather a by-stander, than the party; and is patient of truth. His then former rivals are no longer rivals; therefore he judges better of men. His former points of view are no longer points of view; therefore he judges better of things. He can judge, nay he cannot but judge, as impartially of himself, as of the rest of mankind.

* A medicine to take out wrinkles.

Wisdom is the growth of experience: But experience is not the growth of action, but of reflection on it. In an active life is sown the seed of wisdom; but he, who reflects not, never reaps; has no harvest from it; but carries the burden of age, without the wages of experience; nor knows himself old, but from his infirmities, the parish-register, and the contempt of mankind. And what has age, if it has not esteem?—It has nothing.

Starting, my friend! from the same goal, thro' different paths, which severed our fortune, not our affection, we have run our race; and now approach its end. Jaded with our long journey, the spur of ambition

* In the frontispiece.

blunted,

blunted, and our spirits off their speed, we are glad of rest. In which, reflection on the past is not only useful, but extremely natural. Look on the stormy sea, whose billows reach the clouds; then on the peaceful lake, where the feather, or fallen leaf, lies unmoved; and you see the difference between the cool evening, and warm meridian of man. Reflection is as natural to one, as action to the other. Unactive youth, and unreflecting age, are equal blanks in the book of life. Man varies no less than those varying insects at which he wonders. In his morning he crawls; long ere noon, flutters and flies; at evening, chilled into languor, he creeps into corners, lies hid, and sleeps; or, if awake, having but little ground before him, nor that the best: How naturally he looks back on the past? How naturally his winter's evening calls for its tale? And to self-love, what tale so natural as our own? How idle soever our tale has been, if we can draw some moral from it, that will abate its insignificance, and give it some little weight by making us wiser for the future.

And want we not to be wiser? On how many fruitless friendships, ill-judged enmities, rash presumptions, cowardly despairs, unmanly flatteries, bold indecencies, idle schemes, airy hopes, groundless fears, opportunities lost, admonitions slighted, escapes unacknowledged, evils improved, blessings neglected, and trifles admired; on what a swarm of infirmities I look back with shame? How ambitious have we been in our attachments, not aware that all, most worth our ambition, we can give ourselves? How fearful of expences, not aware, that, till it escapes the gripe, and takes its flight into some prudent use, money is not wealth; that it truly becomes ours

ours only by our parting with it? How fond have we been of applause, not aware that human, separate from superior, applause, is the greatest vanity, as well as the most common pursuit, in life? How plainly I now see, that few things are more pernicious than too keen an appetite for applause, except a bold defiance of just reproach? That makes coxcombs; this, felons; this calls for detestation; that, for contempt.

How plainly do I now see, that our ignorance has been great? How often have we been so idle as to complain of our wants; that is, of our capacity of being happy: For, without wants, there would be no desires, and, without desires, no gratification of them; and, without gratification of desire, no happiness; for human happiness, nay the happiness of all created beings, consists in nothing else.

What on retrospect appears to me to be the capital weakness of man, is, that strange ascendant which his wishes have over his understanding: It is this makes a Gentaur. How often have we looked on our wishes as infallible arguments for the certainty of what we desired; when others saw it was an impossible point? And of this capital weakness, a capital instance is, that dying men can scarce believe that they shall die. Are we not now as those yellow autumn leaves, which the first blast sweeps away? Yet we seem to think the green bud hardly more tenacious of the stem.

On farther review, this is stranger still: Our friends are our strongest ties to life: When these are cut, what but folly can renew the charm? What re-engage our disenchanted hearts? And what, in my retrospect, is an object more obvious, or striking, than yonder ensigns of death? How the tyrant triumphs? What numerous monuments rise over the cold bosoms that once warmly received us? That shared our councils, our ambitions, our pleasures, and our hearts? Their epitaphs collected would make a volume: A volume how instructive, if read aright? A friend's monument is a friend's legacy; and a richer to the considerate, than any parchment can convey. What, for the most part, is human wisdom, but the melancholy growth of a bleeding heart? The thought of death is the directing helm of life, and he bespeaks a wreck, who lays it aside.

O my friend! how rapid the human march? Men are in haste; how they hurry over the stage? Where are those luminaries in every various walk of fame, in every kind of excellence, and renown, who most fired our ambition, and provoked our envy? Are they not passed away as April shadows over the field; or, by the fire-side, a winter's tale? Are not those far-seen, shining lights gone out apace after one another, as little sparks in the fired leaf, or paper, leaving us nothing but ashes behind? And in their ashes is there nothing to be found but sorrow? May we not light on a little prudence in them?

Sorrow, indeed, predominates. Oh, recent wound! Sorrow how just? Whom lost we the very last moon? —Lost we? That is vainly said: Whom lost the public? Whom the whole nation? Few have left it more worthy all love, and esteem, than our friend deceased*.

* Sir J. S.

He

He was made by nature to be beloved ; and intitled by virtue to be admired.

—*Quem semper amatum,
Semper honoratum, sic Dii voluistis, habebo.* VIRG.

Well had it been, if we, like him, had sought esteem ; but we would not pay the price. Love we thought would come cheaper ; and seeking that, were in danger of losing both. The wise world will part with nothing, but by force. Love cannot be compelled, esteem may. And, when it is, we lay in it, at the same time, the surest foundation for lasting love.

My retrospect shews me a transitory love of which we have been too fond. A love often bestowed by great ones, on those whom they cannot esteem. This love, supposing it sterling, I (stultus ego !) returned in kind : But I do not repent it. I may not repent of my virtue : For, my friend ! there are two sorts of charity in the world, and which the greatest, is hard to say. We are bound in compassion, to help the poor to live, and the rich to enjoy ; who feel a pain peculiar to themselves, that of being mocked by abundance, which denies them their expected happiness ; happiness in proportion to their purse. All I learn from such ardent lovers (for such generally they are) is, that it is dangerous to dip into most men below the surface, lest our curiosity should rob us of our good opinion of them. Much decorum, little homage, is requisite. My whole life tells me, that a just demand for esteem is sacred, but rare. We may well afford to pay it, when it is due : Nor must our love be with-held, where it is not. Universal love enjoined, is designed as an antidote against reciprocal contempt ; and as a discipline to human pride, which must stoop to love men in their infirmities and faults : Nor is it more our duty, than our prudence ; how else could we hope quarter for our own ; which both tell us of others faults, and bid us forgive them. For many of them we should not suspect, but from the whispers of their parallels in our own bosoms. And therefore, by not forgiving them, we condemn ourselves. If, then, we would be forgiven by ourselves, or others, we must forgive. A truth for which I thank my present Review.

What I like least in this survey, for fear it should prove our own case, is this ; I find old men apt to think well of themselves, not because they fly vice, but because vice is fled ; repute themselves virtuous, because free from boys offences ; set down impotence for victory ; and triumph, because they have not fought, because they meet no foe. And what makes me even tremble, is, I see some, who, blameless in youth, are overtaken by folly when in years, and (of all sights the most deplorable !) I see them dragged by their white beards into the foulest enormities. Faults which are the natural growth of the distinct periods of life, may meet with some toleration : But the monstrous growth of vices out of season no man spares : Because the hot-beds of Lucifer only can raise crimes, in which nature has no hand.

Heaven avert from us such an end ! for, far from blameless was our beginning. In our early days (called the days of innocence), we had our little villainies ; our vice in miniature : As years and temptations increased, in years less ripe, than in iniquity, we were no petty criminals, criminals, before we were men. We wished, indeed, for wisdom; but what wisdom would have avoided, we made our favourite choice; what wisdom would have chosen, we bid wait till to-morrow. Frequent were our quarrels with our faults; but rarely pushed on to a parting. Pleasure had its charms, and virtue its efforts; and sometimes, in a passion, threw its rider. But triumphs of passion are but short. No rebukes are so powerful as those from our own conduct. Affords not this, then, a strong caution for the future? The distempers of the past periods of our lives are the best antidotes for those to come.

Retrospection informs me, It was, now, open war with our enemy; now, perfect peace: How easy sin sat on our hearts; and called itself spirit, wisdom, any thing but what it was? When some merciful discipline awak'd us from our trance, we fought; and we conquered: But what was our conquest? Such as rather marred our wrong enjoyments, than wedded us closely to the right. We called the right our beloved, our spouse; but often committed adultery against it; thus losing the joys both of the sinner, and the saint: So motley a creature is man; as mutable, as God is fixed. Ours, indeed, was no uncommon case: But others faults are not our absolution. An absolution it is, however, with which many are content: Though his Holiness could scarce give his saints one more ineffectual and vain.

Who is he, my dear friend, that can absolve us, or condemn?—Look through thy whole past life, and answer. What year, nay, what day, has passed unimpowered to vouch for his clement, and absolute reign? See I not, in numberless instances, the naked hand of Providence stretch'd out, as it were, on this side the clouds, pointing us to good? Now, shewing how little this world can give, by pouring on us the full enjoyment of it; to turn our hearts on a better. Now, shewing us, by the calamities of others, how much we may suffer in this world; to keep us in awe, though ourselves were unhurt. Now, breaking to pieces all our own schemes, and raising our happiness out of their ruins; to teach us humility, gratitude, and on whom to rely; shewing us, that most of our triumphs are errors; and our disappointments, escapes. Now bringing us, when most secure, to the brink of the grave; to repress presumption. Now snatching us from it, when past all human help; to kindle devotion, and forbid the pain of despair. Now defeating us in spite of all our wisdom; now blessing us in spite of all our folly: blessing, to sweeten life; the contrary, to wean us from it: and thus, in both worlds to provide for our welfare, as far as the nature of humanity will admit.

What a glorious image of Divine goodness is this? The wisest cannot pay half its due in their highest opinion, nor the best in their profoundest acknowledgement, of it. And can we not shew as inglorious a portrait of human weakness in ourselves? How are our two different paths of life equally strew'd over with follies? with follies thick as autumn leaves! but not thick enough to hide our faults: So numerous both, that I am quite disinclined to look longer backward; and hasten, for refuge, into some change of thought. And here, shall only add, that man overlooks the most instructive book in his study, if he reads not himself.
only

And now, I fear, you will say, that how useful, and natural, soever Life's Review may be, yet you can find but little pleasure in it. In it there is no pleasure to be found, but what has cost us some pain; but what we have fought our way to, through nature's perverse byas, and besieging temptations. Unbought pleasure is not the growth of earth: This is a militant state; nor must man unbuckle his armour, till he puts on his shroud: For the most victorious veteran may meet with a defeat. Nothing in Life's Review can give delight, but what we may call our trophies, or spoils taken in war. All else is vanished as a dream.

What have I said? vanished as a dream!—Would to God it was! 'tis not! Far from it! Every moment is immortal! Every moment shall return, and lay its whole freight, nothing lost, its every whisper, every thought, before the Throne: the throne of Him who sent it to man on that commission; and commands it back, at the stated day, to make its report; to be registered in eternity, for the perusal of angels, and the justification of their King. Tell our gay triflers, that there is no such thing as a trifle upon earth. Can any thing be a trifle that has an effect eternal? Tell them, though they are so well assured, that there is nothing serious upon earth, that time, to man, is, in some respects, a more serious season than eternity: that his eternity is absolutely the creature of time: that 'tis foul, or fair, rejoices, or laments, as time, omnipotent time! (that trifle which they throw away) ordains its fate. If they doubt it, let them ask their jovial companion, who died of their happiness last night.

Many, my friend! have made a worse, many, a better, use of time than we have done. Many have been more criminal; many, more innocent. But most men imagine that innocent, which has a negative guilt. An idle day is a guilty day, in a life so short and precarious; with more than human thought can carry, incumbent on it. There are not more spots in the sun than in the life of a saint.

What then are we?—O my friend! at half a glance through life, I perceive, that, though we have made a shift to creep out of the Augean stable, yet have we not scaled the temple of virtue: though we made the choice of Hercules, yet we wanted his strength: though we, sometimes, lopped one head of the Hydra; yet, too often, seven shot up in its stead. Whereas, on the contrary, they that have been long tossed by folly, when once landed on a good life, should burn their ships; as Cæsar once burnt those of his legions on the British coast: I mean, that the warmest resolution should destroy the very desire of embarking in ill; and so render a return impracticable.

Such then, being our feeble attempts, so slender our pretence to wisdom, it becomes us to give those, whom we have so freely treated, their revenge. To confess, that, though we are not quite *horizontal*s, yet neither are we quite upright; and, though we have set up for reformers; yet are we not, altogether, men.

A man,

A man, my friend! is a glorious being; a great rarity; there are but few to be found. A man is an exalted character, doubly great; he is an hero, and a king. Few kings are so great, as to reign over their own hearts. Few heroes so victorious, as to drive dominions, principalities, and powers, before them. Both these meet in a real man: He ranks, in reality, but a little lower than the angels: nor long, so low. — O friend! man is a wonderful being! Anon, I will tell thee what thou art; and (mark what I say), I will surprise thee with thyself.

At present, only this. — Dare we say, that we are arrived at the character I have mentioned? No. Dare we say, it was not in our power? No. — Why then this cowardice in a possible hero? Why this disloyalty to himself, in a possible king? Whence this reproach to reason, and immortality? Whence this inglorious, and absolute desertion from our godlike selves? Sounds that too high? — In whose image were we made? I foresee your objection; I grant that image is impaired: but I quit not my point; I dare affirm, that beings which are free, rational, and immortal, may be gods in due time, through Divine Grace, if they please.

How deplorable our distance from it? Whence this unmanly defect? Know we not that, unless our conduct is that of a man, it had been better for us, if in a lower species had fallen our lot? Why were we called into being? What we have enjoyed already poorly pays our mother's pain, and our own. Wouldst thou repeat thy part in the comedy? act it o'er again? Wouldst thou be rejumbled in this rough Thespian cart, dragged on by those two skeletons, half-starv'd hope, and panting expectation, through bad roads, now worse and worse, and thy fellow-strollers in a constant conspiracy against both thy pay, and thy applause; how well soever thy part is performed; how great soever thy indulgence is to them?—Thou wouldst not. Here and there, indeed, we might pick up a lucky hour, alboque notanda lapillo, that might make us smile again. But nature, and indeed, reason, starts back at the whole. If we should find a small pearl in one oyster of a million, it would hardly make us fishers for life.
 L 5 those

Wouldst thou, then, cease to be?—No, nature shudders at it. That horn of the alternative wounds more than the former: If so, our wishes, as well as our nature, push us into eternity. And shall we fear, what we wish? Fear it we must, unless we provide a good reception there. We have provided for to-morrow, and to-morrow was not satisfied. If we provide for eternity, our satisfaction will be full. We have provided for many years; for more than we shall ever see; but not for those which will never end.

How great the dishonour, my dear fellow-criminal! in us, who were not blind to the grand futurity, were not cold to the divine rewards; to let the glowing thoughts of immortality so far mingle with the dregs of sense? Is not this, with the wings of an eagle, to drop into the mire? There lies the pleasure of which the world is so fond; that bane of private property, that presage of public slavery, that sure annihilation of a rational creature, and as sure a creation of a wretch eternal. Pleasure has robbed earth of more lives, and heaven of more

more souls, than the body collective of all other evils discharging their whole quivers on man.

Our weakness, and our security under the consequences of it, is no uncommon case. Blushing I look round for its fatal cause. And do I not find it, where if found, it must increase my confusion? Do I not find it in the great goodness of God? If so, how must that reproach and brand the deep ingratitude of man? And, I think, I find it there.

The GENERAL CAUSE of SECURITY
in SIN.

FOR, consider, my good friend! what can he do that ventures to continue in sin? He cannot defy the wrath Divine; that is not in man. He cannot acquiesce under the terror of its consequence; he must therefore presume on Divine mercy. “I know myself “worthless, yet earth pours its blessings. I know my“self worthless, yet heaven buys me with its blood.
“What is to be feared, what is not to be hoped, from “such a God? Be my crimes what they will, some yet “unrevealed expedient will be found for my safety.
“For God is Love.” Thus, possibly, he may reason: and thus, at once, do two strange things: cite Scripture to his ruin; and make the mercies of God fatal to man.

God, indeed, is love: but shall man therefore be a monster? And a monster in the judgment of all men? All confess that there is an admirable consent between the precepts of virtue, and the sentiments of our common reason. All confess, that virtue receives a constant approbation from the uniform verdict of our consciences. All confess, that virtue practised, brings in the greatest happiness to society : He, therefore, that is not virtuous, can give himself no satisfactory account, why he was born either with reason, or conscience, or a desire of happiness : since he has nothing of what they all demand from him. And, therefore, he must appear an unaccountable being ; that is a monster, not only to others but himself.

This is more than enough to make vice our aversion, though God were love to that absurd degree, which our folly may fancy, and which our vice most certainly wishes, and wants. But there is no such love in Him : It is blasphemous to suppose it. God is love, and therefore—what ? That which many may least expect—therefore God is terrible : From whence arises his marvellous love to man ? Of man He has no need ; the Divine happiness is complete : in man He sees no merit ; He knows we are worthless, as well as we ourselves : But then, far better than we, He knows that we are—immortal. That therefore (most interesting, and most alarming thought !) that therefore, we must suffer, or enjoy, for ever !

Hence, be most assured, my friend ! his regard for man. Hence, for a worm, to-day crawling out of the earth ; and to-morrow more despicably still, crawling into corruption ; his compassion, his solicitude, his councils held on high ; and all the wonders of his love. Wonders ?—much more than wonders to man ; they are wonders in heaven ! They strike with amazement the first angels of light.

Consciou

Conscious of thy own meanness, canst thou scarce believe that Divine indulgence should thus abound? Consider: God, indeed, called us out of the dust. But He called us into an eternity: An eternity, henceforward, commensurate with his own: And shall not his concern be commensurate in degree, bear a proportion to his gift? Shall not one shew as much of the Great God as the other? As He has made us immortal; He has made us also endangered, creatures. Creatures that must, necessarily, stand the most important, and incomprehensible consequence of their own doubtful conduct for ever. Does not this abate thy surprize at such abundant indulgence? It must, if God is love, and vouchsafes to look on us in the mentioned light. In that light He looks on us. Thence his more than paternal bowels of compassion for the most unworthy of men. Thence his omnipotence exerted in giving proofs of his love.

But why, sayest thou, is this love terrible? Is not that love most terrible which tells us we are in danger of being eternally undone? And this love tells us so; for (as I conceive) it never had existed, had not that been our case.

How deep then, and deplorable, is their mistake, who presume to sin, because God is so good; when God is so good purely because He knows that presumption will be their ruin? Who presume on impunity for sin, because God is so good; when God is so good, purely because He knows that sin, and impunity, are incompatible? Such men make a demonstration of their danger, the basis of their security; and fear nothing, because an Omnipotence, that is solicitous for their welfare, fare, gives proof that He is apprehensive of their destruction.

Such men reason ill. Still worse, experience cannot convince them. What their experience of every day, every hour proves to be true, they will not believe: They doubt, if they shall be (not to use a harsher word) condemned for their sins. Yet they know that they shall die. Now, as I take it, their death is a prelude, and assurance, of their future condemnation: for, if beings, originally immortal, die for another's sin, can it be doubted, but that they shall be condemned for their own? And that death (which is a demonstration that sin shall not escape unpunished) is unavoidable, they are convinced by their senses: Unless our Centaurs, therefore, lay aside their senses, as well as their reason, for the future they must forego vain hopes too frequent, and too sanguine, among them: nor longer turn a proof of immortality into a presumption on impunity; Heaven's indulgence, into destruction; and gather poison from the tree of life.

I know not, my friend! if others have urged these arguments, with regard to the cause of God's great indulgence to man, and the certainty of punishment for sin; but to me they appear of a very weighty and affecting nature. There are some truths of the last moment to men, which, at first aspect, have somewhat surprising in them: they require, and well deserve, our second thoughts.

I will give you two; one from Scripture; one from my own thoughts: "With the Lord there is mercy, there- fore.

“fore shall He be feared.”—With man there is immortality, therefore shall He tremble.—Tremble at himself! Tremble at his own power, which can give what colour he will to a whole eternity. Tremble at his own glory; that he has angels for his guard; and an Almighty for his friend. Yes, tremble at all that might incline him to triumph: for these grandeurs, that inspire presumption, increase danger: are magnificent assurances that he may be plunged beyond hope; be lost past retrieve.

God, indeed, forbids our despair: but not because his love will save us in our sins; but because despair stops all effort at amendment; and without it his love desires our welfare in vain. His love is such, as to give us encouragement, and support, in every thing, but sin: such as to support our spirits amid the ruins of a falling world; but not under the cloud of one unrepented guilt.

This flings light on a part of Scripture, which has a cloud on it in some eyes; and with others quite ruins its credit: Work out your salvation with fear, and trembling: A strange text to those, who fear and tremble at nothing so much as at a disappointment in their lusts. Our salvation must be worked out: Wishing, and willing, will not bring it; hoping, and confiding, will not procure it; it will not come by chance; no, nor by gift, and infusion. It must be worked out with fear; because fear is the strongest guard of diligence, without which, this work cannot go on; and with trembling, lest we should fail in this important work; lest we should think too lightly of the Divine justice; and lest our very confidence should betray us, even though we were good men:

men: for good men have failed purely from a good opinion of their own state. For a good opinion begets security; security begets negligence; and negligence, temptation; and temptation, a fall: and (if unrepented) a fall into that state, where our first wish will be, that we never had been born; and (worse still!) where there is no last. Pain is sometimes so great even here, that we lose our senses; there it will be far greater; and (how terrible to say!) our senses will not be lost.

THOUGHTS for AGE.

ON the bank of that state we, now, stand: That post of wisdom, if ever men are wise: which is the reason why they wish it may be long before they arrive at it: for folly is the favourite of mankind: And is it not our own? Though there we stand, we scarce believe it; so much our wishes obstruct our belief: or, believing, scarce know what being there means; so much familiarity takes away our attention; and robs things of their power to strike strong on our minds. Eternity has so often passed our lips, that it has forgot its way to our hearts. Did it enter there, would it not extinguish every earth-born passion in them? Yes; as the sun, the smallest spark of fire.

Though we stand on its awful brink, such our leaden byass to the world, we turn our faces the wrong way; we are still looking on our old acquaintance, time; though now, so wasted and reduced, that we can see little more of him than his wings and his scythe: our age enlarges his wings to our imagination; and our fear of death, his scythe ; as time himself grows less. His consumption is deep : his annihilation is at hand.

his

Should we not then turn us round, and look on eternity ? That glorious home of all that survives, and outshines the sun ; that kingdom of souls immortal ! Of immortal souls, time is only the maturing womb ; from eternity they wait their real birth. Are we, my friend ! matured ? Or shall we prove abortive to the world of glory ? If we were mature, why tarry here so long ? By protracting life, Heaven shews not its favour to those that are fit to die. Is not, the business of our day undone, the cause why we are suffered to sit up so late ? To be so long on our weary legs, after the common hour of human rest ? I fear it is. I much fear we are permitted to live, purely because—we do not deserve it.

Is it not, (my languid fellow-traveller in the deep vale of years !) high time to be wiser ? lest the greatest of curses should fall on us, that of being wise too late : Which is the most emphatical definition of a fool. The world is worn out to us ; and we are worn out to the world. The world, which knows its own interest, quits us, as rats a ruined house ; if we knew ours, should we not quit the world, as bees an exhausted flower ? We can make no more honey of it ; its sweets are gone. Where are its formerly sweet delusions, its airy castles, and glittering spires ? Are we not left on a lonely, barren, briery heath, to grope out our weary way, through the dusk of life, to our final home ? Shall not the dissolved enchantment set the captive free ? Are we Torrismond's or Sudbury's ? Shall our dotage rivet our chains, when kind nature would knock them off ? To speak a language

language even Centaurs may understand, "A last card, well played, may yet win the game?"

Consider; are we scheming still? Stretching out a trembling hand, which wants to be supported, to grasp at the nothing that comes next? Any thing now gained would rather mock, than enrich us; can any thing enrich, that cannot be enjoyed? Grasp at new faculties, and new powers, if thou canst find them, or new objects will only laugh us to scorn. But hadst thou even those, if the value of things is in proportion to our term in them, their price at our market should fall very low.

It is a good thing to know when we have all, and to laugh at that cheat more, which is ever stealing our hearts. But it is as uncommon, as good. Hence, seniors are milking the world after it is dry. Is it not a shame that we should be gleaning sublunary straws, when our harvest of life is over? hoping an after-crop in our stubble? Though called to diadems, where harvest is perpetual; where an harvest, more than golden, profusely crowns an eternal year?

As to the pass which is so much feared; the dark, subterranean entry to future life; into which our weak imagination peeps, and starts back, as a child at a shadow; all thanks to the blessed Gospel, we know what will light us up a lamp in it, and lessen its formidable gloom. I have seen a death-bed, the reverse of poor Altamont's, where the by-standers were the greatest sufferers; and the king of terrors, by christian patience, was over-matched. The power of religion shone out without a veil; nor could any rising suspicions of hypocrisy crisfy dim its lustre. In such scenes as these the human heart is no longer invisible to man; and a glimpse of heaven is discovered in such a sight.

We know what can make us sleep sweetly in the dust: what can smoothe the rough transition; soften death into a sort of translation, which interrupts not (blessed be God!) our existence; nor our peace. In peace have many died; and, therefore, it is certain, all may. The whole secret for obtaining that peace is an absolute resignation to the most High; which (as hard a task as it seems to some) at the bottom is no more than owning him to be God. And a contrary conduct (as little as it is considered) has atheism, partial atheism, in it. It is questioning some of his attributes, though not denying a God. May that peace be thine! My heart beats with ardor for thy present peace, and future bliss. May I share it with thee! What a poor broken embrace, what a sad fragment of friendship, is that which ends at the grave? Such a transitory tie gives a second dart to death; and a double dissolution to departing man. That of soul and body scarce more severe.

Would to heaven! that all friendships were, evidently, friendships of immortal men. Such, I mean, as gave proof of their having each other's eternal interests at heart. Modern, at least, fashionable, friendship flows from a polluted source; it tastes too strong of earth; without the least tincture of man (as above described); without the least spirit of immortality in it. Nay, worse; it often springs from causes that will not bear the light; and resembles the dark streams of Alpheus, and Aretbusa, that that mingle under ground: it should rather resemble Eridanus, which is said to flow from heaven.

How many have we of these subterranean attachments? What is it ties our Centaurs together in so long a string?—Leaping together the same barriers of the decent, and the just; ranging the same forbidden grounds; gorging at the same manger; neighing the same inflammatory tune; or being daily rid, and sorely galled, by the domineering insolence of the same inflamed mistresses.

Since such their accomplishments, I hope to levy a Lapithean infantry sufficient successfully to carry on the war now opened against them.—As Chiron blew the trumpet which called the Greeks to the siege of Troy; I hear there is a modern Chiron, who sounds as many instruments, as Nebuchadnezzar did to summon his idolaters; and that he raises forces, and ceases not to carry on the war, at a vast expence. Doubtless he was typified of old by him who is said in Virgil;

Ære ciere viros, martemque accendere cantu.

For my own part, my friend! I fancy my campaign will soon be over. I have frequent pains: and, I think I hear the Master call. If so, should we not leave this world, though not yet admitted of the next? Have we not been, through life, anxiously providing one year for the next? And shall we grudge to pay half that pains for an eternity?

Consider, my immortal friend! should we not leave the world, before the world leaves us? It is dismal to be be left. There is a noble absence from earth, while we are yet on it. There is a noble intimacy with heaven, while we are yet beneath it. If our affection flies thither, we shall be welcomed by superior beings, and not be missed by men, who delight in novelties; or, if missed, admired the more for being once in the right. They must be somewhat out of this world, who would be deep in the concerns of the next: and is it not time we should be so? Till the business of life (as it is called) is over, its real business is rarely begun: nor always then. Age is apt to carry its allowed title to repose too far: age is the most busy period of human life. But its transactions are not with men. Therefore that absence above-mentioned is most fit for us. It is a sort of a third state between this world and the next. How proper then, for the reception of those, whose term is out, here, according to the common age of man.

And can it be hard for us to lay this world aside, since they that have fared best in the world, have only the fewest objections against it? Is it not an old tragi-comedy read over and over, which by no means, — Decies repetita placebit? Juv.

To speak in the licentious stile of comedy, man is a mule, of mixed origin, of heaven and earth: earth has had more than its share of us; give heaven the rest: and that for a double reason. All know that hope is life's cordial: it works miracles; without happiness it makes men happy. What have been all the pleasures of our former years, but joyous prophecies, and bold promises in the name of to-morrow? Worldly hope in age expires.

If

If he provides not another hope, a man of years, and a man of misery, mean the same thing. Therefore the same steps are to be taken whether we would sweeten the remaining dreg of life, or provide a triumph for eternity.

The worldly wishes, which an old man sends out, are like Noah's dove; they cannot find whereon to light, and must return to his own heart again for rest. His natural, and, perhaps, most allowable and proper wish is for respect. But respect for age is a virtue. I need say no more to convince him, how little of it he must expect: and, indeed, he but ill deserves it from others, who, by doating on the world, denies it to himself.

When infirmity drives the world from us, or disease confines us to our chamber, shall we not be all alone with the great Father of spirits, and Searcher of hearts? Is it not worth while a little before-hand to practise our lesson, that we may be the better prepared to sustain such an interview? Our wisdom cannot add to the days, but it can lighten the burden, of life; and lessen the terrors of death. Death forgot in youth is folly; in age, madness. With regard to that king of terrors, how many in years borrow the security of youth; for it is impossible it should belong to them. Happy they! whom death, when he comes, shall find at home; his visit will have less of terror in it. Out of pure decency to the dignity of human nature, of which the decays and imperfections should not be exposed, men in years, by recess, should fling a veil over them, and to the world be a little buried, before they are interred.

An

An old man's too great familiarity with the public is an indignity to the human nature, and a neglect of the Divine. A greater intercourse with it than the calls of duty and virtue demand, is indecent, irreligious, and contemptible; speaking acquiescence in contempt, dotage on the world, and oblivion of eternity. His fancying himself to be still properly one of this world, and on a common foot with the rest of mankind, is, as if a man getting drunk in the morning, after a long nap, lifting his drowsy lids at sun-set, should take it for break of day.

But grant him to be still of this world; grant him all it can give; what is this world, but a machine played on us by our great enemy for the dissipation of human thought, whose scattered rays must be collected, as it were, to a focal point, in order duly to warm our devotion; and set a pious heart on fire? And can any happiness subsist in age without piety? Impossible! Its intimacy with the world, is not for the pleasures it can give; they are past; it is purely to dislodge the thoughts of death, which intrude at that season; that is, it is purely to decline the pleasures of heaven.

Why, my friend! is our day of trial extended beyond the expiration of the common term? Is it not indulged to the great need our past conduct has of it? And shall our folly reverse the kind intention of that Divine indulgence to us? Shall it set us farther from our God? I am never so strongly struck with the weakness and depravity of man, as when I see grey hairs playing the fool. Hope, which in other evil appearances ances supports our spirits, fails us there. What can shock common sense, what can create amazement, if not the failings that would dishonour youth, in those that are miraculously alive after the stated period of human life? This is an outrage to reason, beyond the boldness of the desperado that confounds us most: this out-dares the felon repeating his crime, not only under the gallows, but with the cord about his neck. Where is that world into which you and I were born? It is under-ground; and a generation of strangers are dancing over our coevals long since in the dust. Where is that world into which we shall be born? Far, far above the sun, if, while we are beneath it, we behave ourselves like men. But if this life was our only concern, consider, that nothing but being wiser, that is better than those born after us, can possibly rescue the decays of age from aversion and contempt.

Fain would I have my pen of some service to the aged, now my nearest relations, those of blood, are no more. To the former am I related by like date, duty, interest, and above all — Nunc ipsa pericula jungunt.

Ov.

Still eager in worldly pursuits, warm in the chace of shadows, shall we rush, as down a precipice, and leap plumb into the jaws of extempore death?

No, let us halt in our career; pause on the brink; and provide for our eternal peace. Can I better express my love than by pressing it on thee? I press it strongly. And know, my friend! that Heaven, and

(as

(as I have shewed thee) a most indulgent Heaven, joins my pathetic wish ; and angeis, ardent angels, say Amen. And what want they ? (mark it well), they want nothing but thy own concurrence to crown their wishes for thy welfare.

Dear Sir,

Yours.

LETTER IV.

The DIGNITY of MAN.

The CENTAURS RESTORATION
to HUMANITY.

The DIGNITY of MAN
Resumed.

The CONCLUSION.

LETTER IV.

The Dignity of MAN.

The Centaur's Restoration
to HUMANITY.

The Dignity of MAN
Resumed.

The CONCLUSION.

L E T T E R VI.

The DIGNITY of M A N.

HERE, Sir, I enter on that elevated theme, The Dignity of Man.

Major rerum mihi nascitur ordo. V I R G.

I shall scale the summit of human nature, and set its dignity in the strongest light; that the contrast may strike our Centaurs with a just sense of their own ghastly condition; and more clearly demonstrate the depth of their fall. Many are for degrading their nature, that they may lessen its duties; and for looking on themselves as beings insignificant, that they may be profligate beings with a better grace; and (as they would flatter themselves) with more excuse. They run voluntarily into this error, as men run into the dark, that they may sin without a blush; framing a lie (which is the common case) for their apology. Their master Epicurus meant much the same, by setting the gods at such a distance! and for their repose, exempting them from the trouble of inspecting the trifles of men. A due sense of the grandeur of man's nature, and destination, is his best bulwark against the frequent and violent assaults temptation makes on him. This is a subject which I wish had been taken into better hands. For, as it demands all the powers of the noblest pen to reach its heights; so the world stands in need of having this, above all other, pressed home on their hearts; for all other of any great moment are implied in it. There are but few, whose opinions do not too much widen the distance between an angel, and a man. I shall bring them nearer together, as the best means for the reformation of *Centaur*s (as you shall see), and for the most noble exaltation of men.

I have just now observed, that—"Angels want nothing but thy own concurrence to crown their wishes for thy welfare."—This is true: Shall I not then be pardoned, if I presume to put the same meaning into somewhat an higher stile, and say (with all reverence) that heaven's desires are at thy mercy?—If so, think, and think again, What art thou? Thou poor, feeble, earth-born, mortal! What art thou?—Darts not on thee a stream of heavenly light? Dost thou not see an amazing majesty in man? Have I not then, made my bold promise good? Did I not, above, tell thee, I would surprize thee with thyself?

Nor can I rest here. A man is almost more than man can conceive; a marvellous being that rises above himself, darting rays of glory beyond the reach of his own sight. My heart is tied to this endearing, transporting, and triumphant, theme.

Is thy consent necessary to finish what is begun, or rather, only designed, above? How strangely this sounds! Yet must I proceed in a still higher strain —

In

In thee it is, (how seemingly bold, and impious so to speak ?) Yes, it is in thee, to grant, or deny, the request of the Almighty.—And impious, indeed, it would be, if unauthorized by Scripture, in which that request is made.

A requesting Omnipotence?—What can stun, and confound thy reason more ? What more can ravish and exalt thy heart ; it cannot but ravish and exalt ; it cannot but gloriously disturb, and perplex thee, to take in all that thought suggests. Thou child of the dust ! thou speck of misery and sin ! How abject thy weakness ? How great is thy power ? Thou crawler on earth, and, possible (I was about to say) controulér of the skies !

Weigh, and weigh well, the wondrous truths I have in view : which cannot be weighed too much : which, the more they are weighed, amaze the more : which to have supposed, before they were revealed, would have been as great madness ; and to have presumed on, as great sin, as, it is now madness and sin, not to believe. Such precious, and beatifying news is brought us by revelation ; that revelation which is rejected, and despised, by those that affect to be thought wiser, and happier, than the rest of mankind.

The truths, I mean, are implied in what follows ; viz. Heaven intends, desires, labours, works miracles, or more (if more can be), for thy welfare : it presses thee, it importunately presses thee, to comply. Consider ; how art thou courted ? And by whom ? By Father, Son, and Holy Spirit ; thy fellow labourers for thy good. How is thy alliance fought ? And at what price ? Angels, inspecting, admiring angels, cannot compute its value. An extreme of love, an extreme of glory, this, which those angels (if angels could envy) might envy to man: for was it not denied to them?

Thou younger, but darling son of heaven! wonder; tremble; triumph!—Yes, triumph; tremble; wonder! thy greatest emotion falls short of the mighty cause. Thou greatly beloved, greatly favoured, greatly destined, and, oh! greatly endangered! take heed to thy steps: nor less take fire at thy prize.

Art thou more exalted, or terrified, at what I say? Exultation and fear both rise in extremes.—With both passions comply; highly reverence thy own nature; more profoundly adore the Divine. Adore it with voice, heart, and life: and thus to glad all heaven, assert, rescue, ennoble, and with bliss eternal crown thyself: for without thee, in the constituted order of things, heaven is unable to do it. Its almighty hand is, as it were, tied up by its own decree. Without thee, thou amazing being! (pardoned be the word so bold) there is impotence in heaven. Nor is it bold when explained; for impotence when voluntary, is no impeachment of power.

Is all this rapturous?—Yes, such a rapture, as nothing but gross ignorance, or more fatal infidelity, can forbear. Is not rapture due for felicities inexpressible? And what felicity is so much as second to this? It is the close, frequent, and feeling, inspection of these interiora of man's sublime condition, as immortal, and redeemed, that is the highest cordial of human joy; and the richest mine of human thought. A mine deep-dug by few!

few ! and yet without it, man is not more a stranger to the natives of Saturn, than to himself. Without it, he must want the true, genuine, vital, spirit of a Christian. None without it can be filled with the light and comfort of the Holy Ghost. This, O yet Methodists ! gives the real new birth : this enters man in quite another world. In his former world all things, are absolutely changed : well nigh annihilated as to his wonted passion for them.

The heavens declare the glory of the Lord, and the firmament sheweth his handy-work. But the christian mine I have mentioned, infinitely more demands our adoration and praise : infinitely more demands our exultation and joy. Are we transported, and justly transported, at the wonderful operations of nature, and decline we the contemplation of greater wonders in ourselves ? And when the former but amuses an hour, the last blesses an eternity ? In those stupendous views, it is, that the mercy of God, and glory of man, at highest shine. Hence it is, that constant joy is enjoined to Christians as an absolute duty : a duty, on weaker motives, as absolutely impracticable.

You see, Sir, that to dive deep into man, is to dive into an ocean of Love Divine ; which first drowns us in amazement, then lifts us into triumph ; and at length, lands us (if we are wise) on eternal life. But too many swim only on the surface of our nature ; like a feather, through their levity, incapable of sinking to those solid, and shining advantages, those pearls of great price ; those great, awakening, and strongly stimulating motives to virtue, that lie below. But I shall resume this subject before I close. What is already said, is enough to produce that good effect which you will find in the marvellous scene which, very soon, will open on you.

The CENTAURS RESTORATION to HUMANITY.

AT present, my friend! we must quit this consecrated, for enchanted, ground; as you will soon, to your surprize and disgust perceive. I know it is not to your taste, nor, indeed, to my own. But levity has its use, when perverse patients will refuse what is salutary, if conveyed in any vehicle less agreeable to their vitiated taste; and the grave reader, who nauseates it, sacrifices (through too great delicacy) to mere appearances the substance of what is right.

Thou knowest that our Centaurs can scarce be persuaded that they are not still human creatures; though mæchantur, scortantur, adulterantur, diabolantur (I am forced to make words that are bad enough for them); and not so much as retain,

—Veteris vestigia formæ. Ov.

Are they not (to speak with reverence in the language of the Prophet) as fed horses in the morning? Do they not assemble by troops in ladies houses? It is barlots in the original; and so by us translated. But that is not their only objection to the Scriptures. Perhaps, an old Arabian proverb may have greater authority with them. What says it? “Let him that would be safe, avoid seven “ things;

“ things ; wasps, spiders, hyænas, crocodiles, efts, ad-
 “ ders, and fine women.”

Here, then, I shall begin my exorcism. Its words must be strange and barbarous, suited to the occasion. Let not your ear, my friend, be shocked ; but listen, and wait the event.

“ MAY Lais, Thais, Limax, Lupa, Succuba, Qua- “ drantaria, Obolaria, Euriote, Sthenio, Medusa, Erin-
 “ nys, Megæra, and Tyfiphone—May all these, and all “ such ladies, whether sick or sound, high or low, of “ blood and title, or ditch and dunghill ; natives, “ foreign, or infernal—May this glorious group of Tor-
 “ rismond's angels, these gorgons, furies, harpies, leaches, “ fyrens, centaur-making fyrens ! paid or unpaid, keep“ ing or kept, on fire or quenched ; genevaed or citron-
 “ ed, in closet or cellar, in tavern, bagnio, brothel, “ round-house, bridewell, or newgate.—Oh ! may they “ cease from this hour, to sing or dance, smile or frown,
 “ please or plague, pray or swear, our British, unbritish
 “ youth, manhood, and age ; out of their senses, health, “ estates, reputation, human nature, and hopes of “ heaven !

“ And, these enchantresses laying aside their spells,
 “ may the bewitched of Great Britain recover their pris-
 “ tine form, as Circe's herd, at the prayer of Ulysses.
 “ At the touch of my disinchanting pen, may they leap “ out of their hides for joy ; and laying hold on their “ long deserted definition of man, reason and two legs ;
 “ walk uprightly for the future.”

Rejoice with me, my friend ! For do I dream ? or didst thou not observe ? Didst thou not hear ?—Intonuit lævum. As the dark cloud which caused it is vanished, and a flood of light rushes in ; so shall it fare with them. I see their dawning reason ; I see the break of their moral day. And what I see, I shall relate ; and what I relate, though strange, let no man disbelieve.

The Centaurs that can read, on perusal of The Dignity of Man, are stung, as the Trojan horse, when Laocoon's spear pierced his side ; and groan as deeply as that, when Insonuere cavæ, gemitumque dedere cavernæ. VIRG.

Most of them are much affected, but differently ; being, at last fully convinced that they are not men. One burns his Bolingbroke ; another an indecent song : this calls in his bills, pleading privilege no more : that bespeaks a pew against the next quarter : a third blames his delay ; swears he will pray directly ; falls on his knees, like Cæsar's horse,—rises again, with a sigh, and solemn vow, that he will be master of his Pater noster before to-morrow : a fourth subscribes all his gains by false dice to the Foundling Hospital : a fifth orders two little boys to school immediately ; and sends ten guineas to their mothers in bridewell : a sixth, in a flame of pious zeal, damns a senseless world ; and undertakes, in less than a week, to demonstrate that adultery is a crime. A seventh, &c.

But I must not triumph too much. I have not had equal success with the female Centaurs. From a natural constancy of temper, and habitual aversion to change, they they come but slowly into my wishes. But to make amends, when they come, they come with a vengeance, and overshoot the mark. Mr. W—ly (whose converts some of them are) tells them, that they stand not upright, unless they lean a little backward; like a crozier, or like themselves, when they coyly refuse a salute: thus, though converted, they find not the strait line, but stand still a little bent—to the wrong.

Besides, of my male converts, I have somewhat to complain: for some, though changed at heart, yet awed by fashion, and vain of being still fine men, are ashamed to own it; and appear to be fools to save their credit. These hypocrites in vice, these moral fops, ridiculously good, may be called little men in Centaurs skins: or coward virtue in masquerade.

And worst of all, of some Centaurs I am quite in despair. They fly my pen, and will not be touched for their distemper. But, being deep stung by worse than the Tarantula, run mad for music, and dance themselves to death. Others, with Swift (in that respect a Centaur himself) look on the noble quadrupede as superior to the man. Others, on the contrary, approve, and heartily wish a restoration to humanity: but are careless, and indolent. They would, indeed, if a daemon was not in possession, they would be good. But will not be at the trouble of bringing a writ of ejectment, though Sophronius proffers to draw it up for them. The lowest price of virtue is vigilance, and industry; and if it costs us no more, it comes very cheap.

As for those that are truly conscious of their calamity, and heartily desirous of an escape, mark the good effect of the least tendency to goodness; the mighty change, a restoration of the human figure is, actually, begun. But the process is gradual; nature advances, never leaps. They became not Centaurs all at once.
of

Nemo repente fuit turpissimus. JUV.

As evil habits, which occasioned their transformation, were gradually contracted, it is no wonder, that their recovery should prove equally gradual, and slow. One sheds a mane, another drops a tail; and appears only as too closely docked: some wonder to see slender fingers sprouting through hoofs by their penitential tears, mollified into flesh: some, like dancing dogs, continue upright some time? but, tired of that unnatural restraint, drop into Centaurs for life. So dangerous in moral distempers, as well as natural, is a relapse: some quite restored, yet still retain so much of their former nature, that they are apt to trip, if a strong temptation, like a stone, or cart rut, lies across their way: some can scarce believe their good fortune, and fear it is a dream. Others, too sanguine, cry out, brother! to the first man they see; who starts at his new relation, with a hide still sticking at his heels.

What a loud call do I hear among them for things strange, and new? For dresses suited to the human shape; for pleasures suited to the human mind; for bibles, prayer-books, debt-books; for virtuous consorts, faithful friends, and fit objects of charity; for rational improvement and employments: no longer for Newmarket trappings; but for human ornaments. This, however, where the Restoration is complete. Poor Sudbury is still awkwardly hopping on three legs; while others stand firmly firmly planted on half four: one of whom, more learned than the rest, cries out:

Πλέον ἡμῶν παντὸς.

HES.

The rest naturally take it for a pious thanksgiving, and give a loud Amen.

They that are quite recovered, arrayed in decent, plain apparel, not dappled as the morning, with embroidery, or with lace all over lifted like the beautiful Indian as, call a council; and their first manly resolution is to proclaim peace with the Lapithæ, or men of virtue; with whom, from time immemorial the Centaurs have been at war. Chiron bent his bow against them: but of war various has been the fortune between them; till within this last half century, the Centaurs increasing both in numbers and boldness, wearing frontlets of brass on their foreheads, and Horace's Æs triplex on their breasts; and having of late a mighty giant at their head, whose quills, more fatal than the porcupine's, threatened a thousand deaths at once, they began to dream of nothing less than victory complete. But the present reinforcement of their enemies will turn the scale against them. I say reinforcement; for the next step my converts take, is to list into the Lapithæan service, determined to meet their late friends in no friendly sort, under a banner with this motto,

Quid verum, atque decens, curo & rogo, & omnis in hoc sum.

Which promises victory: for they are very formidable foes, who have had the fortitude first to conquer themselves.

As

At the news of their revolt offended Torrismond, burning for revenge, cries, Ha, ha, snuffs the battle from afar, Collectumque premens volvit sub naribus ignem. VIR.

The glory of his nostrils is terrible. And still more abundantly his heroic choler rises on hearing that their first destined enterprize is against Bolingbroke-castle; That delight of his eyes, and defiance of his foes: For he deems it impregnable; because it is moated round with Acheron, and its aspiring, proud battlements threaten heaven.

This castle was built out of the various ruins of many demolished forts of infidelity, pompously put together, faced over with a material more shining than solid; and cemented with untempered mortar. *Sophronius heads the laudable enterprize. The castle is taken as was ancient Babylon. He first turns the general stream of the nation, by the force of strong and solid eloquence, into a new chanel, as Cyrus did the river Euphrates; then entering the castle, and finding the garison turning things sacred to prophane use, and drowned in debauch; obtains a sudden and complete victory; but is a most merciful conqueror: For, instead of putting any to death, he only puts the most sensible of them out of countenance: And to their own darling delights, and boasted glories, instead of the gallies, condemns them for life. Obliging them, however, in acknowledgement of his clemency, to wear yellow cockades impressed with these words, "Be thou a Centaur still!" The bad man's choice includes his punishment.

* An excellent writer in this controversy, now in the press.

The same Scphronius, adorned with his well-deserved mural crown, rescues the character of a late pious, and learned prelate, which the Centaurs boasted Achilles, (who, had dragged, like Hector's body, round the town in the dirt: For the glory of Britain, and for the light, and emulation of posterity, I see it inscribed on a column of adamant; with a Bolingbroke couchant embossed on the base; who now contributes to support (as much as such a feeble Atlas can) that celestial character, which he lately laboured to destroy; proud of his uncircumcised reason; which reason, notwithstanding, had evidently lost its authority with himself: For when that is preserved, sense submits to reason; and when sense submits to reason, reason submits to the revealed word of God. And (since some are in love with words) I must observe, that reason stooped to revelation, is reason still; only reason more reasonable; and its great hazard of error is all that it has lost.

Jura negat sibi nata, nihil non arrogat.) HOR.

And now, my friend! what shall I say on this happy revolution? Shall I not out-boast Augustus? He said of Rome, Latericeam inveni, marmoream reliqui. I, of London, Inveni equinam, reliqui humanam.

Nothing remains but to cleanse the now-deserted stables, and to render them fit for human use; and to persuade suade the she-grooms, who kept them, into some more decent, and less diabolical, course of life; especially my patroness; who for the honour (as she calls it) of my Dedication, has promised to give into my superstition; and to play fair, at least on Sundays, and learn her Catechism, when the masquerades, for the season, are over: Which, out of an unfurmountable regard for their first, and most amorous, and most musical, son, Chiron, she confesses ingenuously, she cannot forbear. For ladies love a Centaur still.

The DIGNITY of MAN resumed.

IT is high time, my friend! to quit this fairy-land, of which, I know, you are heartily tired; and to perform my promise in resuming The Dignity of Man; a theme which my heart affects; and which your conduct, in some measure, inspires. And who can think of it, unimproved? He who thinks of his Dignity, necessarily thinks of his God: And he who values his Dignity, as necessarily, worships, and obeys Him. In a due sense therefore, of human Dignity, our endangered virtue finds her most powerful guard.

Think you that I have carried the Dignity of Man too high? Spare the sacred page. “There, one of “Adam’s seed converses face to face with his Creator.
 “Another is called his friend. He who made the “worlds delights to be called the son of a third. He “who made the worlds even died for the meaneft of “men. The meaneft of men has it within his power
 “to be an heir of the most mighty God, and a joint-“heir

“ heir with the most blessed Jesus.” Absolves not this the boldest stroke of my pen? What can raise our self-estimation so high, what can aggrandize human nature so much, as this?

In heaven’s great, and constant effort for our welfare, is capitally written the Dignity of Man. That is a key to the moral world, and opens, and explains the reason of all God’s, otherwise mysterious, conduct in it. Every step of which is evidently calculated for man’s present, or future, felicity; or both. The long-shining series, the golden chain of all God’s marvellous acts, from the beginning to the close of time, speaks his uninterrupted regard for human nature; and what can more loudly proclaim human Dignity than this? O let it not be said, that Man’s Dignity is declared by all things, but the manners of man!

As distant as they may be thought by the thoughtless, heaven and earth are so near together, so shot (as it were) into one another, that good men are truly foreigners on earth; have their conversation in heaven; are fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God. To speak allusively to the patriarchal vision, good men are angels; only, as yet, at the bottom of the ladder; and some angels are only men made perfect, at the top of it. As a man from an embryo, so differs an angel from a man; what one is, the other soon shall be. Since this is the case (and a most glorious case it is), and since by such multitudes it is either not considered, or not known;

O fortunati nimium, bona si sua norunt!

VIRG.

would

would be no needless memorandum, or improper motto, for all mankind.

But you still have your objection on the whole —
 “Will not raising so high, and dwelling so long on the “Dignity of Man, occasion pride?” No; on the reverse, a due sense of it will necessitate humility. Pride springs from a conceit, which an individual has of his superiority over some others of the same species. The Dignity I speak of is equally the Dignity of all men; and what levels, cannot exalt. It will necessitate humility; because without that, it cannot preserve itself; our native Dignity will die in the result. As for that Dignity which occasions your objection, we have, I confess, too much of it. We have in abundance what may be called lunar great men. Men in themselves opaque; who borrow beams, from their circumstances, or situation; which beams they shew, like the moon, by night: I mean, when ignorance prevails; then the darkened understandings of their admirers give them leave to shine.

These lunar grandees have generally many little surrounding satellites, that help, by their adulations, to gild their opacity. But of such great men, who are forced to assume (as men must plunder, who would be gainers where nothing is due), it must be said, that the greatest of them would be greater still, if they would only please to be a little less.

They only have solar, or self-born, light, who live up to the Dignity of their nature. Their light is not only their own, and illustrious; but inextinguishable,
 and

and eternal. These, as they are the greatest, are also the most humble, of mankind. For they well know, that our grandeur is to be looked for in the love of God, not in the merit of man. And therefore they set it down as a maxim (and a maxim most true, and useful it is), “no man ever thought too highly of his nature, or too meanly of himself.”

Here would I cease. But how hard to get loose from this ever-teeming, all-important, and inexhaustible, theme? It fills with serene joy the superior region of the soul; and denies entrance to the clouds and storms of worldly perturbation, and care. Such the height of its joy, that music, and wine, leave the raised hearts of our sons of delight far, far, below. And yet how is this glorious subject in most minds, by the love of the world, close-compressed, and folded up, as an oak in an acorn, or a man in the womb? To develope, and expand it, how great my desire? In which of its thousand shining lights shall I set it, for our final contemplation of its mighty moment to man?

Man is the most noble study of man. Let him circle the globe, let him traverse the skies; and then, for something more worthy his notice, and admiration, return to himself. To himself he is a theatre immense: And was reputed such, when that theatre had much less to exhibit, than, at present, it can boast; and when it was but faintly illuminated with the glimmering beams of far more feeble lights. The so renowned Know thyself, was nothing but a precept enjoining a close inspection and survey of this theatre; yet that precept, as to its Author, was held divine; and as to its practice, the supreme supreme wisdom of man. That precept is now exalted into an awful command from heaven ; and that theatre is consecrated into a venerable temple ; a temple of the Holy Spirit.

As in some pieces of perspective, by the pressure of the eye, so in this temple, by the pressure, or perseverance of thought, the magnificent prospect is opened, and aggrandized, still more and more ; and opening discovers the full Dignity of Man. In what does that consist ? In the marvellous things the Almighty has done, and designed, for him. And if so, this survey gives at once the greatest virtue, and the greatest blessing, of life. For who can see those marvellous things without an ardent love of God, which is the supreme virtue of man ? And who can reflect on such indulgence past, without an absolute trust in such a friend for the future ; which of man is the Supreme Blessing ?

But this blessing, and this virtue, this glory, and comfort of life, is lost to those to whom this temple is shut. And it is shut to the careless and ignorant ; to the slothful, and unawakened, in the most illustrious theory of the Christian religion. If therefore such men, in what has been advanced, shall find any thing like a key to this yet unopened temple ; and shall enter its sacred, and surprising recesses, and read the wonders of Divine Love in it ; that is, in themselves, in their own condition, and prospects ; if they shall see, and contemplate, the three Persons of the Godhead, before creation, assuming, and through time's whole length, exercising, their separate parts, and provinces of Philanthropy ; and shall behold an innumerable flight of angels for ever on the wing, to receive

receive their commands, and speed away, on various dispatches, for the temporal, and eternal, welfare of man—How should I rejoice? For such a key would be next in value to the key of heaven. It opens the porch, the preliminary scene to it. Therefore have I kept it on the anvil so long; and yet how unfinished at last? May some master-hand accomplish, and multitudes open the yet absolutely unknown scene of their own nature, and blessed destination, with it.

And now, my friend, tell me, how must his love of glory fail; how must his ambition creep, who, after the strong inspiration of such a view as this, miserably confines it beneath the sun? Consider this view, and see how high human nature may soar; then look down on the Centaur, and see (if thou canst bear the sight) how low the sons of heaven may fall? Shall a being whose interests spread so wide as to take in both ends of the creation; shall a being deeply concerned in what was done in the days of Adam, and more deeply still, in what shall be done in the great day of consummation; shall such an expansive, and far-interested, being, with the most sordid, and despicable, self-denial, and the most inconceivably criminal Poverty of Spirit, imprison his stifled thought, and nail down his little heart to the narrow span of this present life? God forbid. If there is the least sense of Dignity, or fear of shame; the least spark of man, alive, let us consider that we are not only the favourites, but the sons too, of heaven, and obey in this our voyage of human life, as Æneas in his from Troy, the Delian oracle,

Antiquam exquirite matrem.

VIRG.

But

But our overwhelming shame, and almost incurable misery, is, that we are so carnalized by our lusts, that our heavenly * mother, in our esteem, has no blessing for us; that a spiritual Paradise, is no Paradise; that it is a Paradise we wish lost; one from which we desire to fall; and to wallow, Epicuri de grege porci, in our beloved mire. And yet what is this spot of earth which so swallows us up, and in its gulph of obscenities extinguishes our love of heaven? Its enchantment is very short. A few days, a few hours, may make us as wise as Solomon. For rest assured, earth's rankest idolater, who now, perhaps, in our flourishing school of infidelity, thinks a wiser than Solomon is here, will, at the close of life, in his aching heart, ask Solomon's pardon for not believing him before.

I believe that wise, and experienced prince, whose wisdom and experience was designed to spare future ages their own fatal experience in folly; and, closing with his last sentiment, the sum of his Divine Philosophy, affirm, that many a philosopher, may justly be reputed a fool; that as there is but one God, one Trial, one great Tribunal, one Salvation; so there is but one Wisdom; that all, which devoid of that, assumes the name, is but folly of different colours, and degrees; gay, grave, wealthy, lettered, domestic, political, civil, military, re-cluse, ostentatious, humble, or triumphant; and is so called in the language of angels, in the sole-authentic, and unalterable style of eternity.

That awful word inspires; and awakens ideas that slept before; it points to heaven; and shews me where

* Gal. iv. 26.

I fail.—Though studious to do it justice, I have wronged my theme. And wronged it much. Somewhat more is wanting to consummate, and crown, the Dignity of Man. What have I advanced? “That man is near to “the blessed angels?” Is he not more?—Yes, most adorable Jesus! man is more; much more. O whither dost Thou call me? Whither dost Thou transport astonished human thought? I scarce dare look up to the summit of such stupendous love. Leave I not cherubim and seraphim below? Ye first-born of light! ye thrones! dominions! principalities! and powers! What do I behold? How awed, and how raptured; with what prostration of heart, what elevation of joy, from this remote region, this lowest vale of the creation, this land of darkness, and shadow of death, look I up through incumbent clouds of misery and sin, and behold—a Man in heaven! In the highest heaven! In union with the Most High! In union with your most adored, and eternal King! And so throned in authority, to you so superior in power, as to make ceaseless intercession for the rest of mankind; not for those whose fall left seats empty in heaven: Oh aid me with your language, with words more than human to praise Him! that Advocate unwearied for his relations (proud language!) for his earth-born relations, and friends, below.

Is not this almost too much for human modesty to mention? For human frailty to credit? For human corruption to admit?—But is it not also far too much for human gratitude to leave unproclaimed, unrefounded, unadored? I go to my Father, and your Father, to my God, and your God. What heart-subduing, thought-overwhelming, man-exalting, words are these? What an amazing, I had almost said levelling, condescension of the Deity ! What an amazing, I had almost said what a deifying, sublimation of man ?

O blessed revelation ! that opens such wonders. O dreadful revelation ! if it opens them in vain. And are there those with whom they go for nought ? Strange men ! in possession of a blessing, the bare hopes of which supported the spirits of the wise, for four thousand years, under all the calamities of life, and terrors of death ; and know they not that it is in their hands ? Or knowing, cast it away as of no value ? A blessing, the very shadow of which made the body of the Patriarchal, and Jewish religion ! A blessing, after which the whole earth panted, as the hart for the water-brooks ! A blessing on which the heavenly host were sent to congratulate mankind ; and sing the glad tidings into their transported hearts ! A blessing, which was more than an equivalent for Paradise lost ! And is this blessing declined, rejected, exploded, despised, ridiculed ? Oh unhappy men ! — The frailty of man is almost as incomprehensible as the mercies of God.

Who then can inculcate too much the Dignity of Man ? For what equally to a due sense of it can inspire a contempt of the world, a fondness for which occasions the madness I deplore ? Indeed a due sense of it, evidently, includes the whole of our duty. It inspires high veneration, and great gratitude, to God, who gave it ; it inspires a reverence for ourselves, which is of utmost moment to our character and peace ; and it inspires a proper regard for all mankind, as equal sharers in it :
Which

Which regard would prevent infinite mischief; and banish half the miseries of life.

This, its universal use, its nature so pregnant of good effects, determined me to the choice of this too much neglected subject. And perhaps, I have now set it in the strongest light. But if not; its importance is such that it should be set in all lights, and from every point that imagination can suggest, and reason authorize, strike, if possible, the degenerate, deeply-sunk, and ever-groveling, human heart. He that looks not on man in the light above, or some light similar, and equivalent, knows not himself; is a perfect stranger at home; his heart wanders an exile from his destined felicity; he deprives himself of the powerful impulse which he so much wants, and which nature denies, and which revelation designed him, for his more vigorous advance in virtue here: and his more sublime ascent in glory hereafter: Which two are the whole of his happiness; all the rest is extrinsic, precarious, transient, and, inevitably, mortal.

And who will dare say, that he who declines, or falls from the noble, and elevating object of contemplation above-mentioned, and the glorious hopes it inspires, into the barren field of amusement, and trifle; or into the bestial abyss of a few years debauch, for his portion; who will dare affirm, that such a wretch differs not as much in reason, and happiness, from the true Christian, as a quadruped differs, in form, from a man? It is not form, but manners, which make humanity. The mould in which we are cast, only says what we should be; nothing but our conduct tells us what we are. What wretches are they who contradict their figure; and accuse nature of having set a wrong stamp on their lying clay? The most despicable, and deplorable being under heaven is a Pagan in a Christian land. He is like a rank growth of poison in Paradise. He confines that thought which should set out at the creation, and travel down with wonder and adoration, at every step, through the countless mercies and miracles of God for man, into nature's final dissolution; and thence launch for a never-ending voyage in a blessed Eternity,—to the nothing of threescore years; and the wretched means of annihilating that nothing, of contracting that span; lust exhausts, luxury overwhelms, and, by heaping on fuel, quite puts out the fire.

Where is that Dignity which reason exacts, and which revelation exalts, in man? In what I have said on that subject, I have, I think done more to our purpose, than he who measures the heavens, and numbers the stars. I have taken (as I conceive) the true measure of Man. That extensive measure rising above the skies, which the Centaur dwarfs down to the scanty span of the brute creation, to the bestia triumphanti; and making (might I so speak) a dunghill of our condition, with the cock in the fable, for a grain of sensuality, spurns the jewel away; the powers angelic, the radiant beams of the divinity, in the real Man.

But while I contemplate his grandeur (so mixt our nature, so great, and little, is Man), I feel his weakness: In mind, and body, I feel his infirmities—Pain, this instant, stops my pen—Stops it short of what I had proposed to say.—It bids me take, while I may, my leave of him I love.—I take a solemn, because, perhaps, a final, leave. It is, at least, possible, we may meet no more. No more in this foreign land; in this gloomy apartment of the boundless universe of God.
of

O Thou! the last, and strongest hold that earth has on me! my friend in Jesus Christ! my rival in immortal hope! and my companion (I trust) for eternity! come to my bosom: Though so far remote, I take thee to my heart. Souls suffer no separation from obstruction of matter, or distance of place; oceans may roll between us, and climates interpose, in vain. The whole material creation is no bar to the winged mind. Farewel.—Through boundless ages, fare thou well. The Dignity of Man, and blessing of heaven, be with thee! The broad hand of the Almighty cover thee: Mayst thou shine, when the sun is quenched! Mayst thou live, and triumph, when time expires!

This cordial duty done, this human debt discharged, my mind is eased, my spirits revive; my pain is less. And when this endless letter is ended, I shall drop thee for the present; and this idle pen, and an idler world (that other feather in the scale of eternity) for ever. He that drops the world, before that drops him, he only knows its real value; and the value of his own soul. And whatever the gaiety of the world pretends to, he only can have a solid, permanent, and uninterrupted joy of heart, who builds it on the rock; on hope of the Divine Mercy. Give a man the world, and give him no more; and his happiness is at an end: The human heart will necessarily feel a futurity, through all the superabundance earth can heap on it: Nothing can possibly give it a peace independent of an hereafter : That point of view in his creation, that purchase of blood in his redemption, and yet in human conduct, that ever neglected All of man.

Ask the last bill of mortality ; ask pleasure's or ambition's triumph most triumphant, what is human life ? Knowledge of the world recommends recess ; knowledge of life reconciles to the grave. Few sufficiently consider how great mercy is implied in the grant of death. With a heart quite disengaged, its cable cut, imploring a smooth passage, and gentle gale, bound for that port whence none returns, I wait the mighty MASTER's call. That call irresistible, which every moment should expect ; which every fool forgets ; every knave dreads ; every wise man welcomes ; and every monarch obeys.

And yet, my friend, some of our few coævals close not altogether with this way of thinking ; but rather seem to judge, that some little degree of precipitation may be laid to its charge. As the dial knows not the hour it points out ; so they, by their infirmities and decays, discover their time of day to all, but themselves. Their desires grow stronger as enjoyments grow more coy. It is somewhat to be feared, that their hearts gravitate, almost as much as their scarce-animated clay ; and take but few, and feeble flights above the level of the world ; though very excellent things are spoken of thee, Thou welcome Haven of Eternal Rest ! Thou delightful Region of inextinguishable Love ! Thou great Goal of Perfection ! Thou bright Meridian of Glory ! Thou boundless Ocean of unrepenting Pleasure ! Thou City of God !

And

And is man invited to this fullness of fruition? And is man importuned to partake the glories of the Almighty? —He that weighs not well this transcendent height of Love Divine, is far from being able to comprehend the terrible depth of human guilt. And what guilt so deep as that of a baptized infidel? A rank heathen rising out of the sacred font, is reason's greatest shock, the deepest wound of rectitude, the blackest brand of earth, the sigh of angels, a second spear in the side of the most Blessed Jesus, and the supreme triumph of the foe to God, and Man.

Most gracious God! in happiness and dignity, how widely distant is man from man? In both, what an immense superiority has the pious believer? Scarce seems of the same species the believing, and apostate, world. To the first, how justly may we cry out, O ye happy sons of the fallen Adam! where is the damage you received from your father's fall? Where are the once lamenting miseries of life; where are the once unsurmountable terrors of death, fled? I discern the Dignity of man, when his carcase is in the dust. I congratulate his happiness while the worm is feasting on him. Rejoice, O ye dead! exult and sing, ye dark inhabitants of the grave! For do I not behold, even in the grave, the comfort of heaven; when, with an eye of Christian faith, in heaven I behold a Man? The Man Christ Jesus? And with transport, and adoration let me resound the lofty language of the prophet,—A man the fellow of the Almighty *.

* Zachar. c. xiii. 7.

The CONCLUSION.

AN D now, my friend ! let us consider how deplorably wretched is that man amongst us, who is deaf to such a voice, and blind to such a sight ? And how criminally wretched is he, if he voluntarily declines them ? If he voluntarily recalls the suspended curse ; obstinately presents disarmed death with his mortal sting again ; and pours out, in his distraction, all the phials of its original bitterness on the days, how dismal and unredeemed, of an apostate human life ? What a formidable revelation does such a man bespeak in lieu of that which brought pardon and peace ? What a revelation of no glad tidings awaits him, when his now-involving cloud breaks, and truth thunders on the dreadfully illumined soul, at the no-distant hour of death ?

It is, indeed, in man's option, which of these revelations he will admit (one he must) ; but it is not in man's wisdom to make the least apology for a wrong option in so plain and important a point. A point how plain ? I shall here just touch on a single proof of the truth of Christianity, which renders any further proof, among proofs innumerable, unnecessary with me, to create and support our Christian faith.

Every thing in the natural world is a proof of a God ; and almost every thing in the moral world is a proof of a revelation. As, in the material universe all exactly corresponds with the previous ideas of it in the Divine Mind ; and in a substantial copy renders legible to man its invisible pattern, in the thought of the Almighty ;
so

so a complete history of mankind (if such could be had) would be little more than the same Almighty's prophetic word in Scripture, materialized into fact. The prophets are more accurate and authentic historians of the future, than the most happy genius, uninspired, can possibly be of the past. And want we miracles for our conviction? The series of Scripture-prophecies accomplished, is the most striking of miracles: It is a miracle not expiring in a transient act; but of great longævity, persisting in a perpetual-increasing weight and validity, through the protracted course of many thousand years. It is a living, growing, permanent, paramount, miracle, lighted up as a lamp of illumination for all ages; that all able to see, might be quite unable to disbelieve; quite unable to retain reason, and, at the same time, renounce belief. For if the Scripture-prophecies are fulfilled, the Scripture is the word of God; and if the Scripture is the word of God, Christianity cannot be false. Shall we reject it as false, when, in the present fate of almost all nations, we are surrounded, and condemned, by a full ocular demonstration of its being true? Let us dispute our own existence, if we would continue of a piece with this.

Where is our natural curiosity? And that, in points which concern us most? Would we know what we are; or what we may, or must be to all eternity? Nothing but revelation can tell us either. So that if we acted on no higher motive than mere instinct, revelation would be precious in our sight. But vice extinguishes not our reason only, but our instinct too, when it would do us any good. Either the strongest instinct of curiosity is extinguished by it, or there is an astonishing, and pernicious self-denial in infidels, if their most natural curiosity is still alive. Revelation was written for our instruction ; and are we too wise to be instructed by God himself? Throw we by unread, and as of no consequence, an unsealed letter sent to us from the Almighty?

In our infidels it is no less than defiance of common sense, no less than hardened impudence to the rational nature of man, to pretend, that, on due inquiry, they want proof of the truth of the gospel. Its proof is not only great, but amazing ; it is not only sufficient to convince, but astonish : Such its accumulated, overwhelming, evidence, so truly marvellous its light, that if rejected, it lays us under a necessity of rejecting reason, and revelation, together. And is not reason obeyed, the sole dignity, glory, grandeur, of gods, and men? Nothing can so much degrade as the violation of reason ; and no violation of reason is equal to a wrong option in this point supreme. Too faint is the strongest colouring of all the severe fables of antiquity, to reach an absurdity so absurd.

That of Circe's Sty, and Chiron's Stud, falls short of the mark. For reason, in those days, had not such powerful motives to combat, or such glaring lights to resist. And guilt blackens, in proportion to the strength of the lights resisted, and the motives overcome.

Since then (as has been proved) if reason makes a man, by ceasing to be Christians, they cease to be men ; by what term shall we call those, whom no term can defame? Let, therefore, your offended sister pardon my parable ;

parable ; and let no honest man, for the future, so far offend propriety, and profane our language, as to join in one abused word such repugnant ideas, as those of the Centaur and the man ; one the idea of a being, horribly rejoicing in the miserable, and mistaken, thought, that this short life, shortened by vice and vanity, is his All ; and that, like the snuff of a candle, it shall go out for ever ; rejoicing to think, that after all his bustle and ambition, he shall only, by his putrid carcase, add rankness to a clod of earth, and defile the dirt : The other idea is that of a being big with humble, but triumphant, hope, of exalting, with his immortal spirit, joy celestial ; of adding melody to seraphic choirs, in ceaseless Hallelujahs to their Eternal King. “ Sing praises, “ sing praises to our God ; sing praises, sing praises to “ our King. Praise him, all ye angels ! praise him, “ all his host. Praise him, sun and moon ! praise him, “ all ye stars, and light ! ” For a fairer light, a nobler star, a more illustrious sun is risen ; the sun of righteousness with healing in his wings ; and all the glories of unbounded creation are outshone by the smallest beam of the gospel ; by the faintest hope of wrath appeased, and eternal life.

Yet this is that light, which some, in their superior wisdom, would extinguish as superfluous to man, and set up the dim taper of their reason in its stead :

O thou worst guide, philosopher, and friend !
Say, for thou know’st, what is it to be wise ?

Ess. on Man.

With equal wisdom, thou mightest imagine the sun superfluous, perfluous, and unnecessary to the material world ; and call on chaos for primæval darkness, as the great blessing of mankind. Say, for, now indeed, thou knowest, is not Lucifer in the list of such benefactors as these ?

Though in this his lordship is quite as good a friend to mankind, as he is a philosopher in his materiality of the soul ; yet I will venture advancing towards that precious doctrine, so far, as to call, without scruple, such sort of imaginations the thoughts of the body ; for from the body's predominance they, necessarily, rise : And that necessity proves the necessity of religion, which they resist : so that such men (which, perhaps, they are not aware of), while, as much as they can, they condemn religion, they commend it too ; they as loudly call for it, as the disease for the cure. For religion is nothing, but an expedient for supporting, against the body's assaults and encroachments, the sacred interests of the soul.

At your request, Sir, in the wide-spread ruins of our faith and virtue, I have taken a slight view of a more melancholy scene, than could be presented by famine, pestilence, or the sword : but, by God's grace, we shall repent ; and not suffer our greatest glory to become our greatest dread ; not suffer our prime and unspeakable blessing, immortality, to render existence the most insupportable curse. What a terrible inversion is this of the high favours of heaven ! This must be the case, when man is all sense : For to sense nothing exists but the present. Our present is so dear, that our future is undone. Strange conduct ; when our step out of life is so short ; and so sure, sudden, and innumerable our accidents in it, that almost every moment assures us, that unless in time we lay hold on our invisible, and, to reason alone, existing God,

God, we shall soon fall from all we held so dear; and that then, not only all our happiness, but all our hope, is at an end.

What is there, O my countrymen! O my friend! O my poor, endangered, immortal soul! what is there, from Adam to this hour, but fully confirms what I say? The world allures us; the world condemns us; he who takes that kind advice, which through his own experience, the world conveys, will despise all its charms. As ignorance teems with infidelity, so knowledge is a fast friend of faith. If we would but know, what we cannot but know; if we would but believe our senses in what passes, and our common records in what has passed; it would not only reconcile us to, but, almost, supply the place of, our Creed; so very natural a growth is the Christian of the man.

As natural a growth of an infidel is a beast: a beast by God uncreated; by Adam unnamed. That defect Adam's meanest son has supplied, by writing C E N-T A U R in the horrid gap, which the bold infidel has made, by the desperate erasure of his christian name.

Is this thought too opprobrious, and a term of reproach?—I will make some amends by a short hint of advice, which may save from reproach the whole length of their lives. “Let not the brute any longer run away with the man, lest something more dreadful should run away with the brute.”

If this advice is refused, as Alexander said of the Persian effeminate army, there are many enemies, but few soldiers;

soldiers; so say I, of this Paphian isle, there are a multitude of people, but a small remnant of men! And of all brutes the most brutal is the volunteer in brutality; the brute self-made; the brute not from the decree, but abuse, of nature; the strange brute-affrighting brute, with the stature, vesture, voice, and face of man; the brute mysterious, irrationally rational, and (with horror let me speak it), deplorably immortal.

Does the Centaur still sound too harsh in their ears? I will so far indulge them, as to change it for slave; and instead of making free with their hides, only rattle their chains. For chains they wear, galling, infamous chains! Till stubborn and wild will, is broken by grace, and reason, no man is free; but madly prefers the heavy burdens of his lust, and the scourges of conscience, to the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

And is it possible that pride should be the growth of slavery? They are proud of bondage, triumph in infamy, and imagine that in their high flights of folly, and riot unrestrained, there is something great. No man is great, till he sees that every thing in this world is little. And of all that is little, that they are the least. Would they know what is greatness? Great is he, and he alone, who makes the whole creation, and its amazing cause, the circumference, and his own true interest, the centre, of his thoughts. Who has strength and steadiness, to weigh in perpetual and equal balance, right and wrong, body and soul, time and eternity, nature and God; and so weighing, to disdain any very anxious thought, for less than the greatest good his limited nature admits, and his all-powerful powerful God has promised to bestow. That God, whose are the pillars of the earth, and who has set the world upon them. Who in his wrath thunders out of heaven, and his adversaries are broken to pieces.

In this, Sir, in giving our supreme good, our supreme effort and concern, in spite of all temptation, lies the greatness of man. Well may it lie in a prudence, such a prudence, as angels cannot exceed. If this is wanting, vain are all other pretensions to greatness, whether of king, hero, or philosopher. And a Cæsar, a Marlborough, a Newton, a Bolingbroke, a fidler, tumbler, and scaramouch, may be thrown together into one promiscuous heap of equal impotence for attaining true greatness. The performance, indeed, of each of these candidates for glory, the multitude may admire; but the performer, at the same time, will be condemned by the wise, as little-minded and mean; nay, as a very fool, in the language of Scripture; that is, in the judgment of God.

You see, therefore, to what titles of renown our fine men, on the strictest enquiry, may put in a just pretence: fool! slave! centaur!—The last is the newest, and (which would be well for them) may be the least understood; but let them chuse which they please. Were it referred to me, their antichristian glory should be quite aggrandized, and shine, like his holiness, triple-crowned with all three.

To that tremendous power, which alone is truly great, and good; in whose favour is all light, life, hope, peace, joy, and salvation; be thanks, praise, and dominion over

over the rebel, fool, slave, and centaur, in our hearts. And may our hearts, thus exorcised, have a lively feeling of the God invisible; and, panting for the rivers of true pleasure at his right hand, abhor the life in vogue; and in faith unshaken, and virtue unfeigned, be confirmed for evermore: nor longer (to the reproach eternal of the present age) let our sins, as well as our situation, proclaim us to be —Toto divisos orbe Britannos. VIRG.

But to damp my rising hope, I know not if another distinction of Britons from the greatest part of mankind, may not have been the glorious indeed, but fatal cause of this most ignominious effect. It is the great glory of God to draw good out of evil. To draw evil out of good is the great infamy of man.

I suspect, that an insolent pride in British liberty, in some measure, inspires British licence of thought, and extravagance of opinion; which as extravagant a practice for ever follows: if so, vice, and infidelity, are as much our national distempers, as the scurvy, or the spleen. Though discretion much befriends happiness, happiness is no friend to discretion. Great blessings intoxicate. Liberty, fraught with blessings as it is, when unabused, has, perhaps, been abused to our destruction. And as British malt, sublimated into the most pernicious liquor (now so much in use), so British liberty, carried into licentiousness, has poisoned and brutalised the British state. By too much exalting our spirits, it corrupts our manners; and that glory of our constitution is the disgrace of our lives. Purely to prove themselves free-men, some

some turn infidels: Hanging themselves would be as good, and, to the public, a less pernicious, proof. Such men should perform a long quarantine ere admitted to the embrace even of a brother. Heaven preserve thee, my friend, from the freedom, and wisdom, and happiness, now in vogue. He is most free who is bound by the laws; he is most wise who owns himself weak; he is most happy who abridges his pleasures; and he is most magnanimous, O ye bold, intrepid, heaven-defying, Britons! who fears his God.

He, indeed, is the most magnanimous, for by that fear he is fortified against all other. And he is by far the most happy! for the Divine Favour, the light of God's countenance is the sun of the human soul, whence all its vegetation of real felicity; and though the world, (which from Him receives all its feeble rays) may greatly shine in our eyes, yet, as wisely may we expect vigorous and vivifying heat from the moon, as any solid satisfaction from it.

But just one word to the busy, ambitious, learned, and gay. Vice and virtue excepted, no man on earth can say, what is good or ill, in as great a tumult and uproar as your passions are, O ye busy! and ambitious! about every thing else: And to love, and labour at, what God commands, and to desire and hope, what he promises, is the single great lesson, O ye learned! and the single true pleasure, O ye gay! of human life.

And now, my friend, farewell. I must trust myself no longer with the pen; for while I think there is a possibility, that, touched by some happy stroke, but one fellow fellow mortal may be raised from a perishing man of the earth, to a blessed immortal, my busy mind perpetually suggests new hints, and my heart knows not how to refrain from pursuing them. The volume grows upon my hands, till its very bulk would defeat its end. New rays of thought dart in upon me, which, like cross lights, confound and perplex each other. Something of this you may have perceived already. Even Centaurs have been human, and I feel the strong tie of humanity, when going to bid them a last, an everlasting farewell. Like one about to leave unhappy friends in the midst of a destruction, which yet, by timely care, they might escape, still, at the moment of departure, some new caution occurs to me, some new exhortation, something unsaid, or not so well said, as it might have been. But now, the adieu must be final. With only this additional, and still more urgent, and to them surprizing, motive for reformation, (viz.) My assuring them, that what I have hitherto, through tenderness, allowed to pass for fable, is actual fact. That the Centaur is indeed not fabulous. That a man without religion is really a beast; and such is he pronounced in Scripture, where it is said that * He also is flesh; that is, is a brute! And, (what should strike them not a little) this is assigned as the reason for sweeping away our degenerate race by the flood. A brute, in truth, he is, with this only difference, that his superior understanding gives him more venom than the most envenomed of serpents; and enables him to do more fatal mischief to himself, and others, than without the curse of reason, of abused reason, could possibly be done. So far therefore is it from satire, that kind admonition is all, which the word Centaur implies.

* Gen. vi.

And as in some words there was once imagined to reside a magic power over dæmons themselves, that opinion might still prevail, if the design of these letters, to the wish of all honest men, could succeed, and the foul nature of the Centaur be cast out by the name. If this should be the fortunate event, these pages would live in the lives of those they shall reclaim. And if so, O Bolingbroke! and you, his applauding idolizers! what to this is that vain immortality which the meanest writers wish, and which the noblest can scarce attain? Praise is an error, where pardon is indulgence; and pardon is indulgence to the brightest parts misapplied. They rather provoke, than please, the worthy mind, by laying it under the disagreeable necessity, and clashing dispositions, of admiring the writer, and disapproving the man. Which, in some sort, is like admiring Nero for his fiddle, when, through his own frenzy, his glorious capital was in flames.

I am, my dear friend,

Nov. 29. 1754.

Truly Yours.

P O S T.

P O S T S C R I P T.

I Received your objections, and thank you for them. I believe every judicious reader will make the same. All I can say, for mitigation of their censure, is, that they who take on them to read lectures in this laughing age, if they wish an audience but moderately large, must have weight enough to make impression on the serious; and levity enough to catch those wanton ears, which, unless tickled by that feather, would continue shut as close, as their silly hearts are to virtue, though an angel should take the chair.

I know you are so kindly concerned for your friend's reputation, that the mixture of levity with solemnity, in these letters, makes you apprehensive of its exposing the writer to censure or ridicule. Yet, how is it possible to write on so dreadfully mixed a subject, as the ways of man, without being agitated by the most contradictory emotions? His follies so fantastically wrong, so ludicrously absurd: His capacities for virtue and happiness, so noble: His vices so shocking: Their consequence so deplorable!—So earnestly desirous I am of waking him from that dream, in which he nods upon the brink of eternal ruin, that if nothing can do it but my own disgrace, my own buffoonery (as perhaps he will think it), I rejoice to fall so low. If he will but laugh with me, at himself, he is freely welcome to laugh at me, as much as he sees cause. It is not his applause, but his welfare, that is sought. Amendment is the point in view. That point unproposed, (and could the * Viscount propose it?) all censure is mere malice, and mere im-impertinence is all harangue ; and entitles a Tully, a Bolingbroke, and a parrot, to just the same portion of our esteem, and applause. Would you, my friend, judge aright of men ? Ask not what they have done, but why ; or their characters will be still in the dark.—But I fear I am setting your judgment of men too right for my own interest ; I must leave it under the power of some partiality, for the sake of your humble servant.

* Lord Bolingbroke.

Pardon one word more. † Centaur is of Greek extraction, and signifies stimulation. May it here prove (as intended) a spur to virtue ; and, most, in myself. Standing in awe of my own pen, may I take the counsel I give : Thus only can I be sure of doing any good ; thus only can I boldly say, without the reader's leave, that I have not writ in vain. Is not this a new expedient for writing to some little purpose ; and an expedient of no small service to the publick, if all our writers would use the same ? Their numbers, then, would be less a nuisance ; and half the nation (blessed change !) would aim at virtue, as well as fame. This, too, might be some sort of apology for those heroes of the pen, who, dauntless at their own danger, with the spirit of a Curtius, for the sake of their dear country, leap headlong into the press, (too hasty patriots !) and perish there.

Vincit amor patriæ, laudumque immensa cupido. VIRG.

† From Κεντῆυρ, stimulare.

F I N I S.

ERRATUM. p. 21. l. last, for immortal, read immoral.

2000,- (1-4)
Mai 85

Young, Edward, 1683-1765

The Works Of The Author Of The Night-Thoughts In Four Volumes

Bd.: 4

London (1757)

P.o.angl. 488-4

urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb10751086-6